MORE VICTIMS BURIED.

Bodies From Stag Canon Mine Can not Be Identified.

DAWSON, N.M., Oct. 28.—By noon yesterday 132 of the victims of the Stag Canon mine No. 2 disaster had been buried. The major portion of the bodies now being recovered are in such condition that they cannot be shipped or laid out in the morgue for public funerals as was the case with the first two score. Health officers are using vigilance to see that the sanitation of the town is not impaired. Rescue men, who bring the bodies from the mine, are subjected to disinfectants after each trip. Bodies are taken to the cemetery directly from the temporary morgue at the mine, and if identification is possible members of the dead miners' families are not permitted to view them.

Danger from fire passed last night when air currents were directed into every room of the workings, and no smoulders were found.

Government mine experts will remain in Dawson for two or three weeks in an effort to determine positively the cause and the nature of the disaster.

The Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Stag Canon Fuel Co. will begin their efforts at once to arrange the affairs of the dead miners' families.

Jealousy will not listen to reason; because it doesn't believe there is such a thing.

WHITE PLAGUE CRUSADE.

Nation Wide Movement to Observe Tuberculosis Day.

Churches, schools, labor unions, fraternal orders and other organizations to the number of 200,000 at least will be asked to join the anti-tuberculosis workers of the country in the observance of the fourth national tuberculosis day, which has been designated for Dec. 7, according to an announcement by the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The movement will be furthered throughout the country by more than 1,000 anti-tuberculosis societies working through various state organizations and the National association. Personal appeals will be made to clergymen, school principals and leaders of various organizations, urging them to set aside a definite time during the week preceding or the week following Dec. 7 for a lecture on tuberculosis.

The National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that there are over 1,000,000 consumptives in the United States, of whom probably at least one-third are unable to provide for themselves the necessary treatment at home. Most of these cases are a menace to the health of their families and associates and should be in special hospitals. At the present time, however, even if every case were known, it would not be possible to provide accommodations for more than one in eight or ten. The removal of these foci of infection demands more and better hospital and sanitarium provision.

ASTHENIC PERSONS.

Conservation of Their Vital Forces Is Their Only Hope.

"Asthenia" means "without strength," and it describes a condition of general debility. Nerve weakness is "neurasthenia," and muscular weakness is "myasthenia," but the word without any prefix whatever means a general weakness of the system that the sufferer brings into life with him. In infancy a child with asthenia is incapable of prolonged muscular effort. The normal baby screams lustily and kicks vigorously, but the asthenic baby cries feebly as if fatigued and nurses with slow and feeble movements.

Such children cut their first teeth late, with a good deal of digestive disturbance; they catch disease easily and are slow to stand and walk. The motor apparatus — that is, the nerves and muscles used in moving the body—is not and probably never will be capable of much hard work.

In later years, especially during adolescence, life goes more hardly with the asthenic person. His lack of stamina may show itself in any one of a number of ways—among others backache, chorea, weak eyes, weak heart, slowness of wit, poor digestion or undue fatigue after ordinary exertion. These symptoms all indicate that the asthenic person cannot work or play like other people, but must arrange his life with regard to his constitutional weakness.

Many asthenics are persons of superior intelligence and moral force, and they often offset their physical limitations by an exercise of will. The ability thus to exert the will and to triumph over fatigue marks the difference between them and the neurasthenic or the simply indolent.

The greatest mistake a person of the asthenic type can make is to use his will power in an effort to keep up with normal people in their work and play. He can often hold his own in the battle of life surprisingly well, but he cannot do it by "burning the candle at both ends." Success in life for the asthenic means a careful conservation of all the vital forces from hour to hour.

Perhaps joy cometh in the morning, but none to the chap who has made a night of it.

ALFRED FERRIS, ESQ.

PENETANGUISHENE, ONT., March 4th, 1913

"I want to inform you of what your remedy "Fruit-a-tives" did for me.

"For years, I was a martyr to Dyspepsia and Constipation, often having to leave work from the agonizing pains of Acute Indigestion. Doctors treated me continually, but without satisfactory results. It seemed to me that I tried every advertised medicine on the market, and got no relief.

"On one of the days that I was compelled to absent myself from work, a neighbor came to my house to whom I told of my suffering, and he said to me that all I had to do, if I had Dyspepsia, was to take "Fruit-a-tives". They would cure me. He had cured himself. I immediately procured a 50c box and continued taking them until cured. I suppose I took in all, about eleven boxes and I am glad to be able to say that I have been free of Indigestion for nearly two years. They cured the Constipation also. They were worth their weight in gold to me and I will be glad to have you publish this letter, along with my photo, if it will induce another dyspeptic to take the right road to a permanent cure."

Yours truly, ALFRED FERRIS.

Don't suffer any longer. To-day—right now—get "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will sweeten the stomach—strengthen the stomach muscles, increase the quantity of digestive juices, regulate Kidneys and Bowels, and make the digestion as sound as a bell. ENGLAND AND GERMANY IS IT TO BE WAR OR PEACE

Dr. Horning Surveys the History of the Two Great Nations

Growth of the British Empire --- Germany's Suspicions --- War is Fratricide

"The tumult and the shouting dies,
The captains and the kings depart."

That was the key-note struck by the choir of George street Church which opened the meeting last evening at the Collegiate, at which Dr. Horning was announced to deliver his lecture on "England and Germany." And this note was sustained by the lecturer for the hour and a half in which he dealt with that very controversial subject.

Dr. Horning, as the chairman, Mr Peck, said in his speech of introduction, is a man who is capable of dealing with the subject and possesses special knowledge owing to his having studied German life and thought among the German people. He is not what one would term a great speaker, as he said himself, he is a "teacher" and believes in simplicity and clearness. He speaks quietly and genially and has a familiar conversational style which gets in close confidence with his audience. He began by recalling his early teaching days in Peterborough, and said he was looking for faces he knew in .886, but failed to recognize but a few.

He said he was going to treat the subject historically. That very few people knew the history of the relations between England and Germany. The British papers were full of this talk of possible war with Germany and the German papers are full of the belief that England is only waiting for an opportunity to attack the Fatherland. Both sides were afraid of each other.

He would not attempt to show the bad points of the Germans, nor the bad points of the English, they both had an equal share of these, as well as of good points. But he would say that the Germans had certain adjectives with which they describe the British, which were not very complimentary, such as, "greedy," "untrustworthy," etc. But both had good qualities and they ought to be working together for the advancement of the race.

GROWTH OF EMPIRE.

The lecturer traced the history of England and showed how the Empire had grown by stages. At the time of Elizabeth the inhabitants of the British Isles were Little Englanders, they were chiefly concerned with internal affairs and not un- the Armada awoke them to a sense of their insecurity did they seriously begin to make a navy, and from that time on the Empire began to grow. The next shock which roused England was the fear of the Napoleonic invasion. But the greatest period of Imperial expansion was at the time of the Franco-German war. At that time France and Portugal got the "Imperial fever," as also did the United States. All the available portions of the earth were taken up in 1870. Germany was too busy with local affairs and missed her opportunity.

The colonial expansions of England had no doubt made the Germans jealous. Then came the great commercial expansion of England. Other nations were taken up with internal affairs and so England was without a rival. Her flag was on every sea, and Englishmen began to think they owned everything. But they had lagged behind in education.

Dr. Horning then surveyed the history of the Germans, and said that we must remember that we Britishers are all Germans originally. We have that stickatitiveness, never-know-when-your-beateness, and the Germans have the same. He showed how the German race had struggled through centuries of bloody tribulation at the hands of the Slavs who were perpetually invading their countries, and to these hard struggles was due the strength and nobility of the German character. For this reason, Germany and England are to-day the supreme powers in Europe and even in the world. What these two countries think goes.

"England had done some things which no one can condone; the opium war in China for instance, and the Boer war is regarded by many as injustifiable, and we need not be surprised," said the lecturer, "If Germany suspects England. The German Emperor is a friend of peace, he has his jingoes to contend with, just as in England; Lord Roberts is going about telling the people what Germany is going to do and he knows no more about it than you or I. If you go about talking ill of your neighbor, that is the best way to cause trouble."

Dr. Hornlug showed how Germany had increased in population from forty millions in 1841 to sixty millions to-day. In 1841 the forty millions were chiefly agriculturalists and raised their own food, but to-day the sixty millions are mainly industrial and consequently they have to import most of their food stuffs. [illegible]

Great Britain claims rightly that she needs her big navy to keep open ports for her trade, but this excuse holds good in the case of Germany and so the Germans are maintaining their navy for that purpose. Dr. Horning admitted that Germany perhaps did not need so large a navy as Great Britain for that purpose.

I BELIEVE IN THE ENGLISHMAN

He said that England was in no danger of losing her trade. The Englishman was the finest business man in the world. "I believe in the Englishman," said the doctor. "The Englishman keeps his mouth shut; there is something about the quiet way everything is managed. He may seem to be dead or asleep, he may lack the bustling ways of the west, he may get down to his office late in the morning and not appear to be doing much, but he is getting there all the same. Trade is growing by leaps and bounds. I have no patience with those who speak of England as decadent and dying. She is very much alive. England to-day is a model of progress and democracy for even the democratic States and Canada as well. The people of England are claiming their rights and getting them."

Germany wanted colonies, but she was born too late. We need not be surprised when they refer to Englishmen, as they have done, as 'those awful hogs.' There is coming a time when Germany will want colonies for her surplus population. "Why don't England and Belgium sell some of their colonies which they cannot develop to Germany?" There were fifty thousand Germans in Brazil. Why should not Germany have that country?

Dr. Horning said he was in Germany at the time when the Munro doctrine was established, and he added, whimsically, that he had a distinct recollection of what the Germans said—and thought about the Yankees at that time—"it was intensely interesting."

WAR FRATRICIDE.

On the question of "emergency," he said that he did not believe anything would ever happen. The two great Protestant nations must never come to blows. The ethics of finance was a strong factor in favor of peace. Any trouble between England and Germany would be a fratricide not to be considered for one moment.

"The twentieth century belongs to the common man. The future holds peace and not war. Men in all departments of life are working to that end in England and Germany. Tennyson has told of this prospect;

"When the war drums throb no longer,
And the battle flags are furl'd,
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

Judge Huycke, in a few eloquent words, proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer. He said, what was needed to-day was some one who knew the heart of Great Britain to go as emissaries of peace to Germany and a closer intimacy between the two nations, and then we should hear less of these emergencies.

Mr S. R. Armstrong seconded the motion. He recalled the time when Dr. Horning belonged to the local parliament in Peterborough. He said the main trend of all our endeavors should be towards peace.

The meeting closed with a solo by John Marsh and the singing of the National Anthem. The lecture was well attended and listened to with rapt interest by all present.

REV. ROLLINS REPLIES TO "ONE WHO KNOWS"

Layman's Missionary Movement not Only for Foreign Missions

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—My letter seems to have annoyed "One Who Knows." That was far from my intention. I thought to win him for a co-worker and for the present have failed. The word "challenge" may have been unwise. I used it because I felt that for the most part those who write anonymously need a rather strong pull to help them out into the open.

"One Who Knows" seems to misunderstand the Laymen's Missionary Movement more completely than he misunderstood my letter. He does me too much honor. He calls it "Mr Rollins' Convention." That must make Mr. Cressman and the thirty laymen associated with him smile. It is a Laymen's Missionary Convention and Banquet. Please put that word "Laymen's" in italics.

"One Who Knows" writes as if he thinks all the missionary money goes to foreign countries. Perhaps it will be worth while for me to speak for the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Our estimates for 1914 call for $1,400,00. Only 37 per cent of this will be spent outside Canada. Nearly $100,000 of it will go to fighting the very evil now under consideration. If "One Who Knows" knows at any time, of any girl or woman broken on this horrible wheel who in the hour of her darkness and despair needs a home and mothering and he brings that woman or girl to me, or tells me where to find her, she will be cared for in a home supported by the missionary funds of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Our Rescue Homes in Montreal and Toronto have already cared for several cases from Peterborough. Something is being done to care for the wrecks and and any knowledge any one has about them should be put to good use.

The all important thing, however, is to prevent wreckage. A great deal is already being done in this direction by earnest mothers and fathers, by earnest teachers and others. More will yet be done. Guilty men should be arraigned before magistrates and judges, and the bar of public opinion and the penalty should be in keeping with the offense. When a magistrate imposes a fine of $40 on a fairly rich man for assaulting a little child, and sends another man to jail for two months for stealing a horse, it is enough to make angels weep and citizens indignant.

Let those whose sympathies are against this thing not even seem to have a grievance against each other; let us unite our forces and strike wisely and heavily wherever a blow will tell.

Faithfully yours,
JAMES ROLLINS.

Peterborough, Nov. 8, 1913.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY AND SUSPENDED SENTENCE

The Innis case was brought to a close yesterday afternoon, by Garnet Innis, the defendant, marrying the young girl. After the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. F. J. Sawers, the case was disposed of by Judge Huycke who suspended sentence. G. N. Gordon represented the prisoner and R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution.

Over fifty spectators in the court room were sadly disappointed as the case was dealt with in the Judge's Chambers. The audience waited two hours or more and heard nothing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

DR. HORNING'S LECTURE.

Dear Sir,—Prof. Horning, of Victoria College, Toronto, in his lecture last night defended the Germans and showed how they were misunderstood. It looks as if he was brought here by the grit party to bolster up their pro-German anti-British policy.

Yours truly,
"CITIZEN."

Peterborough, Nov. 8, 1913.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Wm. Errington was held yesterday afternoon from the late residence, Bethune St., to the Little Lake Cemetery, the Rev. Canon Davidson officiating. The pall bearers were Messrs. W. H. Hill, Thos. Irwin, A. E. Coulthard, W. Langford, Jr., Robt. Fair and J. H. Ferguson. Mr Lunham, a nephew of Mrs. Errington, attended the obsequies.

STIFF SENTENCE FOR PRISONER

At Special Sitting of "Court" This Morning

That the Police Station is one of the most popular lodging places for the night was disclosed last night about midnight, when a four-footed animal by the name of Mr. Muskrat walked into the station.

On the sergeant in charge being unable to get a satisfactory explanation of the marauder's conduct, he was captured by Constable Reid and locked up for the night. Some exciting times were also in evidence during the capture of the prisoner, when a fine row of front teeth was exhibited.

This morning, at a special sitting of police, city detectives and reporters Muskrat was judged to be guilty, and Constable Reid was ordered to take the prisoner to the river, where he will be confined indefinitely.

PIES THAT MOTHER USED TO MAKE

Does the Average Man Prefer Them to the Pies

Made by Use of Knowledge Gained at School

The meeting of St. Peter's Ladies Literary Society held last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum was marked as one of the most keenly contested debates ever heard in this city. The subject was "resolved that domestic science as learned at home is preferable to domestic science learned in schools" and as it is a subject which is of more or less interest to everyone, a very large audience was presented. The affirmative side was taken by Miss K. McCarthy and Miss K. Plunkett, while the negative was in the hands of Miss K. O'Brien and Miss E. Hayes.

The affirmative speakers dwelt considerably on the practical experience gained by the girl who learns the art of housekeeping at home and asked whether the average man prefers the pies made by the girl of to-day who learns the art in schools or "the pies that "mammy" used to make. They also held that the training in schools was far too general and everything was done according to a receipt, while on the other hand a girl who is assisting her mother in the house work gains knowledge in economy, cleanliness and individuality. In schools, one is told "you must do this and you must do that," at home it is "I must not do this or I must not do that." Both speakers delivered their addresses in a very creditable manner.

The negative addresses were perhaps delivered a shade better than the affirmative, but the speakers Miss O'Brien and Miss Hayes, have been heard repeatedly on various subjects, so their experience aided them greatly. The only fault to be found in the eloquent affirmative addresses was the fact that they gave reasons why domestic science should be taught rather than showing why domestic science, taught at school, was preferable to domestic science learned at home.

When the judges, Mr. J. Begley and Mr. D. Larken returned with their verdict, Mr. Begley stated that it was impossible to choose a winner so they would leave it to Very Rev. Dean McColl to break the deadlock. The Rev. gentleman refused to do so, and it was decided a tie, which more than pleased the audience.

The rest of the programme consisted of a piano duet by Misses A. Lavaseur and O Tangney; solo by Miss Helen Warrington

WEDDING BELLS

LOVE—DRENNAN.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Church of the Sacred Heart at 7.30 this morning, when Rev J. V. McCauley united in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Henry William Love, to Miss E. Drennan, both late from England. They were assisted by Mr. W. J. Collins and Miss Agnes Bartley. Mr. and Mrs. Love will reside on Parnell street.

TYPHOID GERMS NOT IN WATER

But Same Well Caused Trouble Last Year it is Said

The typhoid epidemic in the city continues to be somewhat of a mystery. Analysis of the water used by the McDonnel street family, of which five members are ill with typhoid fever, shows an infection but not of typhoid germs.

It is said, however, that water taken from the same well a year ago, was given as the cause of two cases of typhoid fever.

Sanitary Inspector Spence said today that the water in this particular case was certainly not very good.

WIND, SNOW AND RAIN COMBINE TO PARALYZE COMMUNICATION

Railways and Telegraphs Are Hampered by Heavy Gales Which Swept Over the Province—Lake Superior Shipping Forced to Take Cover and Serious Conditions Are Reported on Lake Erie.

TORONTO, Nov. 10. — Rain and snow in northern Ontario and districts north and south of the great lakes wrought havoc with the systems of communication yesterday to such an extent that even the usually light Sunday business could only be despatched with extreme difficulty.

The storm broke in the early morning hours, and soon the long-distance wires of the telephone companies were "out." North Bay, Owen Sound and Sarnia were the first western Ontario cities to feel the break, and calls for western Ontario districts were only accepted conditional upon communication being restored during the day. As the snow storm began to wage its fiercest around London, Ont., the wires began to go, and by three o'clock it was discovered that practically the whole of the northwestern district of Ontario was cut off. Then to make matters worse, the railway traffic was hampered.

The heavy gale accompanied by wet snow played havoc with telephone and railway telegraph lines. Connection was cut between Windsor and London and between Sarnia and London on long-distance lines, and the railways reported the greatest trouble west of London.

As the day wore on trouble was reported at St. Catharines, Niagara and Buffalo. Then the telephone wires broke down east of Toronto and no word could be obtained from Montreal, Ottawa and Kingston. North Bay, Cobalt and the Soo district also came within the depredatory influence of the storm.

The telegraph companies fared little better than the other companies. Messages were despatched with difficulty. Wet snow and rain materially hampered the work of the operators, and in some places the trunk lines were actually brought down, with the result that messages had to be sent by circuitous routes. Telegrams from Toronto to Buffalo and many points east were sent via Detroit. Towards midnight direct communication with the important eastern cities was obtained.

Gale on Lake Superior.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 10.—Lake Superior has been lashed by a fifty-mile gale for the past thirty-six hours. Steamers arriving at the Soo yesterday from Lake Superior ports are all heavily coated with ice. The Northern Navigation Co. steamer Saronic was sheathed with ice as she steamed into the canal approach on the Canadian side.

More than fifty steamers are lying at anchor between the Soo and Whitefish Point awaiting an abatement of the storm. Practically nothing that passed the Soo during the last thirty-six hours has gone past Whitefish Point.

One Boat In Trouble.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 10. — The most severe snow and wind storm of the present season prevailed over this section of the Great Lakes yesterday and shipping of all descriptions was forced to seek shelter at the nearest ports. Ample warning of a stiff gale had been given, however, and last night the only vessel reported in trouble in this district was the W. G. Pollock of Cleveland. She had been forced on the bank of the St. Clair flats canal.

The wind yesterday attained a velocity of forty-six to forty-eight miles an hour on shore. It was said that the velocity was greater on Lake Erie and that the blinding snowstorm made navigation practically impossible.

Pittsburg Isolated.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—Crippling transportation facilities and prostrating wire communication over a wide area, an extraordinary snow, sleet and wind storm visited this section of the country yesterday and continued last night. During the day ten inches of snow fell, four inches more than ever fell during any November since 1886.

Georgetown Was Dark.

GEOGETOWN, Nov. 10.—For the first time since the Hydro-Electric system was introduced here, the service failed yesterday, and for several hours last evening the town was utterly dark, except for the light of lamps. All churches are dependent upon the Hydro power, and as a result such services as were held took place in semi-darkness.

LAW MUST BE OBSERVED

Crothers Says Government Will Suppress Labor Disorders.

MONTREAL, Nov. 10—Legislation to compel harbor commissions to abide by the Government fair wage schedule, legislation to prevent intimidation and molestation on the part of union men towards free labor and to impose a penalty on any employer who dismisses a man on account of his joining the union ranks, a close investigation into the complaints made with regard to extra work at the postoffice, a careful study of the alien labor, as to the possibility of improving it, a serious and immediate consideration of all the complaints and suggestions made by the labor organizations were the things promised by Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor to the delegates of the different labor unions assembled at the Labor Temple Friday evening.

The meeting was a free talk between the Minister and the union delegates, each one expressing his views on the present labor conditions, and offering his suggestions to improve the situation of workingmen. In the course of his speech the Minister made it clear that first of all the Government was determined to maintain order in this country and punish severely authors of disorders of a similar nature to those which occurred in Vancouver some months ago.

Ear In a Handkerchief.

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—When Jos. Romaine was taken to the Western Hospital in the ambulance Friday he carried with him his right ear, wrapped in a pocket handkerchief.

Shortly after his admission to the institution when the doctors found that the loss of an ear was the only injury sustained in his fall from a scaffold, they sewed the member to its accustomed place at the side of Romaine's head, and they anticipate that the ear will be as good as ever. The ear was cut cleanly from the head when Romaine in his fall struck a guy wire.

SURPRISED IS SAMUEL

British Minister Cannot See Why Roblin Roasted Him.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(C. A. P. Cable)—No one is more astonished than Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel himself at the seathing attack that has been made upon him by Premier Roblin of Manitoba in consequence of certain remarks, alleged to be derogatory to the education policy of that province, which the British Postmaster-General made at Montreal during his recent visit.

What occurred, says Mr. Samuel, was that he was asked to give his impressions of the west, and in doing so he mentioned that he had been specially struck with the zeal of the people of those provinces for education, with the excellence of their schools, and with the fact that great universities had been founded on sound lines. He added that the only exception that he had observed was that in the Province of Manitoba a system of compulsory education had not yet been established, and that, as he had been informed, the result had been that a large proportion of children, especially of the foreign population of the city of Winnipeg, were receiving little or no schooling.

His (Mr. Samuel's) statement was based on information he had received from more than one educationist in Winnipeg, in which town, as well as in others, he had himself visited several elementary schools, and his remarks were endorsed by the principal of McGill.

What Mr. Roblin Said.

MINNEDOSA, Man., Nov. 10.—At a public meeting here, Sir Rodmond P. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, speaking on education, condemned "men traducing Manitoba."

Referring to Postmaster-General Sameul, he said: "When you see meddlesome, impudent, slanderous Samuel, who by accident holds a portfolio in a British Government, making false statements at the dictation of a small Grit coterie, who stuffed this jellybag of an Englishman to such an extent that he was willing to make a statement in the city of Montreal which he knew to be false, you will know how to treat him.

"I can assure Mr. Samuel if he ever visits Manitoba again he will be hauled before the bar of public opinion and made to swallow his falsehoods."

GEO. TRACEY DIES

Prominent Halifax Man Struck By Suburban Train.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 10.—George Tracey, 52 years old, a member of the firm of Cunard & Co., local coal dealers, was struck by a suburban train at Rockingham Saturday night and instantly killed. Accompanied by Miss Jean McCurdy, he was returning from Bedford. It is supposed that while attempting to cross the track he stumbled and was struck by the train. His body was badly mangled.

In 1886 Mr. Tracey won the amateur half-mile running championship of America at New York and in 1887 he again annexed the half-mile championship at Detroit. He was at one time a prominent amateur oarsman and football player. He was unmarried and leaves one sister residing in Chicago.

Prince Nearly Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. — A cable from Tetuan to The Tribune says:

Prince Alfonso, son of Princess Eulalia, who is here in command of the aerial fleet, had a narrow escape Friday at Texan. He rose in his biplane from the outskirts of the village, in an exploration flight over the positions of the Moroccan natives at Benisimara.

At an altitude of about 3,000 feet his motor suddenly stopped. He made a rapid volplane descent and succeeded in regaining control of the machine just as it touched ground. He was able to resume his flight before the natives, who had witnessed his descent, could arrive at the spot.

Convicts as Axemen.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—G. M. Macdonell, a member of the royal commission, investigating Kingston Penitentiary, has made the suggestion that an experiment be made with three or four convicts under 20 years of age, by sending them to lumber camps for the winter. If the experiment is successful, fifty boys might be given this measure of liberty, under the auspices of the Reading Camp instructors. Dominion Parole Officer Archibald is considering the idea.

Murdered at Own Door.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Nov. 10.—John B. Schoessel, aged 51, foreman of the machine shops at the Rock Island Government Arsenal, was murdered on the doorstep of his home in this city Saturday night while returning from practicing with a church choir, of which he was a member. He was accosted by three men at his gate and was stabbed through the heart. His assailants escaped. There is no known motive.

Hotel Porter Found Dead.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 10. — Donald McIntyre, hotel porter, was found dead here yesterday morning in the dressing-room of the new Dalhousie street theatre in course of construction. He had wandered in Saturday night to go to sleep. No inquest will be held, death being due to heart trouble.

WILL REPEAL THE EMBARGO

Wilson to Let Arms go Over Mexican Border.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Within forty-eight hours the United States will make a move which has for its purpose the forcible elimination of Gen. Huerta as head of the Mexican Government. He has been warned by Charge O'Shaughnessy and John Lind that the American Government intends taking this step.

While intervention is being discussed by officials here, and the army and navy continue war-like preparations, it is believed the step President Wilson proposes taking is the lifting of the embargo on the revolutionists obtaining arms and ammunition in the United States, and a recognition of them as a de facto government.

It is the expectation that the President will send a special message to Congress to-day or to-morrow, urging that the resolution of 1911, providing the embargo, be repealed. According to high authority, the President has begun the preparation of the message.

Administration circles were much perturbed yesterday by reports that Huerta had obtained money sufficient to run the Government of Mexico for a month from sources in Great Britain. The reports stated that the money was raised by the Pearson Syndicate of Financiers, of which Lord Cowdray, generally known as Sir Weetman Pearson, is the head.

Cabinet May Resign.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—After a conference of several of the Cabinet Ministers with President Huerta yesterday morning it was persistently rumored that Huerta's attitude toward the United States has caused a split among his advisers which cannot be bridged, and the resignation of at least two of the Ministers is expected without delay.

Foreign Minister Moneno is considered likely to quite the Cabinet perhaps to-day.

It is believed that Gen. Blanquet, the Minister of War, also intends to resign.

Mexicans generally recognize now that the international situation has reached a climax and are ready for anything.

In Government circles nothing is spoken of except the demand of the United States for the elimination of Huerta and his friends from the Government of the republic.

President Huerta called an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. All the Minisiters went to the National Palace and were still in session at 11 o'clock last night.

Mexico is suffering now from a money famine due to the Government decree stopping the redemption in specie of National Bank notes. Crowds besieged the banks in the capital all day yesterday demanding cash for notes.

Official despatches from Chihuahua report a big rebel defeat. Federal cavalry is reported to be pursuing the fleeing rebels, and constantly harrassing them, preventing the scattered army from reorganizing. The final rout of the insurrectos in that district is expected shortly.

NIPIGON FIRESWEPT.

Business Portion of Village Is Totally Destroyed by Flames.

NIPIGON, Ont., Nov. 10. — The business portion of this village, sixty miles east of Fort William, was totally destroyed yesterday by a fire, which started at 8 p.m. Saturday and continued until 12.30 yesterday afternoon.

The fire was discovered in a clothing store and swept west as far as the International Hotel, where it was checked. The business places burned include three stores, two restaurants, three barber shops, two pool-rooms, and two butcher shops. The total loss is approximately $75,000, partly covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

John McFarlane Named.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 10. — John McFarlane, president of East Middlesex Conservative Association, was chosen candidate for the Legislature at the party convention Saturday, in succession to the late George W. Neely, M.P.P. Six names went to the convention and McFarlane had 49 votes out of 96 on the first ballot.

ASKS MINISTERS

Mayor Allan Seeks Support in Milk Strike.

HAMILTON, Nov. 10—Mayor John Allan, who inaugurated a milk boycott here when the dealers boosted the price to nine cents a quart, Saturday sent a circular letter to all city clergymen, asking them to join in the fight.

He asked that they take the matter up with their congregations and try and get them to join in an absolute boycott, which he is satisfied would make the dealers back down within a month. His worship says that he already has the assurance of several of the ministers that they will do this.

The Hotelkeepers' Association has also called a meeting for the purpose of trying to make some arrangements to buy their supply of milk direct from the farmers.

Burned To Death.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Nov. 9.—Alex. Martin, P.M.R.R. employe, died early yesterday morning, as a result of his terrible experience when the P.M.R.R. coal hoist was destroyed early Friday morning. He was handling gasoline with a lighted lantern in his hand, with the result that an explosion followed, setting his clothes on fire. He managed to extinguish the fire on himself by rolling on some newly-plowed land nearby, but not before he was so terribly burned that flesh and finger nails fell from him. He is survived by a widow and grown-up family.

Two Charges of Murder.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—A second charge of murder has been lodged against Mrs. Annie Balcomb, now in jail here awaiting trial. She is accused of causing a death through a criminal operation of a girl named Stella Dellias, who succumbed in a local hospital Friday.

Died From Her Injuries.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Susan Woodruff, who was thrown out of a carriage in Muskoka two weeks ago, while being driven to the train on completion of a visit, died at the hospital here Saturday. Her skull had been fractured.

READING GIVES CLEAR VERDICT AGAINST THE HOME RULE MEASURE

In Contest For Seat Made Vacant by Promotion of Sir Rufus Isaacs to Lord Chief Justiceship, Capt. Leslie Wilson Polls Good Majority.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—In the Reading election, Captain Leslie Wilson (Unionist) received 5,144 votes; G. P. Gooch (Lib.), 4,013, and J. G. Butler (Socialist), 1,063. The Unionist majority over the Liberal was 1,131. This was the most momentous election in Reading's history, where the inhabitants are noted for taking their politics seriously. The vacancy was caused by the promotion of Sir Rufus Isaacs to the post of Lord Chief Justice. Although he was very popular in the constituency, he only secured his last return by a majority of 99. During the present election the Unionist candidate and supporters scrupulously refrained from any references to the Marconi matter and from other personalities, the election being fought by them solely over the home rule issue and the Insurance Act. The Liberal candidate, however, sought to defend the policy of the present administration at large, while neither side made scarcely any reference to the fiscal policy.

Excitement was intense in Reading when the poll was declared showing that Captain Wilson had a clear majority of 68 over both his opponents. He declared the verdict of Reading was particularly directed against the home rule bill. The defeated Liberal candidate said the result was due to wastage owing to the Government policy of social reform treading on the toes of individual members of the community.

Three other elections are still pending, namely, South Lanark, Keighley and the Wick Burghs. Since the last general elections the Unionists have won eleven seats from the ministerialists, only Londonderry going to the Liberals.

Liberal Is Successful.

LINLITHGOW, Scotland, Nov. 10.—Mr. Pratt, the Liberal candidate for Linlithgowshire, was successful over his Unionist opponent, James Kidd, but by a greatly reduced majority, at the bye-election held here on Friday. The figures were: Mr. Pratt, Liberal, 5,615; James Kidd, Unionist, 5,094. Majority 521.

At the last election Alex. Ure, the Liberal, polled 5,835 votes against 3,765 received by James Kidd, the Unionist.

Mr. Ure vacated the seat a few weeks ago on his appointment as Lord President of the Scottish Court of Sessions, and it was difficult for the Liberals to find a candidate to replace him, but Mr. Pratt, who was a former baillie of Glasgow and practically unknown in the constituency, was selected to meet the Unionist, James Kidd, who had been before the electors for years.

Feared Attack By Suffragettes.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The militant suffragettes supported Captain Wilson in the Reading bye-election. Just before the polls closed a large squad of militants arrived. The town hall, where the counting took place, was strongly guarded by a double force of police, while the polling places were carefully watched throughout the day, as an attack on the ballot boxes was feared.

The Liberal candidate, Mr. Gooch, was formerly a member for Bath. He entered the constituency only on the eve of the contest.

TRAPPERS DROWNED.

Three Men Have Lost Their Lives at Beaver Lake, Ont.

DRYDEN, Ont., Nov. 10. — Any hope that three trappers, missing since Oct. 22, were alive was dissipated Saturday afternoon when Provincial Constable Simpson of Kenora returned to Dryden from the scene of the tragedy. On arrival at Beaver Lake, on whose shore the unfortunate young men had fixed their camps, he found their upturned canoe in the centre of the lake half a mile from the shore. The lake was frozen over to a depth of four inches, so it was decided that no attempt to recover the bodies would be possible until next April.

The actual facts regarding the tragedy will never be known, but it is thought that the sad event occurred the day following their arrival at camp, and that while removing supplies across the lake their canoe upset, precipitating its occupants into the ice-cold water. The victims are: Hugh Nicholson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson, farmers, and D. John Barker, both of Dryden, and Joseph J. Edgar, who came here a month ago with John Barker from Whitewater, Man. His parents reside at Drumhoney, Whitecross, County Armagh, Ireland.

Hears He's Dead; Comes Home.

SHARON, Pa., Nov. 10.—The body of a man killed by a train here three weeks ago was identified by Mrs. Wil. McGonnel as that of her husband and was interred in a Youngstown, Ohio, cemetery. Saturday while Mrs. McGonnel and her children were at dinner, McGonnel walked in. He said he had been in Ohio searching for work and returned home when he read his "death notice" in a newspaper. The identity of the man buried as McGonnel has not been determined.

KINGSTON, N.Y., Nov. 10.—Twelve year old John Klem with a new air rifle was shooting at flies in the dining room when his mother entered the room. Before she could heed his shouted warning, a slug from the weapon entered her brain through the eye and she died to-day.

WANT LARKIN FREED.

British Socialists Will Adopt Suffragette Tactics They Declare.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Socialists have adopted suffrage tactics and have decided to oppose all Liberal candidates and refuse them a hearing at public meetings until James Larkin, the leader of the striking Irish transport workers, who was recently sentenced to seven months, imprisonment at Dublin, is released.

The Rt. Hon. Charles Frederick Masterman, M.P. for Bethnal Green, the financial secretary to the Treasury, was the first victim. He was howled down Saturday when he attempted to speak at the Shoreditch tabernacle. A small party of men kept up a continual cry for the release of Larkin, but eventually the police were called to clear the church.

A demostration was held at Dublin by the strikers in celebration of the "success of the Socialists in keeping the Liberal candidate out in Reading."

THAW LOSES POINT

Governor Felker Honors Demand For Extradition to New York

CONCORD, N.H., Nov. 10.—Governor Felker yesterday honored the requisition of the State of New York for the extradition of Harry K. Thaw. The case is now transferred automatically to the federal courts, where a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of Thaw is pending.

The governor based his decision on the indictment returned against Thaw in New York County and which charged him with conspiracy to escape from the insane asylum at Matteawan, N.Y., to which he was committed following his trial for the killing of Stanford White.

Thaw's attorneys announced that they would file immediately an amendment to their petition for a writ of habeas corpus, application for which was made soon after Thaw was arrested in this state following his deportation from Canada. The original petition was based on the allegation that Thaw had been indicted for conspiracy by the Dutchess County grand jury, and it was suspended pending the governor's decision on the matter of extradition.

Tango Music at Any Price.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Danish King Christian's court marshal telegraphed to the Thalia Theatre here the other day for tango music, as the dance was to be introduced immediately in the Copenhagen court.

A reply was sent that no tango music has been published yet, and that the only way it could be obtained was to pay a high price for a manuscript copy.

Promptly came back the order:

"Money no object. State price. Mail immediately."

The manager of the Thalia Theatre sent manuscript music and charged $400 for it.

Lived In Six Reigns.

GUELPH, Nov. 10.—Mrs. John Mitchell died at her home on Queen street on Friday night, in her 100th year. She was a lifelong resident, and her memory was stored with events in the early history of Guelph and Wellington County. She lived under six British sovereigns. Several months ago, when a son of Mrs. Mitchell's died the strange event occurred of a man of 80 years being buried from his mother's residence.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE

Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, who died on Friday last at the extreme old age of 91, was one of the surviving giants of the nineteenth century.

John W. Judd, in his delightful little book "The Coming of Evolution," tells us that Wallace was born thirteen years after Darwin. "He did not possess the moderate income that permits of entire devotion to scientific research. After working for some time as a teacher, at the age of 26, he set off with another naturalist on a collecting tour in South America— hoping by the sale of specimens to cover the expenses of travel."

At that time the theory of evolution was the vaguest hypothesis, and while there were many speculations upon the origin of life and of species, there was very little real proof of these theories. Charles Lyell was the first man to start a systematic research and it was he who set the young Darwin on the path which led to his discovery of the origin of species which, eventually caused so much bitter controversy between scientist and theologians, and revolutionized the thought of the nineteenth century.

But while Darwin has received the credit for having discovered the origin of species, Russell Wallace was working on the same problem and had actually discovered the theory of natural selection before Darwin published it to the world.

In the Spring of 1858, Wallace was at Ternate, in the island of Celebes, where he lay sick with fever, and his thought wandered to the ever-present problem of species. Then and there, "in a sudden flash of insight" the idea of natural selection presented itself to his mind, and after a few hour's thought, the chief points were written down. He wrote almost immediately to Darwin stating his solution of the problem and asked him if he thought it was new.

Darwin had thought of the same thing years before but had not published it, as he wanted to demonstrate it conclusively. He had kept it a close secret, except for a few friends. On receiving the letter from Wallace he wrote his friend Lyell, who was in the secret:

"I never saw a more striking coincidence; if Wallace had my M.S. sketch, written out in 1842, he could not make a better abstract."

Darwin offered to yield to Wallace the claim of priority in the discovery, but Wallace would not hear of it and said:

"I have felt the most sincere satisfaction that Mr. Darwin had been at work long before me, and that it was not left for me to write the Origin of Species. I have long since measured my own strength and know that it would be quite unequal to the task."

This was the large-minded man who died last Friday, and he leaves too few of his type behind him.

PEAS

The pea situation is becoming alarming to the Canadian farmer. Russian competition threatens to put him out of business in this as in other matters. If the policy of "letting in" United States produce is good, it must also be wise to let it in from other countries. The Canadian farmer cannot compete with Russia in wheat, barley and peas, nor with New Zealand in mutton and butter.

If the Canadian farmer expects to meet the whole world on a level footing, he will have to eliminate his winters, cease to stall feed his cattle, let his chickens look out for themselves during December and January, move nearer to the sea, where he can get cheap freights and do a variety of other impossible things.

We have the water-power to turn out flour. That is where our advantage lies. But this idea of throwing ourselves open to free competition, all things considered, will put most of us out of business including the farmer. We want to see all classes do well. We want Canada for Canadians. The process of giving it up to others will speedily drive us all out.

THE SHAM INVASION

The report of the recent naval sham invasion of the British Isles on the North Sea has not yet been published, and there are rumors that the reason is that the experiment proved that England could be successfully invaded by Germany.

It is claimed that the report of the results show that the admiral's success caused the complete collapse of the English fleet under Sir George Callaghan. It was paralyzed by the "enemy's" celerity, while the "German" submarines created a "veritable reign of terror" among the defending craft.

Sir John Jellicoe's success, it is added, was so complete that he was on the point of sailing triumphantly up the Thames, when the Admiralty, in alarm, prematurely stopped the manoeuvres.

The official view is that this sensational picture of the result of the naval manoeuvres is incorrect. The manoeuvres, the Admiralty says, only showed that what was known before, namely, that small bodies could be landed at various points along the east coast of England. This is obvious by the fact that it is impossible and quite unnecessary, to defend each individual mile of coast-line. These unsupported and isolated landings could easily be dealt with.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In the report of Rev. Mr. Webb's lecture on Dan Crawford which appeared in the Review last week, our reporter made a mistake in saying that Dan Crawford was a Methodist. The truth is that wonderful missionary is a Baptist. The said reporter is a Methodist and fancies all the fine men like himself belong to that body.

Another French aviator has got the knack of flying up-side-down. If this goes on much further the spectators will get into the habit of standing up-side-down to look at them. Surely the world is becoming topsy-turvy.

It is said that Huerta is only holding out against the United States determination to depose him because he believes Great Britain will defend him if the States takes action. This is a poor hope. It is hardly likely that England would fall out with a friend to bolster up a pretender.

Alaska is said to be up in arms against the proposal providing for the cession of the "Panhandle" to Canada. Alaska need not get out of temper over this matter, what good is a pan handle without the pan anyway!

There is an aggressive movement in Germany to promote and extend their trade by means of the moving picture. It certainly ought to keep things moving.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG
Canadian Pacific

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 27th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.00 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Compartment Library Observation Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8.—Trading on the local wheat market in options was light, and prices during the earlier hours were easy on an expected increase in the world's shipments and more reassuring advices regarding the crops in the Argentine. Later the Buenos Ayres market closed 1⅛ to 1¾ higher, causing shorts to cover over the week-end, hardening prices fractionally.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼ to ⅜ lower and closed unchanged to ⅛ lower. Cash demand for all grades of wheat was good, except No. 1 northern, which was slow. Exporters say there is an improved inquiry for cash wheat, oats and barley. Cash wheat closed ⅛ to ¼ lower for contract grades. Cash oats closed unchanged to ⅛ lower. Cash flax closed unchanged on all grades.

Inspections on Friday were 1245 cars, against 1266 last year. In sight today, 1275 cars.

Deliveries thru the clearing house today: Wheat, 238,500 bushels; oats, 43,000 bushels; flax, 3500 bushels.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable today was quiet, owing to the fact that prices bid by foreign buyers were still out of line. The demand for oats for November shipment continues to be keen at a further advance of 3d, but exporters say it is impossible to work any business on account of the scarcity of ocean freight room from this port for the balance of the season. The local demand for oats is steady and further sales of round lots of number 2 C. W. were made at 39¼c.

The local trade in flour is fair, but the export demand was quiet. Millfeed is steady at the recent decline with a fair demand. Hay is fairly active and firm. Demand for butter is fair and the undertone to the market is strong. Receipts for the week were 4776 packages, as compared with 7033 for the same week last year. Cheese is fairly active with prices tending towards a higher level. Receipts for the week were 32,826 boxes, against 36,320 a year ago. Eggs active and firm.

WITHIN THE LAW

BAYARD VEILLER

CHAPTER I.
The Panel of Light.

THE lids of the girl's eyes lifted slowly, and she stared at the panel of light in the wall. Just at the outset the act of seeing made not the least impression on her numbed brain. For a long time she continued to regard the dim illumination in the wall with the same passive fixity of gaze. Apathy still lay upon her crushed spirit. In a vague way she realized her own inertness and rested in it gratefully, subtly fearful lest she again arouse to the full horror of her plight. In a curious subconscious fashion she was striving to hold on to this deadness of sensation, thus to win a little respite from the torture that had exhausted her soul.

Of a sudden her eyes noted the black lines that lay across the panel of light, and in that instant her spirit was quickened once again. The clouds lifted from her brain. Vision was clear now. Understanding seized the full import of this hideous thing on which she looked. For the panel of light was a window set high within a wall of stone. The rigid lines of black that crossed it were bars—prison bars. It was still true, then. She was in a cell of the Tombs.

Crouching miserably on the narrow bed, she maintained her fixed watching of the window—that window which was a symbol of her utter despair. Again agony wrenched within her.

The girl was appalled by the mercilessness of a destiny that had so outraged right. She was wholly innocent of having done any wrong. She had struggled through years of privation to keep herself clean and wholesome, worthy of those gentlefolk from whom she drew her blood. And earnest effort had ended at last under an overwhelming accusation, false, yet none the less fatal to her. This accusation after soul wearying delays had culminated today in conviction. The sentence of the court had been imposed upon her—that for three years she should be imprisoned.

There had been nothing in the life of Mary Turner before the catastrophe came to distinguish it from many another. Its most significant details were of a sordid kind, familiar to poverty. Her father had been an unsuccessful man as success is esteemed by this generation of Mammon worshipers. He was a gentleman, but the trivial fact is of small avail today. He was of good birth, and he was the possessor of an inherited competence. He had as well intelligence, but it was not of a financial sort.

So, little by little, his fortune became shrunken toward nothingness by reason of injudicious investments. He married a charming woman, who, after a brief period of wedded happiness, gave her life to the birth of the single child of the union, Mary. As the years passed the daughter grew toward maturity in an experience of ever increasing penury. The girl was in the high school when her father finally gave over his rather feeble effort of living. At his death the father left her a character well instructed in the excellent principles that had been his own. Of worldly goods, not the value of a pin.

It Was True, She Was In a Cell In the Tombs.

Yet, measured according to the stern standards of adversity, Mary was fortunate. Almost at once she procured a humble employment in the Emporium, the great department store owned by Edward Gilder. To be sure, the wage was infinitesimal, while the toil was body breaking, soul breaking.

Mary nevertheless avoided the worst perils of her lot. She did not flinch under privation, but went her way through it, if not serenely, at least without ever a thought of yielding to those temptations that beset a girl who is at once poor and charming.

Among her fellows were some like herself, others unlike. Of her own sort in this single particular were the two girls with whom she shared a cheap room. Their common decency in attitude toward the other sex was the unique bond of union. In their association she found no real companionship. Nevertheless they were wholesome enough. Otherwise they were illiterate, altogether uncongenial.

In such wise, through five dreary years, Mary Turner lived. Nine hours daily she stood behind a counter. She spent her other waking hours in obligatory menial labors, cooking her own scant meals over the gas, washing and ironing, for the sake of that neat appearance which was required of her by those in authority at the Emporium yet more especially necessary for her own self respect.

With a mind keen and earnest she contrived some solace from reading and studying since the free library gave her this opportunity. By candid comparison of herself with others about her she realized the fact that she possessed an intelligence beyond the average. The training by her father, too, had been of a superior kind. There was as well, at the back, vaguely, the feeling of particular self respect that belongs inevitably to the possessor of good blood. Finally she demurely enjoyed a modest appreciation of her own physical advantages. In short, she had beauty, brains and breeding, three things of chief importance to any woman.

There had been thefts in the store. They had been traced eventually to a certain department, that in which Mary worked. The detective was alert. Some valuable silks were missed. Search followed immediately. The goods were found in Mary's locker. That was enough. She was charged with the theft. She protested innocence, only to be laughed at in derision by her accusers. Every thief declares innocence. Mr. Gilder himself was emphatic against her. The thieving had been long continued. An example must be made. The girl was arrested.

The crowded condition of the court calendar kept her for three months in the Tombs awaiting trial. She was quite friendless. To the world she was only a thief in duress. At the last the trial was very short. Her lawyer was merely an unfledged practitioner assigned to her defense as a formality of the court. At the end twelve good men and true rendered a verdict of guilty against the shuddering girl in the prisoner's dock.

That which was the supreme tragedy to the broken girl in the cell merely afforded rather agreeable entertainment to her former fellows of the department store. Mary Turner throughout her term of service there had been without real intimates, so that now none was ready to mourn over her fate. Even the two roommates had felt some slight offense, since they sensed the superiority of her, though vaguely. Now, they found a smug satisfaction in the fact of her disaster as emphasizing very pleasurably their own continuance in respectability.

On the day of Mary Turner's trial there was a subtle gayety of gossipings to and fro through the store. The girl's plight was like a shuttlecock driven hither and yon by the battledores of many tongues. It was the first time in many years that one of the employees had been thus accused of theft. Shoplifters were so common as to be a stale topic. There was a refreshing novelty in this case, where one of themselves was the culprit. Her fellow workers chatted desultorily of her as they had opportunity, and complacently thanked their gods that they were not as she—with reason.

Smithson, a member of the executive staff, did not hesitate to speak his mind, though none too forcibly. Yet his comment, meager as it was, stood wholly in Mary's favor. And he spoke with a certain authority, since he had given official attention to the girl.

Smithson stopped Sarah Edwards, Mr. Gilder's private secretary, as she was passing through one of the departments that morning to ask her if the owner had yet reached his office.

"Been and gone," was the secretary's answer. "He went downtown to the court of general sessions. The judge sent for him about the Mary Turner case."

"Oh, yes, I remember now," Smithson exclaimed. "I hope the poor girl gets off. She was a nice girl—quite the lady, you know. Miss Edwards, Will you please let me know when Mr. Gilder arrives? There are one or two little matters I wish to discuss with him."

"Hello, dad!"

"All right," Sarah agreed briskly, and she hurried on toward the private office.

The secretary was barely seated at her desk when the violent opening of the door startled her, and as she looked up a cheery voice cried out:

"Hello, dad!"

At the same moment a young man entered with an air of care free assurance, his face radiant. But as his glance went to the empty armchair at the desk he halted abruptly, and his expression changed to one of disappointment.

"Not here!" he grumbled. Then once again the smile was on his lips as his eyes fell on the secretary, who had now risen to her feet in a flutter of excitement.

"Why, Mr. Dick!" Sarah gasped.

"Hello, Sadie!" came the genial salutation. The young man advanced and shook hands with her warmly. "I'm home again. Where's dad?"

Even as he asked the question the quick sobering of his face bore witness to his disappointment over not finding his father in the office. And in the patent chagrin under which the son now labored was to be found a certain indication of character not to be disregarded. Unlike many a child, he really loved his father. The death of the mother years before had left him without other opportunity for affection in the home, since he had neither brother nor sister.

In that simple and sincere regard which he bore for his father, the boy revealed a heart ready for love, willing to give of itself its best for the one he loved. Beyond that as yet there was little to be said of him with exactness. He was a spoiled child of fortune, if you wish to have it so. Certainly, he was only a drone in the world's hive. Thus far he had enjoyed the good things of life without ever doing aught to deserve them by contributing in return, save by his smiles and his genial air of happiness.

In the twenty-three years of his life every gift that money could lavish had been his. If the sum total of benefit was small, at least there remained the consoling fact that the harm was even less. Luxury had not sapped the strength of him. He had not grown vicious, as have so many of his fellows among the sons of the rich.

Sarah explained that Mr. Gilder had been called to the court of general sessions by the judge.

"But what is dad doing in court?"

Sarah explained the matter with her usual conciseness:

"One of the girls was arrested for stealing."

"And dad went to court to get her out of the scrape. That's just like the old man."

"She was tried today and convicted. The judge sent for Mr. Gilder to come down this morning and have a talk with him about the sentence."

There was no lessening of the expression of certainty on the young man's face. He loved his father, and he trusted where he loved.

"It will be all right," he declared in a tone of entire conviction. "Dad's heart is as big as a barrel. He'll get her off."

Then of a sudden Dick gave a violent start. He leaned toward the secretary's desk and spoke with a new seriousness of manner:

"Sadie, have you any money? I'm broke. My taxi has been waiting outside all this time."

"Why, yes," the secretary said cheerfully.

Dick eagerly seized the banknote offered him.

"Mighty much obliged, Sadie," he said enthusiastically. "But I must run. Otherwise this wouldn't be enough for the fare." And he darted out of the room.

CHAPTER II.
Only Three Years.

WHEN at last the owner of the store entered the office his face showed extreme irritation.

"What did they do with the Turner girl?" his secretary inquired in an elaborately casual manner.

Gilder did not look up from the heap of papers, but answered rather harshly.

"I don't know—I couldn't wait," he said. He made a petulant gesture as he went on, "I don't see why Judge Lawlor bothered me about the matter. He is the one to impose sentence, not I. I am hours behind with my work now."

Edward Gilder was a big man physically, plainly the possessor of that abundant vital energy which is a prime requisite for achievement in the ordering of modern business concerns. Force was indeed the dominant quality of the man. His tall figure was proportionately broad, and he was heavily fleshed. In fact the body was too ponderous. Perhaps, in that characteristic might be found a clew to the chief fault in his nature. For he was ponderous, spiritually and mentally, as well as materially. The fact was displayed suggestively in the face which was too heavy with its prominent jowls and aggressive chin and rather bulbous nose. But there was nothing flabby anywhere.

It was with his accustomed blandness of manner that he presently acknowledged the greeting of George Demarest, the chief of the legal staff that looked after the firm's affairs.

"Well, Demarest?" he inquired.

"Judge Lawlor gave her three years," Demarest replied gravely. It was plain from his manner that he did not altogether approve.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

Sunday's Rainfall Responsible for Small Congregations at City Churches

THE BIG BANQUET

And Conferences Will be Held on Thursday of This Week

The rainfall of Sunday did not fit in very well with the visit of the special speakers on the Laymen's Missoinary Movement and as a result, small congregations were present in the majority of the churches.

But those people who did brave the elements, heard fine addresses, as the subject for the day was in the hands of clergymen and laymen, well qualified to disseminate information and explain the situation as as presented to-day.

GOOD SPEAKERS.

It is evident that the banquet on Thursday of this week is going to be the most important event of the kind ever held in Peterborough and one of the most important ever held in the Province. The speakers for the banquet will be Hon. Justice Hodgins, Judge of the Court of Appeals, Toronto; Rev. J. Y. Ferguson, of Formosa, and Rev. J. H. Arnup, Assistant Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Methodist Church, Toronto.

Morning and afternoon conferences on Thursday will be held in the Murray Street Baptist Church for which programs are now being distributed. At the morning session the principal speakers will be Mr. J. Cuthbertson, Supt. Japan Branch International Police Association, who will speak on "The Reason for the Appeal," and Rev. Walter Daniel, Toronto, who will discuss "The Development of a Missionary Atmosphere."

The speakers at the afternoon session will be J. H. Arnup, H. C. Priest, General Secretary for Canada of the Missionary Educational Movement; Dr. J. Y. Ferguson, Robt. Laird, Secretary Finance Board of the Presbyterian Church; Rev. Walter Daniel and D. M. Rose, Secretary of the Anglican Church Laymen's Missionary Movement.

THE CRITICISM.

In every city there are a certain number of people who have never studied the wonderful results that have been accomplished through missionary work and who are utterly unacquainted with the great possibilities of the Movement at the present moment and who therefore are prone to criticise what they do not understand.

PREVENTION OF CRIME

After delivering many addresses on the Scientific study of crime and realizing how much easier it is to talk about things than to do them, Mrs. Wells applied for appointment as a regular police officer.

Her appointment, which was the first of its kind was brought about entirely by her own efforts, and was the first of its kind, but it has met with both national and international response.

For three years she has held a position on the regular police force of her own city, Los Angeles, Cal., and throughout this time has been constantly appealed to from all parts of the United States, Canada, and even Europe, for direction and advice. In the last year Mrs. Wells has given addresses in 50 cities, which have been followed by remarkable results.

She was especially pleaded for the better understanding of the Police Department, and what it should chiefly stand for—prevention of crime.

SHOULD WOMEN HAVE THE BALLOT?

Subject is Debated at Meeting of Sacred Heart T.A.S.

Although they made a very gallant attempt to set forth the wants of the female division of mankind, Mr. Harry Donovan and Mr. Ambrose Dorris lost the decision on the debate on Woman Suffrage, at the last regular meeting of the Sacred Heart T. A. S. Their opponents, Mr. Wm Grady and Mr. D. N. Blanicola had some very convincing points to show that women should not vote. The judges were Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. J. V. McCauley and Mr. J. Begley. Mr. Begley, who in giving the decision, congratulated the four speakers on their able addresses and pointed out the usefulness of debating.

It is understood that a debate will be arranged in the near future between the parishes of the Sacred Heart und St. Peters.

POLICE MAKE ARRESTS FOLLOWING COMPLAINTS OF MISSING PROPERTY

Chas. Johnston and Walter Mahaffy Plead Guilty and Are Remanded to Jail—Operated in Hotel Yards

A repetition of the Giles theft case was brought to light on Saturday evening, when Chas. Johnston and Walter Mahaffy, two scavengers residing about three miles west of Jackson Park were arrested at the Munro House yards by Constable Sills and Walter Kitney. This morning the men appeared before Magistrate Dumble. They were charged with the theft of a rain coat, an overcoat and hat, and they pleaded guilty. Johnston, charged with stealing some seventeen hens, pleaded not guilty to this charge. The hens are the property of Mrs. Alex. Turner, and were stolen on Thanksgiving morning. The men were remanded until next Tuesday. Other charges will be preferred against the prisoners it is said. They were unable to get bail.

LIKE PREVIOUS CASE

The methods of the prisoners were identical to those of the Giles Brothers who operated here last spring. The men would apparently come in to the city in the evening and make their hauls. For some time they had been under the surveillance of the city detectives and police, and their actions on Saturday led to their apprehension.

Among the goods already recovered by the police are tools, knee rug, a parcel of beef and several other small things. A claw hammer found with the other goods bears the name of J. Cocks. The hotel yards were apparently the scene of operations by the men as the police have received numerous complaints regarding missing articles.

On searching the home of the men Detective Newhall and Meagher found over fifty hens which included, it is alleged, the 17 hens stolen from Mrs. Turner.

The police also have a suspicion that the prisoners are connected with the theft from some of the stores that have been broken into this fall.

RAINFALL OF OVER TWO INCHES SUNDAY'S RECORD

Sunday was a dull wet day, and with a rainfall of 2 inches and a quarter for the 24 hours, the heaviest fall of the year and exceeded but in few occasions. This gives a rainfall for November already of 2.87 inches, and for the year up to the present of about 21 1-2 inches, away short of the average of 32 inches. A few more rainfalls similar to Sunday's, however, would bring this year's total to within a respectable distance of the average. Every month this year has been short, excepting April and August.—W.P.

MAN HELD FOR THE MURDER OF JAMES McNULTY AFTER DAMAGES FOR FALSE ARREST

Edmonton, Nov. 10.—Lewis Waller, who was recently charged with the murder of James A. McNulty, formerly of Norwood, Ont., is suing the City of Edmonton, David W. Simpson, captain of the city police detectives, and Silas H. Carpenter, chief of police, for $5,000, claimed for injury to health and reputation and the expenses of obtaining freedom. The statement of claim states that: On Sept. 20, defendant Silas H. Carpenter and David W. Simpson, laid information before C. O. Raven, police magistrate, charging that plaintiff on Sept. 2, wilfully murdered McNulty. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Waller on Sept. 30, and accordingly he was arrested in Calgary and lodged in the cells at the Edmonton police station. He remained in custody until October 14, when he was discharged by J. H. Hefferman, then acting as police magistrate.

BOQUETS FOR INHABITANTS OF LAND OF GOLDEN DREAMS

"The Land of Golden Dreams," presented by local talent at the Grand for three nights was brought to a close on Saturday night. Among those who were presented with bouquets were Miss Willa Blewitt, who was the recipient of a very beautiful bouquet of roses at the Thursday night performance, and another on Friday night. The post office children also received a very pretty bouquet of flowers.

Saturday afternoon, Miss M. Sanderson and the post office children were presented with flowers.

Flowers were numerous at the closing performance, when two bouquets were presented to Miss Blewitt; two for Miss Jessie Spence, Miss Anderson, Greta Lebar, Isabel Morphet, Lila Waterman and Fred Jamieson.

Mr. Harold Meldrum was presented with a large bunch of celery tied with the P.C.I. colors by the Collegiate boys during the singing of the Rose Specialty on Friday evening.

The total seat sale amounted to over $1,100. Of this amount $216 goes towards the credit of the Ladies' Guild of the St. John's Church.

The piece will be presented in Lindsay in the near future.

There are, still, we hope, a few girls who will design to marry young men who do not own automobiles.

OUR NEW STORY, "WITHIN THE LAW"

Without Doubt the Greatest Newspaper Serial Ever Offered

Commences in To-day's Issue on Page Three.

This is a story of a brave girl who suffered a great wrong. She went to prison for three years for a crime that she did not commit, and when she left prison her record stood between her and a living earned honestly. She gained more than a living, and she got it legally. She met bad men and good men, and she pitted her wits against those of men trained in the intricacies of the law and in the plans of criminals.

Mary Turner is good or bad according to the way you look at her. The police and the representatives of law and order that had condemned her to a felon's cell called her bad. One young man believed her to be good, and he stood by her through storm and stress, through circumstances that tried his soul.

This story gives an accurate if fleeting view of the methods of work of the police and the criminals, and it shows the finish of a brave crook who followed undeviatingly the course he had mapped out.

$1,000,000 Wasted a Day on Rats.

It has recently been estimated by a statistician that $1,000,000 worth of food a day is wasted on rats in Great Britain alone.

In other countries the expense runs equally high, and even higher. Every rat in France costs a penny a day for his keep.

In England a rat costs from a farthing to 2 1-2d. a day to the person upon whose property it preys, and there are 40,000,000 rats in the isles.

In India, a country least able to bear the burden of supporting these pests, they are four times as numerous as the population, and each rat consumes on an average three-halfpenny worth of food a day.

The rat commits another sin besides impoverishing the country. He carries disease, and it is probable, because he is dangerous to health rather than because he is a thief, that he finally will be exterminated.

There is a race war going on between rats themselves which will help solve the problem. The black rat is being driven out by the grey rat. The black rat is a much greater nuisance than the grey. Perhaps if the war between the fair race and the dark be kept up they may exterminate each other.

Call Manuel's Wife Queen.

It is rumored that ex-King Manuel of Portugal and his bride, who will probably be known as Queen Augusta Victoria, although her legal right to be so styled is questionable, intends to settle in England, and that King Manuel may possibly buy a place in the country. His mother, Queen Amelie, is herself English-born, and lived here until the fall of the second empire re-opened France to the Orleans family. Curiously enough, it was the pomp and circumstance incidental to her marriage with the late King of Portugal that roused the susceptibilities of the Republican Government and caused the Comte de Paris to be again sent into exile.

The directors of the Peterborough Protestant Home intend holding a jam and linen shower at the Home on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 12th, from 3 to 6 o'clock. Tea will be served. 2

PLEASE KEEP OFF THE STREET

Will Presently be the Appeal Made by the Auto Driver

The paragraph in The Review of Friday 7th., told of the accident whereby a little girl was thrown down and hurt, in contact with an automobile. It has been stated in another paper that the machine was being driven on the wrong side of the street. This was not the case. The auto, going west, was passing the boulevard of St. John's church grounds. It happens that a little girl, one of a number playing there, darted across the street in front of the machine. The driver turned the auto sharply to the left, and, of course, when stopped, she had crossed the width of the street and was on the left side. This quick movement saved the child's life in all probability.

This near accident brings up the habit some children have of "daring" one another—to race across a street in front of an approaching machine. The little ones seem to think it an evidence of personal grit to offer and to do so. Hundreds of cases are mentioned and reported by drivers, but fortunately few bring injury to the child. But it puts the drivers of these vehicles in a constant state of nervous anticipation. What is the remedy is hard to define. The children in their play, have as much right to the street borders as the autoist. Back yard play is never attractive.

In the end the responsibility will fall where it should, on the autoist. He makes the danger. It is a peaceful zone until his machine is driven into it. Then peace flies away. Any one, man or woman, who goes out on the public streets, undertaking to run one of these things, must realize that only a turn of the wrist stands between disaster to both occupants and those on the street. There is too much "showing off" too much "get out of my way" too much "let her slide for what she is worth." Our streets, first of all must be made safe for the pedestrian, young or old, because there is so many of them. No consideration should be paid to the man or woman driving a car, when the safety of the foot passage is in question. If it comes to a point, and there is ever any doubt, rule the autos off the street altogether

The horse drawn vehicle announces its approach in many ways The auto steals up, the only warning being at the will of the driver to blow or not blow an impertinent whanging horn A week's experience on the asphalt paved street shows that the danger of being knocked down has increased fully 400 per cent

Children Presented Address to Bishop O'Brien

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien made his first visit as Bishop to St. Joseph's Separate School in Otonabee last week. Miss Black the teacher in charge had the school beautifully decorated for the occasion. One pupil on behalf of the rest of the children, read an address of welcome to which His Lordship made, a very suitable reply, urging them to be true to their school, true to their teacher and interested in their work. He also gave them his blessing.

His Lorship was accompanied by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart .

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

DR. HORNING LECTURE

Peterboro, Nov. 10, 1913.

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir— I have read Professor Horning's address, and, as the Examiner states he convinced the audience of his first hand information, (not imaginary) and of the soundness of the reasons he advanced to show that a war between England and Germany will never eventuate.

If this is true, why did the "Laurier" Government buy the Niobe and the Rainbow?

At the same time, I and many others are glad we did not constitute the audience

But what Professor Horning wants to do, is to convince the British Admiralty, the War Office, and Winston Chruchill, who are the people responsible for the safety of the Empire. If he can do so, it will save him lecturing here, there and everywhere. Probably they will not be convinced so easily as the audience.

He goes on to state that a great deal of what the papers said was true, and a great deal was not true. The German papers published exactly the same sort of articles on the subject as the English newspapers.

The English newspapers were saying that Germany was just waiting for an opportunity to pounce upon her.

I think under the above circumstances, it would have looked better in print if he had stated the Germans were just waiting to pounce on England and her colonies.

Still he admits a great deal of what the papers said was true. I certainly concur with Professor Horning, and I also believe that the German and English papers are stating the truth and acting honestly, also—it is not bombast on their part either, they are simply putting their own people on their guard and trying to avoid a war if possible, by the only alternative, i.e. "being prepared."

The stronger England is, in comparison with Germany, then and only then can I agree with Prof. Horning that war between England and Germany will never eventuate. But should England neglect to keep stronger and more powerful than Germany, (and her allies) then war may come sooner than expected.

The professor goes on and tells us that from the battle of 'Crecy" until the year 1904, England's chief enemy was France, whom she loves so well at the present moment. Mr. Editor please note (France is a Catholic Country) but she fought side by side with Germany—Protestant Germany—during that time; and it was to be remmbered that except for the timely arrival of "Blucher" and his German forces, at the battle of "Waterloo," Wellington might have been defeated instead of coming off victorious.

There was therefore a historical reason for the friendship of Germany and England, but none for the friendship now existing with France.

But what motives has Professor Horning in view? Surely as a professor, he is aware that France was our ally in the "Crimean War" and fought side by side with England, shared in the battles of "Inkerman" "Alma", "Balaclava, and siege of "Sevastopol." and for nearly 3 years stood the hardships of the "Crimean War," 1854.

Still he turns round and tells us—that from the battle of "Cerey" until the year 1904—England's chief enemy was France, whom England loves so well at the present moment.

Now, Mr. Editor, is it not a false and deceitful address, if my statement is true about the Crimea War? Surely Professor Horning is aware we had a Crimea War and that France was our ally?

He also informed the audience that in 1870 England was without a rival on the sea. Her flag floated on every sea, her merchants were in every port. But, why did he not add "but to-day Germany has kept your splendid fleets guarding your shores and compelled them to stay in the North Sea. Why?

I will not go into the "Agadir" incident or even Emperor William's telegram to the Boers, etc., etc.

Yours,

"H.M.S. THUNDERBOLT."

A PERFECT DAY

Of "Indian Summer," Nov. 7th, 1913.

(Specially written for The Review).

When summer's lovely reign is done,
And gorgeous autumn o'er;
It's goodly yield to garner won,
Of golden harvest store;
Then winter stands abash'd and still,
As if it fain would wait
And bow to summer's gentle will
Through autumn's golden gate!

And summer flings her tresses back,
And throws a parting kiss;
Exemplified—personified
In perfect days like this.

When sunshine, with its genial glow,
Bathes everything in gold;
While peace and warmth a mantle throw,
Nor hint that winter bold
Awaits the throne; o'er all the land
The softest azure bends,
Till dying day with starry wand
Its brunette beauty sends.

May mortals read from nature's tome,
While threading life's deep maze,
Its burdens, griefs and tears will come,
But also perfect days.
Life's vernal memories return
And summer-fragrance fills;
Love, hope and faith in glory burn
O'er autumn's bronzied hills!

RECEPTION TO REV. G. STANLEY RUSSELL AND HIS BRIDE

Mr. John Allan, Gilmour street, has received a newspaper report on a reception tendered to Rev. G. Charles Russell and Mrs. Russell at St. Annes-on-the-Sea, England. Rev. and Mrs. Russell visited this city after their marriage at St. Thomas, and Mr. Russell preached in St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Upwards of four hundred invitations to the reception were issued by Lady and Sir Charles McCara. A silver salver, which bore the following inscription, was presented:

"This salver is presented to the Rev. G. Stanley Russell, M.A., together with a cheque for £145, by the members of the church and congregation and Sunday school of the St. Annes-on-the-Sea Congregational Church, on the occasion of his marriage, 13th September, 1913."

FANCY WORK FOR CHILDREN

The children often come to you and ask for something to do, something to make, for a child's ideas are always creative. Here is some rainy day work for busy fingers:

A wall match holder can be made on a foundation of cardboard cut out in a diamond, the upper portion of which is much larger than the lower. Fold the two lower ends upward so as to form a pocket and cover the whole with silk or any bright colored fabric. Then bind with heavy cord and attach a ring to hang it up by.

A hanging pincushion is also easily made. Cut out two pieces about five or six inches square from bristol board and cover one with figured material and one with plain. Sew them together and then bend the square thus formed into a cornucopia shape, with the plain side as the lining. Bind with cord and leave a loop to hang by. Fill with absorbent cotton or with bran all the way to the top and sew silk tightly over it. Cotton is better, as bran is rather heavy.

A button penwiper may be made by cutting a circle of bright colored silk, buttonholed to cardboard or cartridge paper, and then several other circles of chamois a bit smaller. Fasten all together with a large ornamental button. Even the smallest child can make this.

A simple footstool should be made of a strong wooden box with the lid nailed firmly down. Screw on small casters and pad the top of the box. Cover with coarse canvas. Now cut out a piece of brocade in the shape of a cross and large enough to cover the tops and sides of the box after padding. Nail this down and finish off the edges by furniture gimp held down by tiny brass tacks. This is something for the boys to make.

COMPLIMENTS FOR GRAND TRUNK RY.

Recently the Grand Trunk ran a special train from Chicago to Boston and return, to accommodate the delegates from the different Bankers' Association of the Northwestern States Since their return the Company have been in receipt of several letters of commendation in regard to the service. The following being abstracts from two of these.

The Secretary of the South Dakota Bankers' Association writes as follows:

"The writer just returned with his wife from a trip to the American Bankers' Convention held in Boston and takes this opportunity to express his appreciation of the excellent service your Company rendered our party. The equipment was all that could be desired and I have never seen the dining service excelled."

The Secretary of the Minnesota Bankers' Association writes:

"As one of the passangers of the Northwestern Bankers' Chicago-Boston Special, I wish to express my appreciation of the service furnished by your road and by the courteous attention of the employees. I was very agreeably surprised at the dining car service throughout the whole trip and it gives me pleasure to acknowledge the excellence of your service and accommodation." 17

COLD COMFORT.

It Came After the Little Faker Had Got His Punishment.

The east end small boy had sadly misbehaved and was locked in his room. Pretty soon his mother heard him calling.

"Muvver," said the shrill voice, "I'm goin' to bust the window and fall out!"

The mother made no reply. Again the shrill voice arose:

"Muvver, I've found some matches an' I'm goin' to set fire to the curtains."

The mother remained indifferent Once more the voice hailed her:

"Muvver, don't you smell sumfin burnin'?" Even this drew no response.

"If you don't smell nothin'," the voice went on, "it's 'cause I pulled off all th' match heads an' swallowed 'em an' I'm goin' to die. Do you hear that muvver; I'm goin' to die."

By this time the mother was thoroughly incensed, and, hastily preparing a cup of mustard and hot water, she hurried upstairs.

"If you've swallowed match heads," she announced, "you'll have to swallow this to keep them company." And then she poured the nauseating stuff down his throat.

A little later the aggravating youngster, sadder, wiser and much humbled concluded to take the balance of his punishment in silence.

"I didn't really swallow the matches muvver," he contritely explained.

"I knew you didn't, sonny," replied the mother.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HIS BACKING WAS GOOD.

And President Tyler Found a Place For Old Jack Dade.

President Tyler had a curious office seeking experience at the very beginning of his administration. Old Jack Dade, a character about Washington who had been the president's classmate at college, went to the White House, and said he, "Jack, I want an office."

"You do?" said President Tyler "What office on earth do you think you are fit for?"

"Why, one o' these 'sinecurees' I hear so much about—no work and good pay," Dade promptly replied.

"Well, Jack," said Tyler deprecatingly, "you know that I am president now and must have some kind of warrant for making an appointment. Can you get anybody to indorse you? Could you bring me a letter of recommendation?"

"Oh, yes," said Dade. "I'm fixed for that," and he produced a letter of four pages written by Tyler himself to President Harrison, whom he had just succeeded, urging the claims of his dear friend and classmate, Colonel John W. Dade, for a good, fat office "Cast your eye over that!" he exclaimed in triumph.

Tyler read the letter attentively to the end, folded it carefully and said "Jack, your backing is irresistible Come up here tomorrow, and I'll have a place for you."

The next day Colonel John W. Dade was appointed keeper of the Federal prison of the District of Columbia.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Jealousy will not listen to reason; because it doesn't believe there is such a thing.

TON OF COAL FOR EACH OF FIVE PERSONS

Five Estimates of 2850 lbs. at Hicks' Estimating Contest

At the big coal estimating contest held on Saturday afternoon by 1d Hicks, over 1,000 persons were present and 400 handed in estimates. One part of the program was a demonstration of the new elevator. A contractor's wagon was loaded and when the estimating was completed the load was weighed on the market scales. The coal itself weighed 2,848 pounds. There were five estimates of 2,850 lb. and as this was the closest these persons won. They were:—J Brown, 599 Homewood Ave.; I. Boddison, 675 Patterson street; F. W Adlam 515 Bolivar St.; James Curtin, 66 Union St., and O. H. McGee, 590 Downie street.

There were 52 estimates at between 2,800 and 2,900 which was rather close, some of the closest were John Riddell, 550 Homewood, Ave. 2,855; Mrs Kelleher, 261 Romaine St., 2,840; H. Anderson, 168 Stewart St., 2,860, and Jas. Collinson 564 Sherbrooke St., 2,865.

Owing to the large number of estimates which were near the actual weight and of the success of the contest, Mr. Hicks has decided to give one ton of coal to each of the five nearest instead of dividing three tons according to the advertisement.

A special prize was given to Mrs. Keleher, Romaine street, who gave an estimate of 2,840 lbs.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Feet.

Pumice stone used frequently keeps the skin of the feet smooth. It is especially necessary on the heel and on the ball of the foot, where the weight of the body rests in walking.

Never cut the toe nails too short, as they are more likely to become ingrown. And file them smooth with sandpaper, so they will not catch and pull the threads of your stockings.

Appropriate Excuse.

"Before the establishment of righteous courts and trials by jury where justice could be obtained," explained the teacher, "persons suspected of certain crimes were tried by what was known as the 'ordeal.' One of these was the 'ordeal of fire.' Hot plowshares were laid at short intervals along the victim's path, and the suspected person was blindfolded and compelled to walk over them. If he succeeded in doing it without stepping on the hot irons he was deemed innocent. But if he received burns he was adjudged guilty. Who would submit to such an ordeal now? Johnny, would you?"

"No, ma'am," said Johnny.

"And why not?"

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

THERE really isn't much in the way of women's garments to which a fashionable touch of fur cannot be added this season. It has even been seen adorning lingerie. It makes vests for tailored suits, is used to hem or pipe their skirt flounces or to make revers and cuffs. On evening dresses it borders filmiest materials—tulle or chiffon—in narrow bands that outline ruffles and tunics. In day and evening coats it adorns in boas, shaped neckpieces, all edges and the deep cuffs. Hats are decorated with fur, are made of it or have barbaric ornaments that are a combination of beads and fur. On crêpe de Chine underwear it shows up, a tiny threadlike line, heading lace frills.

Coats are not lined so much with it, for fur pelts are so beautifully worked that even the modest little animals that used to furnish such furs have taken on such an elegant and attractive air that they are used for the garment itself.

It is difficult to recognize some of the lowly little fur bearing animals in the brilliant pelts that are made into fur apparel of indescribable elegance. Broadtail, Hudson seal and muskskin—there you have the [illegible] the principal furs used to make the fur coats and wraps for daytime wear this season. Caracul, also worked so beautifully that it looks almost as lovely as broadtail, is made up by the best furriers on the latest approved style lines. THE SPORTING WORLD

'TIS SAID SHAUGHNESSY WAS AFTER WHITE CAPS' SHORTSTOP

It has just transpired, says the London Advertiser, that Manager Frank Shaughnessy, of the Ottawa Baseball Club, tried to land a good shortstop for next season by the draft route. Shaughnessy went after no less a player than Harry Brant, of the Peterboro Club, who was a member of London's first Canadian League team, but was released the following season by Manager Bowerman. The Fort Wayne Club put in a draft for Brant, just as they put in a draft for Bramble, but the draft for Brant was disallowed. The Chattanooga Club, of the Southern League, beat Fort Wayne to Brant, and he goes there.

It was undoubtedly an attempt of Shaughnessy's to secure Brant for his 1914 Ottawa team. Fort Wayne secured Bramble by draft, but there is little doubt that the former Berlin catcher will be seen in an Ottawa uniform next season.

RUGBY

The recently organized P.C.I. Old Boys have been unsuccessful in arranging a game of rugby with the P.C.I. team, but they have arranged a game with the Lindsay Collegiate in Lindsay next Saturday.

In preparation for the trip a meeting and signal practice will be held to-morrow afternoon at Central Park, weather permitting, and if the weather is bad it will be held in St. Alphonsus Lyceum at 4.40.

The following players are requested to be present: Smith, Phelan, Denison, Meldrum, Libson, Minorgan, Huston, E. Kelly, Mills, Lees, Fee, Legendre, Halpin, and any other Old Boys who are residing in the city.

WESTERN CANADA LEAGUE CLUB LOST MONEY

In the Western Canada Baseball League this past season Moose Jaw broke even; Calgary lost $6,500; Medicine Hat lost $4,000; Regina lost $4,100; Saskatoon made $7,000, according to the delegates. Edmonton was $1,000 to the good.

President Nelson, of the Brantford Club wants $5,000 for the Canadian League franchise.

James T. Sutherland states that the prospects are good for two strong teams to represent Kingston Frontenacs this winter.

The construction work on the new rink in Woodstock is being rushed, and it is expected that it will be complete by January 1.

STORES ON THE "LINE"

THE BOUNDARY EMPORIUM IS AN INGENIOUS DEVICE.

Where an Imaginary Barrier Separates the Dominion of Canada From the United States Shrewd Dealers Have Built Shops and the Goods of Two Nations Are Found Under One Roof.

A writer in The Montreal Standard tells in a recent article how he was once asked by an "inland" Canadian what marks the International Boundary—were there gates, or bars or guards at the points where the King's highways cross the "Line," run north or south, pass into the States, and become the highways of our neighbors. The questioner was inland born. He has always lived on a farm in Pontiac County, and the only boundary he had seen was that separating his county from the county of Renfrew—his province from the Province of Ontario. And it is a boundary that none could fail to observe and respect—the Ottawa, broad, deep, swift and turbulent. That boundary nature has set, and none can move or efface it. But what about the boundary along thousands of miles of our southern frontier, where there is no natural demarkation, and the "Line," like the parallels of latitude and the meridians of longitude, is a thing of compass and science, and of treaty too? What indicates it; what marks the southern edge of our Dominion and the northern edge of their Union?

The inland enquirer thought of gates and bars and guards. There are none; and yet the line is marked, and if one knows where to look for the markers he will know when he crosses the line. If he does not observe the markers and is not familiar with the locality, he might cross the line and travel for several miles beyond it to the north or south without knowing that he had passed from one country to the other—from the Province of Quebec into the State of Vermont or the State of New Hampshire, from a part of the British Empire into a part of the United States. It is easy to know when one crosses the line; it is also easy for one unfamiliar with the frontier to cross it without being aware of the fact.

There is no gate to open, no bars to put down, no guards to encounter. The road is open, and it runs straight from one country into the other like any other bit of road thereabouts, but with one all-important difference: beside the road and exactly on the line stands the "iron post," and when it has been passed the traveler has changed countries. If he has seen the post he will be aware of the fact; if he has not seen it and is unfamiliar with the locality he will go his way ignorant of the line.

One of the curious institutions of our International Line is the "line store"—a sort of half and half store, that is, one half in the United States and one-half in Canada. There are dwelling houses built in the same fashion, so that their occupants lead double lives so far as nationality of domicile is concerned. For instance, where the highway leading from Philipsburg, in Missisquoi county, Province of Quebec, to Highgate Springs, in Franklin county, Vermont, crosses the line, there stands one of those half-and-half houses — a new one, which is rather remarkable, for, as a rule, the line houses were built years ago. This one is comparatively new, and it belongs to and is occupied by a man who owns farms on either side of the line that here meet. His landed property is divided by the International Line and possibly to preserve symmetry, he built his house across the line. His meals are prepared in a Vermont kitchen and eaten in a Vermont dining-room; he reads his newspaper and smokes his pipe in a Canadian sitting-room, and he takes his rest in a Canadian bedroom. In such an environment one should be able to take a broad and comprehensive view of international problems.

The line-store is an old institution, the age of many of the buildings telling this. The men who devised them, and who built and maintained the first ones, must have been as bold as they were enterprising, for there is something about the arrangement that seems to suggest defiance of the revenue laws, and if not defiance, at least a disposition to play with them. That, of course, applies only to the line-stores of long ago, when people forgot the tariffs and smuggled both ways. That was in the past, for who ever hears of smuggling now?

All along the frontier, but particularly the older settled frontier from Compton county on the east to Dundee in Huntingdon county on the west, where the line strikes the St. Lawrence, these line-stores are to be found, still carrying on an international business in a comparatively small way, and thereby serving a number of the inhabitants of two countries.

They are much of the one type—in fact, the usual country store found at cross roads and in small villages. In the front are two windows and a door and through the centre of the doorway runs the imaginery line that separates the two countries that occupy this part of the continent. Inside are two counters running lengthwise, so that one counter and the shelves behind it are in Canada, and the other counter and the other set of shelves are in the United States, and so from cellar to attic there is the division of goods on the national basis.

In the cellar the barrel of coal oil is rolled up against the Canadian wall, the barrel of kerosene is rolled up against the American wall. Upstairs shelves on one side hold Canadian print, those on the other side hold American calico. And so through the whole stock—the rival products of the two countries meet here under a common room in friendly rivalry.

Do they never mingle? Do the principles of free trade never prevail here when the customer and the merchant are alone, and a Canadian customer decides that he will purchase the cheaper American kerosene across the cellar, or the American customer guesses that he will try some of the Canadian woollen goods on the [illegible] shelves? These are the secrets of the line-store.

Swallowed It.

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish Bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold, and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a highfalutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

THEY INSIST ON FAIR PLAY.

Russian Women Demand Educational Freedom and Are Winning Out.

If ever Alexander II. of Russia met on his walks a girl student in spectacles and Garibaldian cap he began to tremble, thinking that she must be a Nihilist, bent on killing him. His hatred of women who endeavored to obtain higher education to fit themselves for the service of the masses would have been ludicrous if it had not been such a serious thing for the women themselves.

And yet even the prejudice of kings could do no more than temporarily shock the feminine march to educational freedom. Recent events show that woman's part in public life has grown to the proportions of a mass movement with the awakening of human conscience, and that Russian women are actually making as much progress as the women of other European countries. The University of Tomsk has petitioned the Minister of Education to enable women of Siberian birth to graduate in medicine and an important congress in St. Petersburg, presided over by the ex-Minister of Education, and comprising 1,000 delegates, has suggested many reforms that will render the path of women's education less thorny.

It is a psychological effect of the recognition of woman's advance that they have spontaneously developed an amazing ability, courage and organizing power. The fact that there are now about a thousand Russian women practicing as doctors is sufficient justification for their advent into that profession.

The question of admitting women to the bar was recently raised by the appearance of a lady, whom the St. Petersburg Bar Association had accepted as a member, as attorney in a criminal case. The prosecuting attorney refused to proceed with the case, holding that women under Russian law were not authorized to practice and he was supported by the Imperial Senate. Over 100 women have qualified as lawyers and they are making great efforts to obtain a footing in the legal profession. There is urgent need for their services in wide areas where the population of the country districts is entirely without legal advice. The agitation to obtain that reform is powerfully supported and a large and influentially attended meeting has been held in St. Petersburg to protest against the continued exclusion of women.

A LITTLE REBEL

By ALBERT TUCKER KENYON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the spring of 1863, when the Federal General Rosecrans was confronting the Confederate General Bragg at Murfreesboro, Tenn., I was a captain in the —th Ohio regiment of that army. One morning while I was officer of the picket post deployed on either side of the turnpike leading directly south a young girl of fifteen or sixteen came to me and asked me to let her go through the lines to her home, which she said was about a mile down the pike. I told her that I had no authority to do so, but if she would go to headquarters very likely she would get a pass.

She said that she had been to headquarters, but the general was busy and she was pressed for time. She had come up to town to get some medicine a doctor had prescribed for her mother, who was at the point of death. She looked so distressed, turning a pair of heavenly blue eyes upon me beseechingly, that I was sorely tempted to disobey orders and let her go through. War is very hard on the people of the country where the armies are contending, and I confess I had no stomach for that part of it. The girl saw I was weakening and exercised all her persuasive faculties upon me.

"While I am waiting here," she wailed, wringing her hands, "mother may be dying."

The brutality of keeping her under the circumstances was a little more than I could bear. It was several miles back to the town where were the army headquarters, the girl looked tired, and two or three hours would necessarily be consumed if I forced her to go there to make another application for a pass.

"Can you see your house from here?" I asked.

"You can just see the chimney over the hill. There it is, on the right side of the turnpike."

"I'll go with you."

I expected an outburst of gratitude. Instead she threw up her hands in protest.

"Not for the world would I get you into trouble. A Confederate vedette is stationed on the road right in front of our house. You would be captured."

Her unwillingness to implicate me enhanced my desire to serve her, but it also tended to add to my uncertainty as to what to do. My orders were to let no one go beyond our line who did not have a pass. To disobey such an order would render me liable to a very severe punishment. But I was young and full of chivalry. Would it not be better for me to take the risk upon myself than keep this poor girl from carrying medicine to her dying mother? My offer to accompany her was that I might be able to state that I had not let her out of my keeping while beyond our lines. Since it was evident from what she told me as to the proximity of the vedette that this plan would not serve I was at a loss to decide what other course to pursue.

The girl kept wringing her hands and moaning till she almost set me wild with indecision between the dictates of my heart and my duty.

"If I let you go," I said to her, "and it is known by my superiors I shall be court martialed and doubtless suffer some severe penalty."

She stood for a moment thinking, then said: "Suppose I start to run. You follow me and at last give up the chase."

"No," I said. "I will either let you go through openly, disobeying orders, or not at all."

"Oh, do let me go!" she pleaded. "While you are detaining me you are withholding from my mother what may save her."

"Well," I said at last, "I'll risk it. Go ahead."

She gave me a grateful look, and I saw in it at the same time something of pain or regret. I was looking her straight in the face, on each side of which were two puffs such as were in vogue in women's hairdressing at the time. These puffs were, I believe, usually rolled over something to give them their shape. There was a break in the puff on one side of the girl's head, and a thin line of something white, over which it had been rolled, was visible.

A suspicion struck me.

"One moment," I said.

I reached for the puff and held on to it till I had taken out some crumpled white paper. Smoothing it out, I saw on it writing and figures. A brief examination showed me that it embraced estimates of each division of our Army of the Cumberland, giving its exact position.

"This is the medicine," I said to the girl, "that you are carrying to your sick mother."

There was no reply, only a look of disappointment and vexation that her scheme had failed.

"Corporal," I cried, "take this girl in to general headquarters and this paper also. Say that the girl was trying to get through the lines with it." Then to the girl, "You must have a seared conscience to practice such deception."

"Not at all," she replied. "I was trying to help our cause and thousands of our people and our brave boys. I am sorry I failed."

"And I rejoice that you did. Next time I shall not be so chicken hearted."

I never heard if she were punished; probably not. The next day we moved out on the Tullahoma campaign.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

Ireland's Population Increases For First Time In 70 Years.

That the tide of Irish national life, which has been steadily ebbing for seventy-five years, has turned, and that the "old sod" promises to take on new vigor, is the claim made by Francis J. Kilkenny, originator of Irish home-going movement.

In a statement to the press a year ago he asserted that a new era had already dawned for Ireland, which is now substantiated by figures of the recent Irish census. To-day he is out with new calculations which show that for the first time in more than 70 years the population of Ireland is increasing. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1912, it appears that the birth rate exceeded by 1,102 the loss by death and emigration. For the same time the deaths from all causes were the lowest since 1871, and the infant mortality the lowest ever recorded, being only 86 in every 1,000.

"The population of Ireland was at high-water mark in 1841, the official figures for that year being 8,175,124," says Mr. Kilkenny. "Between 1841 and 1851 the loss by death and emigration amounted to over 1,600,000. Census statistics for the ten years ended in 1861 showed a decrease of over 11 per cent.; in 1874 the returns showed a 6 1-2 per cent decrease; in 1881, about 4 1-2 per cent.; in 1891, a 9 per cent., and in 1901, 5 per cent. For the decade ended 1911 it was only about 1 1-2 per cent., and now for a single year there is shown an increase instead of the constant decrease.

The census returns of April 2, 1911, make the total population 4,290,310, viz.: 2,192,048 males, 2,198,171 females, being a decrease from the prior census of 68,556, or the smallest since the decade 1871-1881. So it is shown that Ireland at the time of her low tide has about half the population that she had 72 years ago, and that she is therefore the only country in the civilized world whose population has been terribly depleted through restrictive legislation.

"Ireland has suffered a heavy loss from emigration. The drain upon her population in this direction even during the past five years averages thirty thousand annually.

"From May 1, 1851, to March 31, 1911, nearly 4,200,000 natives of Ireland emigrated to other countries. The larger portion of these emigrants were between the ages of 15 and [illegible] years.

"One good sign of Ireland's growing prosperity is the increase in the number of inhabited houses. The number of inhabited houses in 1911 was reported as 361,879, or an increase of 2,721 over the returns for 1901, while the returns also show that a better and more modern class of cottages is being built than in former years. Another sign promising great things for the future of Ireland is that the vast estates formerly held by absentee landlords are now being cultivated by the Irish occupants of the soil, who, under the land act of 1901, and subsequent acts, have become the owners thereof. The land acts of 1903 and 1909, the laborers' cottage act of 1906 and the old-age pension act of 1908 were enabling measures which have given much relief and encouragement to the Irish people."

Perhaps joy cometh in the morning, but none to the chap who has made a night of it.

A JOYOUS OCCASION FOR CENTREVILLE PRESBYTERIANS

THE NEW MINISTER INDUCTED

(Written for the Review by Mr. Robert Harrison.)

The Presbytery of Peterborough convened in special session in Centreville Church at 2.30 o'clock Friday, 7th Nov., 1913, and was duly constituted with prayer by Rev. H J. Keith, M.A., B.D. Rev. H J. Keith, who in the unavoidable absence of Rev. G. A. Brown, B.D., was appointed Moderator, pro tempore. Rev. Robert Pogue, minister of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough; Rev. T. W. Goodwill, B. A., minister of the united pastoral charge of Keene and Westwood, ministers.

Rev. Professor Arthur S. Morton, B. D., Professor of Church History in Knox College, Toronto, being present, was invited to sit and deliberate as a corresponding member of Presbytery, and with them, Messrs. Larmer, Steele, Armstrong and Harrison, elders.

In the unavoidable absence of Rev. D. A. Thomson, clerk of Presbytery, Mr. Robert Harrison, elder, was appointed clerk, pro tempore.

The Presbytery forthwith proceeded, in due form, with the induction of Rev. A. H. McConachie into the ministry and care of the united pastoral charge of Centreville and Stewart Memorial Churches, rendered vacant in August of this year, by the acceptance of a call to Rev. D. A. McKenzie, B.A., to Churchill in the Presbytery of Barrie.

The moderator presided, and being also interim moderator of the Session of Centreville and Stewart Memorial Churches, he narrated the steps taken in procuring the call to Rev. Mr. McConachie to the ministry of these united congregations.

Rev. T. W. Goodwill preached the induction sermon from the text in Psalm 92; 12th to 15th verses, using Psalm selection 86 and hymns 105 and 301 in the service of praise led by Professor Kenyon, organist and leader of Psalmody in Knox Church, Peterborough.

The moderator then received from Rev. Mr. McConachie full and satisfactory answers to the questions in the formula for the induction of ministers, and then engaged in solemn induction prayer and in the name of the King and Head of His Church, and by authority of the Presbytery of Peterborough declared Rev. Mr. McConachie duly inducted into the ministry and pastoral care of these congregations. The moderator and members of Presbytery then gave the right hand of fellowship to Mr. McConachie, welcoming him to membership in the Presbytery and citizenship in Canada.

Rev. R. Pogue then addressed the newly inducted minister, in clear, sympathetic manner, presenting the duties and responsibilities of the pastorate in a great and growing church in this great Dominion. Mr. Harrison addressed the people of this excellent rural charge, after which the entire audience arose and sang hymn No. 613, and this part of the induction services was concluded by the moderator pronouncing the benediction. The office-bearers were then introduced to the pastor. Rev. R. Pogue conducted Rev. Mr. McConachie, who was accompanied by Mrs. McConachie, to the vestibule of the church where, assisted by the office-bearers, he introduced the members and adherents present to Mrs. McConachie and to Mr. McConachie as their pastor.

At the conclusion of this important, solemn and impressive service—so dear to the memories and hearts of Presbyterians the wide world over—the office-bearers, at the behest of the lady managers, extended a hearty invitation, accompanied by tickets of free admission to members of Presbytery, to the banquet spread so amply in the Sabbath School building directly across the street from the church. The invitation to this important function was gratefully accepted, and it goes without saying that full justice was done to the abundance of the good things of this life—the excellence of quality preparation and the exquisite service of which drew forth many expressions of unqualified appreciation from the hundreds of good judges present, and of their sincere thanks to the ladies for their anticipation of the wants of the outer man, and for their perfect abandon of willingness in the valued services rendered by them in these and in other respects on this occasion.

On rising from the banquet the great congregation, whose numbers ran well up beyond the lone of the hundreds, led by the moderator, reassembled, in masses, in groups, or pairs—as heart sentiment directed—on the street, on the white, well-finished cement walks and church-front dias, or on the margins of fresh, velvety grass leading into the country. It was twilight now, the moon near the full, a soft, south breeze blew; well:—To the hour appointed for another change in the program (7.30 p.m.) they engaged in cheery conversation and reminiscences of similar occasions in days gone by in company of many now fallen on sleep in the neighboring cemetery or gone west to establish new households.

A Loyal Congregation

The Centreville congregation is one of the best country congregations in the province. It is made up of the finest families Canada can boast of. The men are genuine energetic and loyal. The church equipment is one of the best. It comprises a very well built Sunday School Hall, and a church with vestry and choir room attached. The church has been lately renovated, furnished with modern pews and heated with steam. The Manse is undergoing extensive alterations, making it as up-to-date as any town house. All this is in demonstration of a people up-to-date in church work and determined to make the new minister's life as effective as possible. The same can be said of Stewart Memorial, which was formerly connected with St. Paul's church.—An appreciation by Rev. H J. Keith, minister of Knox Presbyterian Church.

At the hour appointed Rev. Mr. McConachie took the chair. Rev. Professor Morton was conducted by the Moderator of Presbytery to the seat of honor. The Moderator and Revs Pogue and Goodwill also occupied seats on the platform. The pulpit, a moveable one, disappeared for the occasion. Professor Kenyon, accompanied by Miss Meiklejohn, of Campbellford, were conducted to seats of honor in the choir, filled to its utmost capacity by well trained voices chosen from the membership of the great congregation, and supported by the organ under the skilful touch of a young lady. The chairman announced the opening number on the program for this never-to-be-forgotten occasion, and the hundreds of voices present in unison engaged in singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The audience was next entertained with rare excellence by Prof. Kenyon in selections, appealing to lovers of the loftiest ideals in sacred song. 'Fear Ye Not, Oh Israel," etc., and being in fine voice, he responded heartily to each call before the lights from the whole-souled, musical, well-trained and appreciative audience. Interspersed with the numbers by Prof. Kenyon were many exquisite selections by Miss Meiklejohn, who, in that inimitable style and voice, and whole-souled abandon of manner, so peculiarly her own, so captivated the audience with her rendering of famous numbers from Auld Scotia's past masters in vocal song that the encore calls from platform, choir and pews brought her again and again, bounding like a gentle fawn before the lights, and with each succeeding response holding the rapt attention of the audience to their full conclusion.

Addresses were given by Revs Goodwill and Pogue, who delivered themselves in style and vim and well calculated to relieve conditions, physical and mental, imagined by some to have been partially created and brought to notice through unfeigned appreciation and possession of the rich beauties of the banqueting hall.

Legends by the 'Live. Irishman,' illustrative of many national characteristics, were pitted against similar legends from the lips of the sturdy bronzed native of the Island of Sants, and all were carefully sandwiched between wholesome numbers by the choir. The Moderator, Rev. H. J. Keith, gave an able resume of the short and happy acquaintance he has with Rev. Mr. McConachie, and of the good things, cheering, comforting, spiritual, which, from fully happy experience during the terms of his Interim Moderatorship of session of Centreville and Stewart Memorial churches, he predicted were in store for Mrs. McConachie and their interesting young family at the hands of the warm-hearted, wise-headed, willing farmers, and their still more excellent wives, aided by the sons and daughters in the homes of his parishioners. The Moderator concluded his thoughtful, encouraging address by stating his well grounded opinion, based on experience, that the Centreville and Stewart Memorial congregations formed one of the finest and noblest rural pastoral charges to be found within the bounds of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, and earnestly congratulated Rev. Mr. McConachie and these two worthy congregations on the consummation of the marriage tie, wishing them many years of usefulness and happy progress together.

Rev. Professor Morton then delivered a clear, concise, beautiful historical statement of the time, circumstances and manner—while pursuing a special course of studies in Church History, in London, England—under which he was first made acquainted with the name, reputation and excellent work accomplished through the ministrations of Rev. Mr. McConachie in the congregation then under his pastoral care in the town of Ayr, Scotland. Also of letters of brotherly good-will and of great need of consecrated services of men of scholarly culture, well grounded in the faith of the pure gospel of Jesus Christ, and who was not afraid of the honest, hard work essential to the fuller supplying of the pulpits of vacant pastoral charges, and the more effective many of the rapidly expanding Home and Foreign Mission Fields of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. The Rev. Professor also told of letters of invitation written by himself to Rev. M. McConachie to visit him in London, and afterward in his work in the chair of Church History in Knox College, Toronto in the event of Mr. McConachie seeing his way clear to come to Canada. Previous to this Prof. Morton and Mr. McConachie had not met personally. Prof. Morton, at a moment's notice, had responded to a call to the chair of Church History in Knox College, Toronto, but previous to this had visited Ayr, Scotland, in expectation of seeing Mr. McConachie, only to find that he had gone on his 1912 holiday to Canada, and on his taking Professional duties in Knox College, Toronto, he found to his surprise that Rev. Mr. McConachie had just recently returned to Scotland. Correspondence was renewed between them, and he learned that Mr. McConachie had received a call from Three Rivers, Presbytery of Quebec, which, after mature consideration, he had declined. As the great need for additional workers of the right kind in the fields of the Church in Canada became more fully known to Prof Morton his letters of invitation to Mr McConachie to "Come over and help us," became more frequent and more forcibly urgent, and the replies indicated that conditions in the Canadian Church were occupying more and more of Mr. McConachie's prayerful attention.

Thus autumn and Winter passed, and the genial springtime brought Prof Morton the happy intelligence of Mr. McConachie's decision to submit his papers, through Prof. Morton, to the Presbytery of Toronto, for application to the Committee of General Assembly for Reception of Ministers from other Churches. The papers were duly presented. Rev. Mr. McConachie again took passage and appeared before the Committee of Assembly in Toronto, where he was in the unanimous and most hearty Christian manner received into the ministry of our beloved Presbyterian Church in Canada. The call from Centreville and Stewart Memorial Churches to Rev. Mr. McConachie being characterized by the most complete and sympathetic unanimity and appealing to call concerned as in very truth it is a call inspired and directed by the Spirit of God was by Mr. McConachie accepted as such with Christ-like faith and trust. Accordingly, when the Presbytery of Peterborough met in St. James' Square Church, Toronto, on 15th October, at meeting of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, Mr. McConachie appeared in person for the first time there; the court then examined, considered and agreed that the call is a regular Gospel call, at once placing it in the hands of Mr. McConachie for final consideration, and receiving his declaration of acceptance, proceeded to make the arrangements for his induction as it was consummated to-day.

Mr McConachie addressed the congregation in terms and spirit of kindly Christian hope and encouragement and after prayer by the Moderator, songs of praise to God, requested Rev. Prof Morton to conclude the exercises of the day with the benediction.

DR. MARSH HAS CALL

From Holstein — Springville Wants Him to Stay

Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, has received a unanimous call from Holstein, Durham, Ont.

It will be remembered he handed in his resignation at the recent Presbytery, when the changes were made in the Springville appointment, with the object of giving them an opportunity of recalling him to the work if the people desired him to stay.

Dr Marsh is therefore in a strait betwixt two, as a deputation from Springville is to wait upon the Presbytery this week to oppose his translation and retain him in the work which he has served so faithfully for the last 9 years.

DEDICATION FESTIVAL SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

The continuation of the dedication festival services of St. John's church were conducted yesterday by Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald of Kingston, who preached two eloquent and inspiring sermons. His morning subject was "Praise and Thanksgiving." In the evening he preached from the text; "sleep on now—arise let us be going"

Mrs. Fitzgerald has an Irish charm of manner and expression, being a native of Ireland. He referred to the great opportunities of St. John's church in being situated in the heart of a progressive city like Peterboro.

Speaking of the progress of Canada, he said when Canadians point out to him all the marvels of Canada, its beauties and resources, it sounds strange to his Irish ears. When they point out the great chain of lakes, the enormous forests, the vast rich prairies, the mighty Rockies, and how it all stretches from "sea to sea," he cannot help thinking that it was all there before the Canadian came.

The sermon was a very powerful one and was a call to Canadians to make the best of their opportunities—"Arise let us be going."

PIANO RECITAL

Brilliant Work by Pupils at Conservatory

In the Peterborough Conservatory on Saturday afternoon a pianoforte recital was given by four pupils of Mr. Gliddon. Stanley McGee played "Abend Glocken" by Reinike. Miss Helen Porter played "Barcarolle," by Chikowski. Miss Evelyn Johnson, of Port Hope, played Chopin's "Berceuse" in D flat and a transcription of Walter's prize song from the Meister's Singers, by Wagner. Miss Gwen Smith gave a brilliant rendering of the "Two Larks," and Ma Bien Anee, by Shutt.

The program was given entirely from memory and the execution reflects great credit upon the tutor, Mr. Gliddon. These Saturday Twilight Recitals are a great help to the pupils and are a treat to all music lovers.

SCRAMBLE FOR A SUPPER.

Dainty Methods of French Solons When Free Meals Are Served.

Describing the supper arrangements made for French legislators during late sittings in the Palais Bourbon, the Paris Liberte says:

"At the appointed time the marble tables in the restaurant are covered with plates of larded veal, saveloys, cold ham, salad containing little cubes of Gruyere cheese and baskets of bread. As soon as the chamber gets wind of these preparations a general exodus takes place, and the member addressing the house is left to address his successor, the president, the ushers, reporters and other melancholy officials.

"It is not exactly a stately banquet that the legislators sit down to. There are no knives, no forks and in the place of plates just a few saucers. The members first fling themselves upon the bread baskets and pick the nicest looking pieces; then, making free use of their elbows toward the veal, the saveloys or the ham, seize a slice in their fingers, put it on the bread, keep it there with the thumb, while they squeeze their way out of the press and devour their spoil.

"Such manners take us back to far off prehistoric days, when our ancestors ate on the floor of their caverns. But it is just this return to the simplicity of nature that exercises such a healing effect on party animosity. The legislator who has, by a series of subtle maneuvers, secured a bottle of wine shares it with his thirsty neighbors.

"It has been noticed that the deputies from rural districts usually carry a pocketknife, which they lend to their town colleagues. This, too, makes for harmony and the healing up of strife."

"O that men's ears should be to counsel deaf, but not to flattery" — TIMON OF ATHENS

TWENTY-EIGHT MEN ARE IN DANGER ON VESSEL

Unknown Steamer is Ashore off Manitou Island, Lake Superior—Tomlinson Liner is Wrecked off Crosse Cap Point But Cannot be Beached—Huronic Also Reported in Trouble.

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 11. — In the face of a 50-mile gale, shifting from northeast to northwest, on Lake Superior last night, fear is expressed for the safety of the crew, numbering 28 men, aboard a steamer stranded on Gull Rock, off Manitou Island, at the extreme end of Keweenaw Point. The life-saving crew at Eagle Harbor is trying to make a run for the wreck.

The life-savers, after a three hours' battle with the heavy seas, a stiff wind on shore, and a snowstorm, were baffled yesterday, principally because they were not equipped with a power boat.

The steamer was sighted Saturday afternoon by the steamer George B. Stephenson, shortly after it went on the reef. The Stephenson could see the crew aboard the craft, but could not reach the wreck, and gave up the attempt after a struggle of six hours.

According to the Stephenson, the bow of the stranded boat is high on the reef and the stern deep in water, putting out the fires under the boilers. This morning Capt. McCormick and his life-saving crew left on the tug Hebard, taking with them a power boat with which an effort will be made to reach the wreck.

Another Steamer Wrecked.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 11.—Down-bound steamers continue to arrive heavily iced from the fierce storm which is sweeping over the lakes. Nearly a hundred steamers are now scattered between the Soo and Whitefish, awaiting for weather conditions to permit them to proceed. Yesterday afternoon reports of steamers in trouble began to come in.

The Superior last evening reported a Tomlinson line steamer wrecked off Gross Cap Point. Later, the McDougall, which reached the Soo last night, confirmed the report. The captain says he heard distress signals from the steamer yesterday afternoon. He tried to get to her, but on account of the heavy seas and strong wind had to give it up. The wreck's identity has not been clearly established, but it is thought to be either the Hartwell or the James E. Davidson. The captain of the McDougall said he was almost sure it was the Davidson. The steamer is lying decks to the waves. The crew are still on board as far as could be learned.

Another big steamer, unidentified, is reported aground on Point Iroquois last night.

Huronic Stranded?

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 11. — According to reports which have reached here by wireless, three other steamers are stranded at different points on Lake Superior and three craft are missing. The passenger steamer Huronic of the Northern Navigation Co. is stranded on Whitefish Point, and two steamers are reported ashore at Isle Royale and Copper Harbor. The watchman at the Portage Lake United States Ship Canal reports that the steamer Simon Langell and two consorts left there up-bound and have not been heard from.

Ten boats are in shelter at the ship canal's harbor of refuge, and three more at Bete Gris. No more boats can get into the ship canal because of the heavy seas.

Acadian Also Aground.

ALPENA, Mich., Nov. 11. — The steamer Acadian, a steel freighter, owned by the Merchants' Mutual Line of Toronto, is hard aground on a reef in Thunder Bay, seven miles off this port. Captain Robert McIntyre and his crew are believed to be safe on board.

Although the Acadian struck the reef about four o'clock Sunday afternoon, her predicament was not discovered until late yesterday.

Caravel Breaks Loose.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 11.—As one of the results of the severe wind and snowstorm which struck Erie Sunday night, the Santa Maria, a reproduction of Columbus' caravel of the same name, was torn from its moorings yesterday morning and carried on to a sandbar outside the harbor. Tugs worked all day trying to release the caravel, but gave it up last night and it is feared it will be impossible to save her. The Santa Maria and the Pinta and Nina, sister caravels, were in winter quarters here en route to San Francisco through the Panama Canal.

THREE ARE BURNED IN BAD WRECK

Victims of Wanstead Disaster Begged to be Killed.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 11.—Conductor Moffatt of Sarnia Tunnel, Brakeman Halloran of London, and Brakeman Stapleton of Sarnia, were killed, and Brakeman Ryckman, Engineer Hall and Fireman Holding of London, were seriously injured in a collision on the Grand Trunk at Wanstead early yesterday morning. The three met death when a freight train ran into the caboose and engine returning to the city "dead." The accident occurred a few miles west of Wyoming close to the scene of the disastrous wreck of some years ago.

The crash occurred shortly after five o'clock yesterday morning and was the result of the storm, which has been raging since Sunday. The men in the caboose were asleep at the time. Their bodies were burned in the wreck.

A few minutes after the collision fire broke out in the caboose and the three Sarnia men were burned to death before they could be liberated.

The moans and screams of the men as they lay pinioned under the heavy beams and trucks could be heard for a distance, and as the fire reached them they begged piteously to be killed. One man kept calling for someone to strike him over the head with an axe or something else. The members of the crew who were following worked frantically, but they could do nothing and were forced to stand helpless and watch their comrades die.

RICHELIEU CASE MUST GO TO TRIAL

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—The Richelieu election case must go to trial on its merits. The Supreme Court in a judgment handed down yesterday afternoon upholds the appeal of E. A. D. Morgan, the petitioner, from the judgment of Judge Bruneau, who dismissed the petition for lack of sufficient publication.

The sitting member is Arthur Cardin, Liberal, who was unseated before and re-elected.

To Discuss Safety at Sea.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The international conference for the greater security of life and property at sea opens here this week, and the merchant shipping advisory committee of the Board of Trade has been conducting an investigation into the question of better protection against fire on shipboard.

BEILISS ACQUITTED.

Accused In Ritual Murder Trial Convulsed With Emotion.

KIEV, Nov. 11.—Mendel Beiliss was last evening found not guilty of murdering young Yusbinsky, but, added the jury, "the crime was committed in the Zaiteff works," the brickyard in which Beiliss was employed.

This is the verdict returned shortly after six o'clock last night by the jury after two hours' deliberation.

When Beiliss was taken out of the prisoner's room of the court for the last time and brought along the dingy corridor, it was seen that his guards had bee increased to five soldiers. Two officers entered the dock with him. Beiliss was outwardly calm. The court was crowded, but the deepest silence followed the entry of the president and other judges. The jury then filed in, and the foreman advanced a few paces from the box and read the verdict.

Beiliss was standing with his hands on the dock rails. He seemed to be in a state of coma, but was striving to collect his wits and comprehend what was being said. When he realized the meaning of the verdict he fell back into his seat sobbing convulsively. His counsel approached the dock and shook hands with him warmly.

The strictest precautions had been taken to prevent unauthorized persons from gaining access to the court.

The trial of Mendel Beiliss, a Russian of the Hebrew faith, for the alleged murder for the purposes of "blood ritual" of Andrew Yushinsky, a Christian lad, began on Oct. 8.

The case had caused an immense sensation, which stirred the whole of Russia.

The letter was from Premier Borden and was one of congratulations on his coming birthday.

"He lives long that lives well, and time misspent is not lived, but lost," wrote Mr. Borden. "It is a long time up these 106 steps, and it must be gratifying to you to know that during all that period you have enjoyed the respect of those who knew you."

UNKNOWN LAKE STEAMER GOES DOWN NEAR SARNIA

Possibly Over Thirty Lives Have Been Lost in the Overturning of a 600-Foot Steel Vessel Whose Hull is Projecting From Water in Lake Huron.

Tug Returns After an All Night Watch Without Gaining New Information.

Canadian Press Despatch.

PORT HURON, Nov. 11— When the tug "Sarnia" of this city, returned this morning after an all night watch by the big steel freighter, which lies upside down in Lake Huron, she threw no light on the vessel's identity. Her name is far under water and the waves are still rolling high.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 11.—Thirty or more persons, crew of a 600-foot steel freighter found bottom side up yesterday only a few miles from the mouth of the St. Clair river, in Lake Huron, directly in the path of the passing steamers, are believed to have perished in the gale which swept the great lakes on Sunday. Captains of vessels which made port here yesterday assert that the finding of the freighter is clear evidence that one of the greatest calamities in the history of Canada's inland navigation has occurred.

All Sunday night the wind blew a 60-mile gale over Lake Huron, curling the waters into huge billows that climbed high above the decks of the boats that were without shelter. When the storm died out yesterday morning the watchman in the tower of the life-saving station on the shore of Lake Huron, above the mouth of the river, reported that he could make out a dark object about 100 feet long and quite broad, floating about three miles from the shore.

Word was sent to the Sarnia office of the Reid Wrecking Co., and within a few minutes the Canadian tug Sarnia City, was heading under full steam for the open lake. When the mouth of the river was reached the boat had to battle her way through the huge billows. When about seven miles from the river lighthouse, the low, black object was discerned, and it was soon seen that the object was 100 feet of the forward part of a big freighter's keel.

The boat was under water, with the exception of about 100 feet forward. It was thought that the upper works of the bow were holding the heavier afterpart of the boat from sinking out of sight.

When the tug arrived within a few feet of the black hulk, orders were give to stand by. Nothing, however could be done, and as it was known that no one could be alive inside the boat, the tug returned to this port. They knew that the brave men that had died in that overturned mass of steel had gone to their death without even a fighting chance for their lives being, in fact, caught like rats in a trap.

Upon arrival of the tug at Sarnia enquiries were made as to the posible identity of the freighter, but nothing can be ascertained until the many boats on the lakes have reported themselves safe.

The only mark of identification is the color of the bottom of the boat, which was black. At first it was thought to be the steamer Scott, but this was dispelled when the marine reporting station reported that the Scott's hull was painted a dark red.

Captain Lampoh, one of the best known captains on the lakes, explained how he thought the accident happened. He stated that the boat was evidently proceeding up the lake light, and under those conditions could have a large amount of water in her tanks to hold her down and prevent too much jumping around. He also remarked that it was likely that the boat had a large amount of water in her cargo hold to aid in steadying the boat in the big seas. He thinks that the water in the cargo hold started to roll about, with the result that the boat went completely over without any warning. Marine men are not stating what they think in regard to the name of the overturned craft as there is a very large number of black-painted boats sailing the lakes. At the same time that the hull of the overturned boat was discovered, signals were given from the lightship on the Corsica Shoal that she was dragging her anchor and was in danger of going on the Canadian shore. The tug Sarnia City went to her assistance on orders of President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' Association. When the tug offered to tow the craft back to her proper station, the captain refused to take the help offered, stating that he lacked official orders from the Washington authorities. The grounding of one of the steamers on he Corsica Shoal is accounted for by her captain, who blames the changed position of the lightship, which gave him a wrong direction.

Every married man believes that the household expenses could be cut in two if he only had a chance to turn his business cumen loose on the job, [illegible]

To Ask Health Certificate.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 11.—Dr. James Bishop Thomas, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, announced yesterday that in the future he would require a health certificate from persons desiring him to conduct their wedding certificates.

"I have had it in mind for some time to make the announcement," said Dr. Thomas, upon being asked for information on the views that led him to this decision. "I was waiting for some of the ministers to unite with me in the requirement, but none has yet seemed quite ready, so I determined not to wait any longer. I think it will be but a short time before others will take the same stand."

Extending Time for Contests.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—The date of the vote on the Canada Temperance Act in Peel, Welland and Huron Counties has been postponed from Nov. 24 to Jan. 27, because it is desired to give more time for the preparation for the contests.

It was represented that two weeks did not afford sufficient opportunity to organize for the campaign.

HE CUT OFF COWS' TAILS

Laziness Alleged as Farmer's Reason For Act of Cruelty.

MONTREAL, Nov. 11.—An extraordinary case of cruelty was heard before Judge Lafontaine, when Firmin Jasmin, a farmer, of Bois Francs road, St. Laurent, was charged with unnecessarily allowing twenty-four cows to be tortured by having their tails amputated.

An expert veterinary surgeon said that since the city of Montreal had made stricter bylaws regarding the cleanliness of milk this practice had become a habit with farmers. It was done out of sheer laziness, the farmers preferring to amputate the tails rather than keep the animals clean. The pain suffered by the cattle would be excruciating.

The accused in the box claimed that the tails were cut in the interest of cleanliness.

Judge Lafontaine ordered the accused to come forward on Monday next for sentence.

PETITION GRANTED

Manitoba Judges Quash Federal Bye Election in Macdonall

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 11.—Chief Justice Howell and Mr. Justice Cameron yesterday morning made an order declaring that Alexander Morrison, Conservative candidate in Macdonald, who showed a majority of over seven hundred on Oct. 12 last year, had not been duly elected, and declaring further that Andrew W. Miles and John E. Woods, petitioners, were entitled to the general costs of the action. The court will make a report to the Speaker of the Commons within four days, as required by law.

The election which was thus upset was fought principally on reciprocity issues, R. L. Richardson, running as an independent candidate. Whether he will again contest the seat could not be learned yesterday. Mr. Morrison is, of course, eligible as a candidate again.

HALF LOAF SECURED

Eastern U. S. Trainmen Get a Wage Increase of Seven Per Cent

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The long-lived controversy between railroads of the east and their conductors and trainmen over the latter's demands for more pay, ended last night. The employes are granted an increase in wages averaging seven per cent. and totalling $6,000,000 annually—about half of what they wanted — from Oct. 1 last; effective for one year. One hundred thousand men will share in the increase. The award of the arbitration commission filed late yesterday afternoon in the Federal Court is binding and final.

Since 1909, when last an increase was granted, the arbitrators found that the cost of living had increased seven per cent.

School teachers of Copenhagen, Denmark, receive wages of $320 a year.

The British Medical Association is seriously considering the advisability of organizing as a labor union.

WILL REMAIN AS FRIENDS

British and U.S. Policies Will Not Clash, Says Asquith.

LONDON, Nov. 11. — The Guild Hall banquet last night was attended by the usual brilliant company, which included Cabinet Ministers, members of the diplomatic corps and peers of the realm, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Sir Rufus Isaacs, Lord Chief Justice, naval and military officers and many persons prominent in civic and political spheres.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, replying to the toast of the "Imperial Forces," said that next year Great Britain would have a force of 150,000 sailors and marines, the largest on record. He emphasized the part played by citizens of London in the navy, and proceeded to say that the distinguished gathering met under circumstances freer from danger to the peace of Europe than for many years. But, he added, there must be no relaxation of effort. The estimates for 1914 would show a substantial increase, and he declared that even in the region of the air the British navy need not fear comparison with that of any other country.

The Rt. Hon. Herbert Asquith, Prime Minister, was heartily cheered as he rose to reply to the toast of "His Majesty's Ministers."

After extended references to the Balkan, European and Chinese situation, Mr. Asquith, proceeding, dealt with Mexico. The rumor found credence in some quarters, he said, that at a moment when the United States were taking a line of their own in regard to Mexico, Great Britain had entered upon a new departure of policy deliberately opposed to that of the United States and calculated to thwart it. There was not a vestige of foundation for any such rumor.

It was the 31st of March before the present Administration of the United States had an opportunity of making any declaration of policy. When the British Government recognized Huerta as President ad interim of Mexico it did so because, having itself neither the will nor the power to intervene, it was bound to deal with whatever was for the time being the de facto government, and because there appeared no element except Huerta that offered any prospect of the restoration of stability and order.

That was on the 31st of March. Since that time there had been no change of policy by the British Government. Great Britain gladly assumed that the policy of the United States would have regard to the legitimate commercial interests of Mexico as well as their own. The exchange of views with the United States had been marked by perfect cordiality. Nothing would happen to disturb their common resolve to maintain a friendly and sympathetic understanding. None had done more to foster that spirit than Mr. Bryce. (Cheers.)

Air Cleared, Says Times.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Premier Asquith's references to Mexico at the Guild Hall give intense satisfaction to the London morning newspapers. The Times, in an editorial, says:—

"They will be read throughout the Empire with heartfelt satisfaction, and we are confident that this satisfaction will not be less deep or general across the Atlantic. The Premier's words effectively dispose of the stories of strained relations between the two countries, stories which were never even plausible."

Seized and Liberated Again.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 11.—Customs Officer Burns, at the request of the Montreal customs, seized the steam barge Reliance lying at Mathen's wharf, on the ground that the boat had not undergone inspection this year. A. J. Lee, the contractor for raising the steam barge Keystrom, claimed that the boat had been specially inspected the day before it left for Brockville by a Quebec officer. Apparently there was some misunderstanding in Montreal or Ottawa, as the Reliance was released yesterday, after being under seizure two days.

There are upward of 5000 building material teamsters in New York city.

DIRTY ROLLER TOWELS MUST GO SAYS THE M.H.O.

Concerns Must Supply Individual Towels for Their Employes.

TORONTO, Nov. 11—Dr. Hastings, M.H.O., has issued an order placing a ban on public towels. The new ordinance states that "Inasmuch as the common use of a towel or a roller towel is, or may be, prejudicial to public health. Therefore, no person, firm or corporation owning, in charge of, or in control of any public lavatory or public washroom, shall maintain in or about such wash room any towel for common use."

The new law, which goes into force immediately, is far reaching in its effect, and means practically that all concerns must supply individual towels to their employes.

Mutinous Sailors Under Guard.

LEWES, Del., Nov. 11.—An armed guard from the U. S. revenue cutter Onondaga was yesterday placed aboard the American four-master bark Mangareva, the crew of the latter having mutinied on the high sea. The Mangareva sailed from Philadelphia a month ago for San Francisco with a cargo of coal. When several hundred miles at sea the crew of 2. men mutinied, locked the captain and mate in their berths and took possession of the ship. Subsequently the officers were released to navigate the ship after a promise had been extracted that the mutineers would be returned to the Delaware Capes.

CONGRESS SCORES PROBLEM NOVEL

Readers Want to Try Experiences Declares Purity Leaguer.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 11. — At a business session of the International Purity Congress yesterday the following officers were elected: President, B. S. Steadwell, Lacrosse, Wis.; vice-presidents, Dr. T. Albert Moore, Toronto; Judge Harry Olson, Chicago, and Dr. Emma E. Drake, Denver.

"The problem novel" is held as the chief cause of immorality in the U. S., according to the report of the vice committee, presented by Chairman J. Frank Chase of Boston.

"The practical effect is to commercialize and make money out of a story," the report said. "Questions that we are forced to face are graphically presented, the effect being that a certain class will try the experiences which the author has pictured."

The committe denounced the "tango," "bunny hug," "turkey trot" and other dances.

Drinking places are the fountain head of impurity, particularly in Europe, while the prohibition of segregated vice districts does not really suppress the social evil. These are the conclusions drawn by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington, D.C., in an address before the congress last night.

London's Lord Mayor Installed.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Sir T. Vansittart Bowater was yesterday installed Lord Mayor of the City of London with all the solemnity and display that ancient custom demands. The usual formalities having been carried out at the Guild Hall, the new Lord Mayor, accompanied by his predecessor, the sheriffs, aldermen and councillors of the City of London, went in their old-time costumes to the Law Courts, where the oath was administered by the new Lord Chief Justice. Sir Rufus Isaacs, who belongs to a family for years prominent in business and civic affairs of the city.

Burned By Lamp Upsetting.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 11.—Mrs. Annie Murphy, of Almon street, widow, was terribly burned yesterday morning as a result of the overturning of a lamp. With her clothing a mass of flames Mrs. Murphy rushed into the street at an early hour. Assistance was immediately available, but little could be done to relieve her sufferings, and she was taken to the hospital in a very critical condition.

J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., Hurt.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 11.—J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., of this city, yesterday morning fell upon the pavement on Front street, with the result that a small bone of the left ankle was broken.

MORMONS START WORK ON TEMPLE IN ALBERTA

Will Rival That Built in Salt Lake City — Constructed of Marble

CARDSTON, Alta., Nov. 11.—Cardston, the Morman centre for Canada, is in a state of great excitement over the turning of the first sod for the temple to be erected for Canadian Mormons. The church has already constructed six temples, but these are in the United States. Only four of them are standing now. The Canadian temple it is said will when completed rival that of Salt Lake City. It is to be constructed of marble from the foundation walls to the top and money will be supplied as needed from the home base at Salt Lake City.

It was announced that all work possible would be donation work and the members were asked to come at once with teams and scrapers. E. J. Wood, president of the Canadian Church, had charge of the ceremony.

SETTLER OFFERS PRAYER.

J. Anderson, one of the first settlers in Cardston, in feeble voice offered the opening prayer, and said that the Canadian edifice was being built in fulfillment of prophecy made 26 years ago. The Morman people were referred to by the leaders as having the only knowledge of the true religion and were the only people using temples for the redemption of the dead.

One of the features of the service was the entire Mormon gathering shouting, amid the waving of handkerchiefs and ribbons, "God bless our Dominion." "God bless our friends," "God bless our temple building," "God bless all Israel. Hosanna to God and the Lord. Amen and Amen."

A breaking plow was then put into the soil and a furrow made around the line of the foundation. To-morrow will see a couple of dozen teams at work. Excavation will be made and cement laid before winter sets in.

Schools were closed and several business places suspended business for the afternoon.

MORE LIBERTY HERE.

President Williams, B.A, in the course of his address at the big Mormon gathering, paid a glowing tribute to British institutions. He said: "We hear much of the country to the south as a land of liberty, but here in Canada the Mormon people enjoy quite as much freedom and live under a better administration of law than in the United States."

ALLIANCE SECURE

Rumors of Abrogation of Anglo-Japanese Pact Said to be Groundless

TOKIO, Nov. 11.—The suggestion that Japan intends to abrogate the alliance with Great Britain is regarded here as groundless. No question of abrogation has been raised by Japan, it is stated here, and the only moot point discussed in connection with the alliance has been that of Great Britain's attitude towards its continuance.

Chozo Koike, director of political affairs, in a speech yesterday, declared that while he resided in England as counsellor of the Japanese embassy, he had found no desire or disposition whatever to discontinue or minimize the value of the alliance. Englishmen, he said, were trying to solve the question of harmonizing the alliance with the American situation in the event of the Californian alien land ownership dispute straining relations between Japan and the United States, and also with the situation between Great Britain and colonies like Canada and Australasia, where Japanese immigrants were not welcomed.

WHERE IS THE LAURIER NAVY?

A correspondent wishes to know what has become of the Laurier navy. If our correspondent refers to the Niobe and Rainbow, we confess to a blank ignorance on the question. Probably they have gone to look for the North Pole, they might find it warmer than the hearts of their Liberal parents. No Liberal ever mentions these two deserted offerings in public, and if a Conservative breathes the names of the twins he is seriously disliked.

If our correspondent's question is about the new Laurier navy, that, we may say, is an areial fleet which is in no fear of coming down to earth as it is suspended by an infinite supply of gas.

LLOYD GEORGE IN CANADA

It is not generally known that Mr. Lloyd George has been in Canada. But this is proven by the following which is taken from his speech on land reform:

> "In Canada I crossed the prairie, and one night I came to a big lumber house. I found the farmer, who had 160 acres of good land. He had farmed it with his family. He was doing very well. Who was he? He was an artisan from Birmingham. I met a policeman from Derby there. He had just been shooting ducks, and as it was Sunday and there was a Government official with me, and it is against the law to shoot on Sunday, he explained that he had shot them on Saturday and that he was going to fetch them now.

THE LINGERING GUEST

Most people have, at some time in their family life have had guests, who have out-stayed their welcome and yet will not take a hint and be gone. Punch has some very amusing things to say on the subject and the following hints may come in useful on occasion.

Some hostesses prefer a direct hint and simply cut off the food supply; but this is not done at the best houses. It is considered more delicate to disturb the even tenor of the guest's tranquility by a series of slight but cumulative impediments.

Thus he will find that his morning tea is stone cold; that the fire in his bedroom is allowed to go out at 9 p.m.; that only one of his boots has been blacked. If these fail there are other and more drastic means, for the modern hostess is a marvel of ingenuity when it is a question of speeding the lingering guest. He will find a railway guide beneath his pillow, or, if he has brought his auto, his chauffeur will be instructed to hang about in unexpected places waiting for orders. Sometimes the car is even brought round and kept waiting at the front door.

In the case of extreme obtuseness further steps may sometimes have to be taken. The delinquent will find that he has to unpack his bag several times a day and to be continually retrieving his golf-clubs from the front hall, where they are lying in conspicuous readiness for his departure. And at last, when he goes up to his room to make ready for luncheon, he will be shocked to discover that the blinds are down and the carpet up, while a couple of workmen are busy with the electric light. Then it will come home to him. The game is up and he must go.

But it must not be supposed that he will be made to suffer any embarrassment in his farewells. The modern hostess is the very impersonation of tact.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Montreal Mail publishes an item of English news in which it says that Lord Hugh Cecil, while on a political visit to Pontypridd, descended a coal mine and worked as a miner. He took a pick and hewed a piece of coal which he retained as a memento of his experience." This looks like a cruel joke on Lord Hugh. If he took home all the coal he got while "working as a miner" he could scarcely have perspired much on the job.

The result of the Reading bye-election in England looks like a very serious check to the Asquith Government, especially is it regarded as a death blow to Home Rule. Coming as it does upon the heels of Lloyd George's Land reform speech, it does not seem that the people are very greatly enamored of the little Welshman's proposals.

The Socialists of Great Britain have adopted Militant Suffragist tactics and have decided to oppose all Liberal candidates, and to refuse them a hearing at public meetings until James Larkin, the leader of the striking Irish transport workers, who was recently sentenced to seven months' imprisonment, is released. One thing is to be said in praise of Larkin is that he has not adopted the effeminite hunger strike, but takes his medicine like a man.

Canada's trade with the United States for the first five months of the present fiscal year totalled $243,202,226, or nearly sixty per cent. of the whole trade of the country for that period. The trade with Great Britain was $133,879,408, and with the whole empire $152,110,069.

Imports from the United States totalled $186,381,959 as compared with $61,070,476 from Great Britain, and $286,184,572 from all countries.

Exports to the United States totalled $56,817,267, to Great Britain $72,808,932, and to the rest of the Empire nearly $11,000,000.

CAPTAIN SCOTT AND HIS MEN

"What are these arrayed in white robes, and whence came they"

To stare Death in the face and know
He's got you in his grip;
To have the means to numb the blow
And give the fiend the slip;
Yet press through miles of pitiless snow
And keep a fretless lip.

This is the top of human might,
The pinnacle of fame;
These are the men who gained the height
And carved a deathless name,
Arrayed in everlasting white—
Who through the trial came.

ANOTHER REPLY TO REV. J. ROLLINS CHALLENGE

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—The published challenge of Rev. James Rollins says in effect, to "all who know": "Come to me with facts and definite evidence, or stand discredited as slanderers!" Surely Mr. Rollins knows that those who engage in grossly immoral or unlawful or criminal practices do not usually do so in the presence of witnesses who would be likely to go to him with "what they know." Were such facts and definite evidence forthcoming they should be delivered to the crown attorney or the magistrate, not to a clergyman.

Now the prevalence of social evil and the conditions and character of institutions or places to which a share of blame for its development is attached, are matters quite within the scope of a pastor's activities. Is it not his duty to study and warn against any danger that may beset his flock? And are not the dangers of a particular place in question quite as palpable to him as they are to anyone else who has eyes and ears? Why call others to tell him what it is the business of a pastor to know and understand for himself?

What need for organization against the like of this? Has not a pastor his pulpit from which to "strike wisely and heavily wherever a blow will tell?"

What would be the use to Mr. Rollins of the information asked for? Has he used the knowledge already in his possession, or, at least, easily available to him? The attention of the local Ministerial Association was long ago directed to a resort open to the objections above defined, and of which the conditions, character and repute were such that one clergyman awoke to his moral duty, had already denounced it from his pulpit and forbidden his congregation to attend it.

What did the members of the Ministerial Association do when requested to warn parents against allowing their children to frequent this same place? Let each member answer for himself.

Now when Mr. Rollins gets upon the job which I hope he may, he will better know where to begin.

Yours, etc.,
"ONLOOKER."

The supplies on the market this morning for sale consisted of 2500 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 550 hogs and 500 calves.

Effect of a Dream.

"The happiest dream I can recall," said a successful business man, "was one I had ten years ago. In it I was with my good mother again, seated in the old home church. She placed her hand on my head and whispered, 'Son, I am proud of you.' That little statement has kept me out of wrongdoing more than all the sermons I have ever heard and, I think, has made me a better man."—Philadelphia Record.

As Values Are Judged.

"Great Scott, woman! Are you trying to ruin me?"

"Why, Henry! You don't even know what I paid for the gown."

"I know that any gown that looks as bad as that one costs more than I can afford to pay."—Life.

WITHIN THE LAW.

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"Good!" Gilder exclaimed. "Take this, Sarah." And he continued, as the girl opened her notebook and poised the pencil. "Be sure to have Smithson post a copy of it conspicuously in all the girls' dressing rooms and in the reading room and in the lunchrooms and in the assembly room." He cleared his throat ostentatiously and proceeded to the dictation of the notice:

"Mary Turner, formerly employed in this store, was today sentenced to prison for three years, having been convicted for the theft of goods valued at over $400. The management wishes again to draw attention on the part of its employees to the fact that honesty is always the best policy. Got that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Take it to Smithson," Gilder continued, "and tell him to post it at once."

Gilder brought forth a box of cigars from a drawer of the desk, opened it and thrust it toward the waiting lawyer, who, however, shook his head in refusal and continued to move about the room rather restlessly.

"Three years—three years! That ought to be a warning to the rest of the girls." Gilder looked toward Demarest for acquiescence.

"Most unusual case, in my estimation," Demarest replied. "You see, the girl keeps on declaring her innocence. That, of course, is common enough in a way. But here it's different. The point is somehow she makes her protestations more convincing than they usually do. They ring true, as it seems to me."

"The stolen goods were found in her locker," Gilder declared in a tone of finality. "Some of them, I have been given to understand, were actually in the pocket of her coat."

"Well," the attorney said, with a smile, "that sort of thing makes good enough circumstantial evidence, and without circumstantial evidence there would be few convictions for crime. Yet as a lawyer I'm free to admit that circumstantial evidence alone is never quite safe as proof of guilt. Naturally she says some one else must have put the stolen goods there. That is quite within the measure of possibility. That sort of thing has been done countless times."

"And for what reason? It's too absurd to think about."

"In similar cases," the lawyer answered, "those actually guilty of the thefts have thus sought to throw suspicion on the innocent in order to avoid it on themselves when the pursuit got too hot on their trail. Sometimes, too, such evidence has been manufactured merely to satisfy a spite against the one unjustly accused."

"A court of justice has decreed her guilty."

"Nowadays," Demarest shot out, "we don't call them courts of justice; we call them courts of law."

"Anyway," Gilder declared, becoming genial again, "it's out of our hands. There's nothing we can do now."

"Why, as to that," the lawyer replied, with a hint of hesitation, "I am not so sure. You see, the fact of the matter is that, though I helped to prosecute the case, I am not a little bit proud of the verdict. I am not sure that Mary Turner is guilty—far from it, in fact! Anyhow, the girl wants to see you, and I wish to urge you to grant her an interview."

"What's the use?" Gilder stormed. "I can't have her crying all over the office and begging for mercy," he protested truculently. But a note of fear lay under the petulance.

Demarest's answer was given with assurance.

"You are mistaken about that. The girl doesn't beg for mercy. In fact, that's the whole point of the matter. She demands justice—strange as that may seem in a court of law—and nothing else. The truth is, she's a very unusual girl, a long way beyond the ordinary salesgirl, both in brains and in education."

"The less reason, then, for her being a thief," Gilder grumbled in his heaviest voice.

"And perhaps the less reason for believing her to be a thief," the lawyer retorted suavely. He paused for a moment, then went on. There was a tone of sincere determination in his voice. "Just before the judge imposed sentence he asked her if she had anything to say. You know, it's just a usual form—a thing that rarely means much of anything. But this case was different, let me tell you. She surprised us all by answering at once that she had. It's really a pity, Gilder, that you didn't wait. Why, that poor girl made a fine speech!"

"Pooh, pooh!" came the querulous objection. "She seems to have hypnotized you." Then, as a new thought came to the magnate, he spoke with a trace of anxiety. There were always the reporters looking for space to fill with foolish vaporings.

"Did she say anything against me or the store?"

"Not a word," the lawyer replied gravely. "She merely told us how her father died when she was sixteen years old. She was compelled after that to earn her own living. Then she told how she had worked for you for five years steadily without there ever being a single thing against her. She said, too, that she had never seen the things found in her locker. And she said more than that. She asked the judge if he himself understood what it means for a girl to be sentenced to prison for something she hadn't done. Somehow, Gilder, the way she talked had its effect on everybody in the courtroom. I know! It's my business to understand things like that. And what she said rang true. What she said and the way she said it take brains and courage. The ordinary crook has neither. So I had a suspicion that she might be speaking the truth." There was a little pause, while the lawyer moved back and forth nervously; then he added, "I believe Lawlor would have suspended sentence if it hadn't been for your talk with him."

"I simply did my duty," Gilder said. "You are aware that I did not seek any consultation with Judge Lawlor. He sent for me and asked me what I thought about the case—whether I thought it would be right to let the girl go on a suspended sentence. I told him frankly that I believed that an example should be made of her for the sake of others who might be tempted to steal. Property has some rights, Demarest, although it seems to be getting nowadays so that anybody is likely to deny it." Then the fretful, half alarmed note sounded in his voice again as he continued, "I can't understand why the girl wants to see me."

"What she said rang true."

"Why, she just said that if you would see her for ten minutes she would tell you how to stop the thefts in this store."

"There," Gilder cried. "I knew it! The girl wants to confess. Well, it's the first sign of decent feeling she's shown. I suppose it ought to be encouraged. Probably there have been others mixed up in this."

"Perhaps," Demarest admitted. "At least it can do no harm if you see her. I thought you would be willing, so I spoke to the district attorney, and he has given orders to bring her here for a few minutes on the way to the Grand Central station. They're taking her up to Burnsing, you know. I wish, Gilder, you would have a little talk with her." The lawyer abruptly went out of the office, leaving the owner of the store fuming.

* * * * * * *

"Hello, dad!"

Gilder sprang to his feet, his face suddenly grown younger, radiant.

"Dick!" The big voice was softened to exquisite tenderness.

As the eyes of the two met the boy rushed forward, and in the next moment the hands of father and son clasped firmly. Presently Gilder spoke, with an effort toward harshness in his voice to mask how much he was shaken. But the tones rang more kindly than any he had used for many a day, tremulous with affection.

"What brought you back?" he demanded.

"Why, I just wanted to come back home," he said lightly. "And, for the love of heaven, give Sadie $5. I borrowed it from her to pay the taxi. You see, dad, I'm broke."

"Of course!" With the saying Edward Gilder roared Gargantuan laughter. In the burst of merriment his pent feelings found their vent. He was still chuckling when he spoke, sage from much experience of ocean travel. "Poker on the ship, I suppose."

"No, not that, though I did have a little run in at Monte Carlo. But it was the ship that finished me at that. You see, dad, they hired Captain Kidd and a bunch of pirates as stewards, and what they did to little Richard was something fierce. And yet, that wasn't the real trouble either. The fact is, I just naturally went broke. Not a hard thing to do on the other side."

"Nor on this," the father interjected dryly.

"Anyhow, it doesn't matter much," Dick replied, quite unabashed. "Tell me, dad, how goes it?"

"Pretty well, pretty well, son. I'm glad to see you home again, my boy." There was a great tenderness in the usually rather cold gray eyes.

"And I'm glad to be home, dad, to be"—there was again that clearing of the throat, but he finished bravely—"with you."

The father avoided a threatening display of emotion by an abrupt change of subject to the trite.

"Have a good time?" he inquired casually.

"The time of my young life. I tell you, dad, it's a fact that I did almost break the bank at Monte Carlo. I'd have done it sure if only my money had held out."

"It seems to me that I've heard something of the sort before," was Gilder's sarcastic comment. But his smile was still wholly sympathetic. He took a curious vicarious delight in the escapades of his son, probably because he himself had committed no follies in his callow days. "Why didn't you cable me?" he asked, puzzled at such restraint on the part of his son.

"I am glad to be home, dad."

"Because it gave me a capital excuse for coming home."

"You clear out of here, boy!" Gilder commanded brusquely. "I'm a working man. But here, wait a minute," he added. He brought forth from a pocket a neat sheaf of banknotes, which he held out. "There's carfare for you," he said, with a chuckle. "And now clear out. I'll see you at dinner."

"You can always get rid of me on the same terms," Dick remarked slyly. In the doorway he turned with a final speech, which was uttered in splendid disregard for the packet of money he had just received. "Oh, dad, please don't forget to give Sadie that $5 I borrowed from her for the taxi."

The owner of the store returned to his labors with a new zest, for the meeting with his son had put him in high spirits. Perhaps it might have been better for Mary Turner had she come to him just then, while he was yet in this softened mood. But fate had ordained that other events should restore him to his usual harder self before their interview. Smithson entered with an expression of discomfiture on his rather vacuous countenance. He walked almost nimbly to the desk and spoke with evident distress as his employer looked up interrogatively.

DELICIOUS in flavor, and tempting for little folks, FRY'S Cocoa undoubtedly is. But its goodness more than matches its taste—for FRY'S is all nourishment. LAD WHO SAVED LIFE GETS MEDAL

David Cumberland is Cheered by His Fellow-Pupils

AWARDED TO DAVID CUMBERLAND
FOR COURAGE IN RESCUE OF MARY TRAILL
FROM DROWNING AT CHEMONG LAKE
JULY, 1913.

The above is the inscription on the bronze medal presented to David Cumberland yesterday afternoon at the Central School by His Worship Malor Byradburn, on behalf of the Royal Humane Society of Canada.

It will be recalled that last July the little lad bravely rescued Miss Traill of Lakefield from drowning. Miss Traill, while bathing, went out beyond her depth and was going down the last time when the Cumberland boy swam out and pulled her to safety.

All the pupils of the Central school which the young hero attends, assembled in the corridor and gave the lad a great ovation.

Rev. F. J. Sawers addressed the children and explained what the Royal Humane Society was and why one of their fellow students was about to be presented with one of the medals. He reviewed the circumstances of the rescue and stated that in doing this heroic act the lad had risked his own life, and thus it was that the society did not hesitate to present him with the medal.

In conclusion, he called upon the pupils to show their appreciation in the good old Anglo-Saxon way. Their shouts and clapping fairly shook the building.

His Worship Mayor Bradburn in presenting the medal assured the boy that the school and the city were proud to have amongst its number one so young and brave.

The little hero is but 12 years of age.

NOT SO MANY JUVEVILE CASES SAYS MAGISTRATE

But Business in Other Lines Increases at Police Court

Juvenile crime has considerably lessened during the past year. The cases dealt with by the local court are not so numerous and the majority of them are not so serious as in former years. Through the leniency and intercession of the court officails the juvenile is given a chance to reform and the plan is apparently working out alright.

"Juvenile cases are not as numerous as in former years," remarked Magistrate Dumble yesterday to a Review reporter.

The above facts by all means certainly do not cover the other cases which appear before Magistrate Dumble, as this year has proved to be a record one in the Police circles as far as the adult police court cases are concerned.

The first of August saw the same number of cases as for the whole of last year. And still they come.

ALDERMEN WHOSE TERM EXPIRES TO COME BACK

Ald. Gillespie Mentioned as Mayoralty Candidate

Municipal elections are being discussed quietly, yet, freely among the ratepayers of the various wards. No doubt the aldermanic aspirations will soon sprout with the weather. It is understood that the following members of this year's Council, whose term of office expires at the end of the year, will run again:

North Ward, W. J. Johnston; West Ward, J. J. Duffus; South Ward, Wm. Buller; East Ward, John Anderson; Centre Ward, George Gillespie.

Ald. Gillespie has also been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Mayoralty.

No new men have as yet been mentioned as candidates for the Council, but as per usual they will probably hold back until the eleventh hour.

APPEAL IS DISMISSED

Award of Judge to Mrs. Prussick is Upheld

The appeal of the Cordova Mines Limited, against the judgment of Mr. Justice Latchford who allowed damages of $1750 for the widow of John Prussick, who met his death while in the employ of the defendant company, has been dismissed, with costs.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the plaintiff, Mrs. Prussick.

At the trial in Peterboro, Mrs. Prussick asked for $10,000 but the Jury gave an award of $1750.

A remarkable feature of the action was that the judges were evenly divided, two were for allowing the appeal and two for dismissing it. In consequence of this deadlock, the decision of Mr. Justice Latchford appealed against stands.

THIRTY FIVE CENTS FOR EGGS

Eggs sold for 38 and 40 cents on the market last Saturday, but since then there has been a slight decline and they are now being sold for 35 cents per dozen at the various local stores. The cause for this slight drop is given as follows: Many local dealers handle packed eggs and they sell these for a few cents less than fresh eggs. The man handling fresh eggs has, in some cases, to sell his for the same price in order to keep up in the "swim." Thus the decrease in price as been general.

Butter is selling from 30 to 32 cents.

The Isle of Yachts.

Cowes had many ups and downs before it finally attained its destiny as the headquarters of yachting. Sir John Oglander, writing in Stuart times, says, "I knew when there was not above three or four houses at Cowes," but he had counted 300 ships at anchor there, "and I was and am persuaded that if our wars and troubles had not unfortunately happened it would have grown as famous as Newport." The wars complained of were the civil wars. Foreign war had been a fine thing for Cowes, since the warships bought the island's produce there. But the civil wars struck the gentry hard, and Sir John adds the coming of lawyers as another curse. The first attorney was expelled from the island by the governor as a public danger. "Now peace and law hath beggared us all," says Sir John.—London Chronicle.

LAD ADMITS HE MADE ESCAPE FROM SCHOOL

He is Held by the Police on Charge of Vagrancy

TELLS SEVERAL TALES

His Companion Was Arrested at Bancroft for Stealing Rifles

A youth giving his name as Clayton Bartrill came before Magistrate Dumble this morning on the charge of vagrancy. Information received by the Chief was to the effect that the boy, who was arrested yesterday afternoon, had been placed in the Vermont Industrial School, but he ran away some time ago in company with another boy. According to the prisoner's story, his companion was arrested in Bancroft on the charge of stealing two rifles.

The young prisoner was remanded for a week in order that the Court may look up his record.

So many different stories have been told by the boy that the Police Court officials are at a loss to make anything out of the affair.

On Sunday the boy came to Adjutant McElheney, of the Salvation Army, and told him that he was without funds and had no place to go. The Adjutant fixed up a meal for the boy and then gave him money to get a room at a hotel, after the boy had promised to meet him at the Temple. After waiting considerable time at the above mentioned place, the boy failed to turn up.

Yesterday afternoon the youth was arrested on George street. A ladies' bracelet, a ladies' gold watch and several rings were found on his person. At Police Court this morning he admitted running away from the Industrial School at Vermont.

RUINED THE PAINTING.

Curious Fate of Burne-Jones' Favorite Water Color.

A very curious history is that of Burne-Jones' favorite picture, "Love Among the Ruins." The original picture was in water color and was sent to Paris by a firm of art publishers for reproduction and in that city forwarded to their photographic studios in the suburbs. The picture unhappily preceded the letter of instructions regarding it warning the photographer of the medium in which it was painted, so that immediately on its arrival it was brushed over with white of egg to bring out the colors for photographing —an excellent procedure in the case of oil pictures, harmless and very efficacious.

But, as to the Burne-Jones picture, Love was very soon among his own ruins, for every swish of the brush brought off the final touches and left a mere smeared ground. Sir Edward Burne-Jones was heartbroken at the loss of a work on which his reputation, be considered, would in great measure rest and on which he had spent many months of patient toil and the very perfection of his execution in the realization of one of the most poetic conceptions that had sprung from his fanciful imagination.

"Love Among the Ruins" was painted during the years 1870-3. In October, 1893, it was destroyed, and by the following year the oil version was finished, but was scarcely a consolation to the artist for the loss of his first and more spontaneous work.

Pasteurized Milk a Guarantee Against Disease

"There are two things the sanitarian and public health officer must demand of milk producers and milk dealers: That milk should be clean and that milk should be safe. In other words, milk should not contain dirt, and it should not contain disease.

"The modern methods of clarifying and pasteurizing milk gives us a sure guarantee that no harm can come from such milk, and when the public realize this fact there will be a greater demand for this milk, and a decrease in sickness, especially amongst children." (Extract of an address by Dr. North before the N.Y. Milk Committee).

LOCAL JEWS PLEASED AT THE OUTCOME

Beiless is Declared not Guilty of Murdering Boy

Local Jews express satisfaction at the acquittal of Mendel Beiliss, on the charge of killing a boy.

The trial of Beiliss has been one of the most sensational in years, the greatest interest being shown in it by all sections of the civilized world. Beiliss was accused of killing the boy in accordance with the alleged Jewish ritual, which it was charged required that the blood of a Christian should be used in the Passover ceremonies. The most noted medical experts and theologians of Russia were called as witnesses in the case. In Great Britain, Canada and the United States, mass meetings were held protesting against the charges. So high had feeling grown over the trial that Kiev for many weeks has been patrolled by large bodies of troops. It was feared that if Beiliss was found guilty there would be a general massacre of the Jews.

PRICE OF MILK

Peterboro Does not Pay More Than Other Cities

An interesting battle is being waged at Hamilton because the milk vendors want to increase the price of the lacteal fluid. The people in their protest against the price being increased from eight to nine cents have Mayor Allan as their general and the result of the engagement is yet to be chronicled.

Consumers in this city pay but seven cents per quart. In Lindsay, the people pay eight cents. In Brantford and Guelph, the price is seven cents; at Toronto it is ten cents and at Ottawa nine cents.

PRAYERS FOR DECEASED FRIENDS

The Plea of Rev. J. J. O'Brien at Sacred Heart Church

Sunday evening at Church of the Sacred Heart Rev. J. J. O'Brien delivered an eloquent sermon on praying for deceased friends. He chose his text from the Book of Job: "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me," 19-21, and stated that on account of Rev. Fergus O'Brien dealing with Purgatory so fully the Sunday previous, he would not dwell on that subject, but rather he wished to plead for the poor suffering souls who are confined there for the temporal punishment due to sin. "As we all know when our sins are forgiven in the Sacrament of Pennance, there is still a debt to be paid to God, and if this is not done in this life, then it must be in the next.

"Holy Mother Church, the mouthpiece of God, tells us that we should pray for these poor souls, and they therefore have a right to them.

"These poor souls are there suffering the most excruciating punishments and are helpless, for as we know, once the soul departs from the body that person is no longer able to intercede."

The reverend speaker urged his listeners to pray for these poor souls, especially during the month of November, which is dedicated to the Holy Souls.

GENTLE LITTLE FIGURE WITH SWEET SMILE

It is almost a year since Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells made her first visit to Toronto when she dispelled the idea that arresting people was the sum and substance of a police officer's duty, and pointed out that a police officer is, or ought to be the guardian of the communtiy. The following is an extract from one of the Toronto papers at the time:

"I fancy that Mrs. Wells, on her recent visit, has dispelled a good many illusions which some of us probably cherished. She is not large or vigorous, but a gentle little figure endowed with a sweet smile, a sweet voice, not loud or strong but clear and penetrating and altogether an appealing personaltiy.

I think the whole conception of the Police Department and its administration must be regarded with a new insight and appreciation by anyone who heard this gifted woman describe some of its functions

We first opened the Bargain Annex 8 years ago, in 1905, and to-day we celebrate the Anniversary of its Inauguration. From a small department it has grown to such proportions that now one hears about it all over the province. It has now its own manager, buyer and sales force, each week hundreds of customers being served, and up to the present time has never known a failure. Every Wednesday it is opened for business, and on this, the four hundred and sixteenth event, we offer the greatest array of Annex Birthday Bargains ever placed before the Peterboro public.

CAPT. COLLINS SPOKE ABOUT FIRST AID WORK

That a first aid class for the injured will be shortly established is quite evident from the enthusiasm evinced at a lecture last evening in the Labor Hall by Capt. G. N. R. Collins, of the St. John's Ambulance Association, Toronto. His Worship Mayor Bradburn presided at the lecture and introduced the speaker of the evening.

The lecture which was accompanied by lantern slides was one of the most interesting and instructive along that line of work that has ever been given in the city. Capt. Collins who has had 13 years' experience in the work, described the origin of the Association and also gave some valuable illustrations as to the various uses of the first aid. After the lecture he gave a practical demonstration of the use of some of the bandages.

Ald. Gordon moved that a vote of thanks be extended to Capt. Collins for his interesting lecture. This was seconded by Mr. Forest.

Any person wishing to assist in the organization of the first aid class should communicate with Mr. Forest of 328 Downie St.

SILENCED BY A LOOK.

Gladstone's Burning Eyes Rendered Blackie Speechless.

Gladstone had peculiar, eagle-like eyes. At a dinner at which he and Professor Blackie were present the two men were opposite, and when Gladstone gave in a forcible way his idea that Homer was no longer recited, but chanted, the professor cried out, "Mr. Gladstone, I don't believe a word of it!" Then he rose to argue the matter and said one sentence, but got no further. He had met Gladstone's gaze and seen his outer eyelids widened to their fullness in a steady glare, and his tongue stumbled, and he sank back into his chair in confusion. The writer concludes:

"Go to the zoo for it. Take your umbrella. Make your way to the place where eagles, vultures, falcons and such like creatures blink on their perches. Select a bird. Stare at him with insult and you will see the outer lids expand as Mr. Gladstone's did. Poke at him with your umbrella. The filmy vertical lids through which he looks at the sun and opens to paralyze his prey will part, and then you will see what Blackie saw and understand his feelings."

MOUNT JULIAN

Special Correspondence.

A very successful bazaar was held under the auspices of the Mount Julian Women's Institute on Friday evening Oct. 17th, 1913. It was held in the North Burleigh schoolhouse which was very prettily decorated. The bazaar was well attended and everybody united their efforts to make it a success. There was a short programme which was followed by the sale of fancy-work, fruit, candy, etc., which was dispensed in a very short time. Then a lunch was served by the ladies of the Institute, after which they auctioned off their cakes which remained. A successful as well as an enjoyable evening was drawn to a close with the singing of "God Save the King."

When Britain Fought For an Ear.

Perhaps the most extraordinary example of Britain going to war for "no reason at all" occurred in the reign of George II. One Robert Jenkins, an English merchant-captain, trading from Jamaica, arriving in England in 1738, reported that the sloop had been boarded by the Spanish coast guards and that, though no proof of smuggling had been found, he had been tortured and his ear torn off. All England flew into an uproar. "Jenkins' ear" divided parties and shook Walpole's ministry itself. The house of commons sent for Jenkins, and he was told to bring his ear with him. The incident grew into a crisis, though Walpole did his best to persuade people to keep their heads, but the popular indignation was so great that the next year the government was compelled to declare war against Spain.—Pearson's.

Books by Weight.

Many years ago in San Francisco there was a bookseller who had an intimate knowledge of fiction prices, but who was all astray when it came to general literature or scientific works. A customer having selected a volume would ask the price and, without so much as bothering to look at the title, if he saw that it was not a novel, the seller would roughly weigh it on his hand and name the sum. Many a bargain was picked up in that way, but as the bookseller also bought on the same principle, he never lost anything to speak of.—San Francisco Chronicle.

BETTY AND THE BEAR

The Monster Was Not So Terrible as She at First Thought.

By FRANCIS A. COREY.

And this young giant from the woolly west was her employer. Betty gave an involuntary gasp. He was so elemental, so unlike any one with whom she had ever come into close personal contact before.

"I've dubbed him the Bear," Mr. Henderson, whose desk was next to her own, confided to her. "He's straight from the Rockies, you know. And then he is so big, so brutish, so ungainly! Looks as much out of place in a New York office as a bull in a china shop.

Henderson himself was slender, handsome, polished, immaculate of attire. Betty's glance rested upon his smug, clean shaven face approvingly. His well bred tones were indescribably soothing after the hoarse rumble of Mr. Sterling's deep bass. She was rejoiced to find one congenial person in this place, where the failure and sudden death of her father had left her stranded.

"There are reduced gentlemen as well as reduced gentlewomen," she thought, with a feeling of womanly sympathy for him that later on found expression in unexpected ways.

For instance, although short to curtness with her employer, she would linger after hours for a friendly chat with Henderson and even permitted him to take her out to dinner once or twice.

One day when they were alone in the office Henderson swung around in his revolving chair and said abruptly:

"Miss Vandevere, did it ever strike you as a bit strange that the Bear should have given you the best berth in the office? This is your first experience, and good stenographers are as plenty as blackberries."

"Are they?" Betty answered. "I didn't know."

"Do you mind telling me how you happened to apply to him?"

"I received a marked copy of his advertisement and wrote immediately, asking for the place."

"H'm! And got an answer by return mail, saying you might report for duty?"

"Why—yes—so I did. Is that so very surprising?"

"Oh, no." Henderson meditated a moment, a queer little spark flashing into his eyes. "See here! I'm going to tell you something," he announced abruptly. "The Bear is in love with you."

"Absurd!" Betty cried, reddening painfully.

"I know the signs. Watch him. You'll see for yourself. Can't come nigh you without flushing and trembling. Genuine case of love at first sight. I guess he knew what he was about when he took you into his employ."

"How can you say such things?"

Betty was indignant. She realized for the first time that there was a vein of native coarseness under the man's veneer.

"A pile of money comes into this office," he said after an interval, looking at her keenly. "The Bear is beastly rich. That counts for a good deal. You'll marry him for his wealth."

"A cowboy from the plains? Not if he were made of gold!"

Henderson looked relieved, but before he could reply Mr. Sterling came into the office.

Betty bent over to her desk with a scarlet face. When presently she ventured to steal a glance at her employer she encountered his fixed gaze and knew from the look in his eyes that Henderson was right.

The thought that this uncouth westerner dared aspire to a Vandevere made her furious. Later on, when an errand took her into the inner office, whither her employer had withdrawn, she made all possible haste, but he spoke to her before she could slip back again to her place.

"Miss Vandevere, one moment, please. You are looking pale. You are not used to such close application. You'll make yourself ill. I have a box at the opera, but I seldom go. I'd be more than pleased to have you use it."

Betty's breath had stopped, and she recovered it with difficulty.

"Thank you very much, Mr. Sterling," she said icily, "but I must decline to take advantage of your kindness."

She fled with hot cheeks, but at heart she was not so angry as she tried to make herself believe. She knew intuitively that the offer had not been prompted so much by a desire to win favor as by real solicitude for her welfare.

Further proofs of the big man's thoughtfulness were forthcoming. That same evening on returning to her boarding place she was met by a smiling landlady.

"See what's come for you, Miss Vandevere!" The woman triumphantly held up a basket of delicious fruit.

"Who sent it?" Betty asked, searching for a card.

None was to be found, and Mrs. Fryitt could only tell her that the basket had been left by a messenger boy. Not one of her fair weather friends knew her present address. Naturally she thought of Mr. Henderson. For some time there had been a growing tenderness in his manner toward her. When the anonymous gifts continued to appear daily she took occasion to remonstrate with him.

"Hothouse grapes are expensive luxuries," she said. "Don't send any more. You can't afford to."

"Miss Vandevere, allow me to correct a wrong conclusion. I have not presumed to send out grapes or anything else."

"Who did?"

"If I may hazard a guess—the Bear!"

Betty was so angry that she marched forthwith into the next room, where her employer was busy at his desk.

"Mr. Sterling," she cried, "it's an impertinence for you to make me presents! The fact that I work for you is no excuse."

He looked disconcerted.

"I hoped—you wouldn't know—the trifles came from me."

"Why did you do it?" she demanded hotly.

"You're not used to making your own way—of course you miss things. And, then, I knew your father, and I wanted to help you for his sake."

She stared half incredulously.

"You knew papa? When? Where?"

"In San Francisco—last winter. We met in a business way and got to be friendly. He liked to talk about you, and, once he showed me your picture. So you seemed like an old friend from the first."

Betty's eyes had been opened, but the look of annoyance did not leave her face.

"I can supply my own wants. Please do not send anything more," she said, and, with her head held high, went back to her post.

Henderson glanced up inquiringly, his face revealing half a dozen impulses in as many seconds. Suddenly he rose, took a step nearer and began speaking rapidly in a husky whisper.

"Miss Vandevere, listen! I'm going to tell you a secret. I have fallen heir to a fortune. I take the midnight train for Canada to claim the legacy. No one is to know of this until after I'm gone—not even Sterling. Will you come, too—away from this hateful life? You know I love you. Decide at once! There's no time for dallying. Say you'll come!"

The startled girl trembled in the hot breath of his passion. Every vestige of color left her face.

"It is—so—sudden," she faltered. "I must think it over. Give me time."

"I'll call at your boarding house at 10 o'clock. Be on the watch. And remember how much there is at stake. But I know I can trust you.'

Betty's voice seemed to have dropped down into her throat. There was no response. A silence fell in which she could hear the muffled beating of her own heart.

That night Henderson was the first to leave. Sterling was in the room, and he could only give Betty a glance of mute appeal as he went out.

She crouched over her desk with blurred eyes. For a time there was no sound save the rustle of the paper Sterling pretended to read. At length, throwing it down, he crossed to her side.

"Still at work, Miss Vandevere?" he said, a new note in his big voice.

"I'll soon finish now," she answered without lifting her eyes. "Don't wait, please. I'll lock up."

Betty heard him sigh as he went out. Hastily locking the door on the inside, she withdrew the key and returned to her seat.

An hour dragged by. Now there were shadows everywhere. The corners were black with them. She felt a suffocating terror as if the walls were contracting and might shut together and crush her.

Suddenly a key clicked in the lock. She had barely time to drop behind a chair before a man tiptoed into the office. As he passed by her hiding place the light from the street struck across his face. For a minute she ceased to breathe. He went hurriedly on to the inner room, and after a little while a gentle clicking told her that he was working the combination of the safe.

Now was her chance! Quaking with fright, she crept to the door opening on the landing. One quick step and she was outside. Then the unexpected happened. A flood of light suddenly illumined the darkness. She saw that the passage was full of policemen. And she had rushed straight into Tom Sterling's arms!

"You! Oh, I'm so glad!" she gasped hysterically. "Quick! The safe! You are being robbed. Henderson"—

But the men in blue had already dashed past into the office. There was the sound of a struggle, then a voice shrieking dreadful curses—the same voice she had once thought so cultured and refined.

"I overheard—this afternoon," Sterling said quietly. "I had grown suspicious before. If you really love him he shall go free."

"Love him? Oh, no, no!" Betty cried with her face hidden on the big man's shoulder. "I didn't know until this afternoon whom I loved, but I do now!"

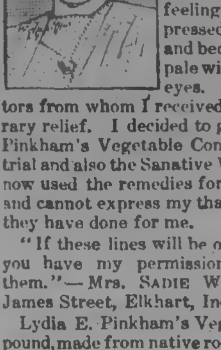
WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.



"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Points For Mothers

If it's a shame to give a dog a bad name, how much more deplorable is it to thus brand a little child, says a recent correspondent. Yet some parents proceed to do this very thing with the utmost unconcern. They give their little child the worst heritage that they have in their power to burden him with, the consciousness that he is not a good boy and hence that goodness can hardly be expected of him.

Perhaps the first thing that any man or woman has to learn in undertaking any business of life is the lesson of confidence in his own worth. If a man believes himself a failure, success would be a miracle or an accident.

And it's pretty much the same way with behavior. Unconsciously we model our behavior after the type of person that we imagine ourselves to be.

But all these things are platitudes which every parent knows. Yet, knowing them, how often does he proceed to give his little child that worst of all gifts—a willingness to think evil of himself!

Perhaps one reason why this is so is the almost general failure of grown people to realize how early in life impressions are made. It must be remembered that before a child can talk coherently he can understand, or at least gain definite impressions, from conversation which he overhears. This is proved time and time again by the chance remarks a baby makes which show that he has heard and understood something not meant for his ears.

And yet how often his parents take him out and apologize for his behavior or imply by their conversation that he is a "terror!"

"Well, there will be no peace for us now that Johnny is up from his nap," says Johnny's mother in the presence of her small son.

Far be it from Johnny to disappoint the expectations of his maternal relative.

This is only a sample of the sort of thing that grown people repeatedly say in the presence of children. And it's a very great pity. Give the child at least a fair chance and don't brand him at the start with a bad name.

Appearances Deceptive.

For the Children

A Young Wool Winder From the Philippines.

The demure little miss pictured above is an Igorrote from Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands. Formerly the Igorrotes were one of the wildest tribes of our faraway island possessions, but since Uncle Sam established schools they are rapidly learning the arts of civilization. This little Igorrote girl makes a very interesting picture in her odd dress and bare feet. She is evidently in holiday attire, as her headdress of beads indicates. In the old days so small a girl would have worn little clothing, but with increasing knowledge it is no longer considered proper to go about in abbreviated garb. As the picture shows, the little worker is busily engaged in winding wool on a homemade reel.

A True Circus Story.

In 1892 Forepaugh's circus was traveling through Alabama and stopped at Tecumseh over Sunday to feed the animals and rest. Several hundred persons were about the station as the train approached. Just then one of the lions, Hector by name, a ferocious creature, managed to tear off the door of his cage. He thrust his head out right in the faces of a group of negroes standing on the platform.

They could not have been worse scared if the evil one had dropped among them. With open mouth Hector leaped into the crowd. Such a scattering and yelling were never seen and heard in Alabama.

Hector landed on his feet, but rolled over and over. When he got up there was hardly a man, woman or child within fifty yards. One woman, who had fainted, lay near the lion.

With one bound he was upon her, his teeth showing and his tongue rolling out. The lookers on were horrified. The tamer was a long way off and there was no one near with pistol or rifle.

To the astonishment of every one the beast, instead of mangling the woman, simply sniffed at the body, turned it over with his paws and, after eyeing it suspiciously, walked away. He thought the woman was dead

TRUE HAPPINESS.

It Enables Man "to Draw Contentment From a Cup of Tears."

Wordsworth in one of his poems speaks of "a man too happy for mortality." We sometimes forget the spiritual significance of joy. The stoics believed that happiness was not essential to man and not to be expected. Happiness of a specific kind, based upon good fortunate to the individual, is indeed not always to be expected nor always to be desired. But the deeper happiness and joy that come from the sure triumph of the good and the true are essential to the individual well being and the progress of society.

There have been those who learned through a beautiful consecration "to draw contentment from a cup of tears" and who came, through life's higher discipline, to know that there is a deep and abiding joy in the midst of pain and disappointment, a joy built upon the knowledge of life's greatness and the ability of the soul to rise above the temporary thing.

Such a joy as this is needed to make a man capable of inheriting eternity here and hereafter, for it raises man above the merely mortal and invests him with energy to pursue the tasks that are without end and fills him with a desire to ally himself with the powers that build the beauty of a continuing world.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

TORTURED WITH TERRIBLE ECZEMA

Had To Wear Rubber Gloves Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her.

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., JAN. 2nd. 1910

"My wife was troubled for three years with Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs).

I persuaded her, as a last resort, to try 'Fruit-a-tives". The effect was marvellous. Her hands are now cured. We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives"

TWO NEW ORGANIZATIONS FROM CANADIAN LEAGUE

With the Brantford Canadian League franchise for sale and its probable removal to Youngstown, Ohio, the proposition to make the Canadian-American League a class "B" organization is an assured fact. The combined population of the eight cities then in the league would just come within the half-million mark necessary to give it class "B" rating. With this established fact there should be no reason why clubs like Brantford, Berlin and Guelph should not sell their franchises and start another class "D" league, which undoubtedly is more in keeping with their populations. With such a league there would be no question as to the success of the league, as the salary limit would then be greatly reduced and more in keeping with the kind of ball they can support in these cities.

A table showing the population of the cities which are being talked of as probable franchises in the new Canadian-American League:

Ottawa, Ontario	96,600
Hamilton, Ontario	94,000
Youngstown, Ohio	85,000
Erie, Pennsylvania	75,600
Niagara, New York	56,000
London, Ontario	55,000
Peterborough, Ontario	22,000
St. Thomas, Ontario	18,000
Totals	501,000

The new class "D" league for Ontario would include the following cities of the following approximate populations:

Brantford	24,000
Guelph	16,000
Berlin	18,000
Stratford	15,600
Woodstock	10,000
St. Catharines	14,000
Totals	97,000

THE POOR SICK BOY.

He Had Many Ailments, but Got His Dates Mixed.

Mark Twain on a visit to his birthplace, Hannibal, Mo., told to the school children a true story about a schoolboy.

"This boy," he said, "awoke one morning very ill. His groans alarmed the household. The doctor was sent for and came post haste.

"'Well,' said the doctor as he entered the sickroom, 'what is the trouble?'

"'A pain in my side,' said the boy.

"'Any pain in the head?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Is the right hand stiff?'

"'A little.'

"'How about the right foot?'

"'That's stiff, too.'

"The doctor winked at the boy's mother.

"'Well,' he said, 'you're pretty sick. But you'll be able to go to school on Monday. Let me see, today is Saturday, and'—

"'Is today Saturday?' said the boy in a vexed tone. 'I thought it was Friday.'

"Half an hour later, the boy declared himself healed and got up. Then they packed him off to school, for it was Friday, after all."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Good Tip.

"The following is a good plan," says a Frenchman, "to avoid tipping a waiter at a restaurant. When the bill comes pay it exactly. During his rapture at being mistaken for the owner of the restaurant you escape."—Weekly Telegraph.

How Brown Learned How.

There is a man who makes shoes for children—and sells them to stores all over Canada

But he is only just learning how people buy.

It was this way: His wife—let us call her Mrs. Brown—'phoned to him and asked him to buy some underwear for little Brown.

Picture Brown now among the throng of mothers at the "Children's Underwear" counter. He asks for Underwear for a child of six. He looks it over helplessly. What on earth does he know about Children's Underwear? For lack of anything better to say he asks: "Is this good quality?" The answer is short and quite conclusive: "It's Blank's"—naming a well-advertised line. That short word says everything. Brown pays his money and goes home, quite satisfied with his purchase.

Now what bothers Brown—a manufacturer of shoes, is this: How would it affect the purchase of a child's shoes if the salesman said "They're Brown's"?

Nobody knows Brown's shoes. Brown doesn't advertise.

The name Brown signifies nothing when used in connection with children's shoes. The salesman must use all his persuasive wiles to induce people to buy them.

The point is—If the name Brown was as synonomous with Children's Shoes as "Blank's" is with Underwear, wouldn't Brown sell more shoes with less effort?

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

WHIRLING BODIES

They Invariably Tend to Point to the Pole Star.

SCIENCE AND SPINNING A TOP.

That the Earth Revolves on Its Axis May Be Proved by a Simple Experiment With the Gyrostat—Phenomena of Rapidly Revolving Objects.

Spinning a top is not always child's play, although it has generally been regarded as a juvenile sport. Once in England top whipping was practically ordered by law. There was a huge top formerly provided in every village to be whipped in frosty weather that the peasants might be kept warm by the exercise and out of mischief while they could not work. Shakespeare in "Twelfth Night" says, "His brains turn like a parish top." Ben Jonson in "New Inn" writes, "He spins like a parish top," and Beaumont and Fletcher have "dances like a town top and reels and hobbles." Evelyn, the diarist, speaking of the uses of willow wood, says that it was ordered that "the great town tops should be made thereof."

Of late years, however, science has taken a hand in spinning tops with fruitful results. From spinning tops we can learn many interesting and valuable things. For example, we can prove that the earth revolves on its axis and calculate at what speed.

The phenomena of spinning bodies are extremely interesting. If you throw your hat into the air, but without spinning it, it will fall perhaps on one side, perhaps on the other, but if you give it a spinning motion before sending it into the air it will always come down the same side down as it went up. The same thing is true of coins and in fact of all objects spun in this manner. A knife, if merely thrown into the air, may come down at any angle, but if held point down and sent spinning into the air it will on falling stick its point into the floor invariably.

Other bodies acquire rigidity when spun rapidly. Thus a piece of chain if placed on a wheel and made to revolve rapidly will form a perfect circle and if thrown off the wheel suddenly will roll across the table or the floor just like a solid hoop until its speed is diminished, when it will fall into a huddled mass.

It is a strange fact that spinning bodies always tend to point to the north star—the pole star. Gently, but firmly, they seem to tug at their moorings in an effort to assume the angle that will point them in that direction. Once they have attained it they do not vary.

If, now, you want to prove the rotation of the earth by means of a spinning top you can do so as follows: Provide yourself with a gyrostat capable of being driven by electricity so that it can run for twenty-four hours or more without stopping. Set this going and point it to the north or pole star. It will soon assume that direction. Now, as the axis of the top is pointed in a certain direction (say the north wall of the room) and stays there, without ever moving, this will be a guide to you to check off your observations. And as you watch you will notice that in six hours' time the top will point to the west and six hours later to the south, six hours later to the east, and at the conclusion of the twenty-four hours it will have completed the circle and will again be pointing due north. It will have completed the circuit of the four walls of the room.

What does this mean? It means that the room has revolved round the top, but as the room is fixed to the solid earth it implies that the whole earth has revolved round the top, which alone remained stationary. Consequently we have proved by this means that the earth has turned once round on its axis, and that it does so turn, and that the heavens remain still and stationary.

Many interesting astronomical discoveries have been made by the aid of spinning tops, and the facts obtained by their study have been applied to the rotation of heavenly bodies, the earth included, and the "wabble" of its axis has been calculated by this means. In many ways, therefore, the spinning top is a valuable scientific instrument. —Hereward Carrington in New York World.

PROHIBIT SALE OF MEAT WHERE SLAUGHTER HOUSE OWNERS FAIL TO ACT

Those Operating Outside City Limits Cannot Sell in the City if They Fail to Live up to Regulations

Where the Provincial Health regulations regarding slaughter houses are not carried out at slaughter houses outside the city limits, the meat therefrom cannot be sold in the city, according to a motion passed at the Board of Health meeting this morning. Inspector Spence introduced the question when he reported that his suggestions towards improvements had not been carried out in two or three instances.

He reported one case where beef after boiling gave forth a stench. He found, on inspection, that it was not that the meat was diseased, but probably the trouble was that the carcass was allowed to remain in the slaughter house.

SHOULD REMOVE CARCASS.

Asked if the owners had absolutely refused to follow out suggestions, Mr. Spence replied in the negative, but he said nothing had been done in the way of improvement. His opinion was that the carcass should not remain in the slaughter house after the killing.

A DEALER PRAISED.

He said that a butcher named Wheeler deserved credit. He had followed out suggestions, and latterly had provided a sort of refrigerator in which to place the carcass.

The Inspector explained that he had no powers in slaughter houses outside the city limits, but he had learned that the local Board of Health could prohibit the sale of meat from these slaughter houses in the city.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS HEAR FROM W.A. BAILEY

Half Pay for Veteran Officer — New Constable Appointed

At the Police Commissioners' meeting yesterday afternoon, George F. Hayward, of this city, was appointed constable on the police force. Four applications received were: George F. Hayward, J. Dundas, Donald Stevens, and F. A. Kempsey, of Toronto. One of the features of the meeting was a letter from W. A. Bailey, who sent the following letter:

Peterborough Police Commissioners:

The newspaper clippings were those probably sent by me in reference to the charge of assault against me on May 31. I considered a silent protest would be understood, the attack on me being an incident in the continuous persecutions. I was driven out of the Y.M.C.A., and when bathing stone throwing was quite a favorite pastime. After a few days' use of a season's ticket for the Brock Street Rink I had to cease going. Such incidents are not unknown to the authorities, and have to some extent been participated in by the civic authorities. For instance, by the sidewalk gang when doing George street near my home was caused. I considered a summons should not have been granted to a gang of common thieves, who do not live in the city, especially when I have lived here for some years, and have also spent considerable money here. Those women who appeared against me in Police Court would swear a life away for the sum of five cents. However, the clippings were to show the inventive means of one of the papers, whose influence in Police Court is entirely bad.

Yours obediently,

W. A. BAILEY.

The letter was received and fyled.

"Its very unfortunate that we can't keep these men; they only stay a few months and leave us," remarked His Honor Judge Huycke in dealing with the resignation of Constable Wm. Tucker, who resigned from the force on the last of October.

P.C. McGINITY'S CASE.

The case of Charles McGinity, the veteran policeman, who has been unable to assume duties on the force for the past four months, owing to illness, was again brought up. On motion of Magistrate Dumble and Mayor Bradburn, he will receive half pay until further consideration of the case.

Mayor Bradburn suggested that he receive half pay from now until the end of the year, but Judge Huycke agreed with the Magistrate's suggestion, and the Mayor seconded the motion.

FULL FLEDGED P.O.

Constable Wm. Patterson, who has been acting constable owing to the illness of Constable McGinity, was permanently appointed as constable on the local police force.

On the recommendation of the Chief, Detective Newhall was provided with a raincoat.

On the Chief informing the members of the Board that Sergeant Adams would have to undergo an operation, he was advised to keep an eye on the other applicants.

Nothing further was done in connection with the appointing of Constable Brown as sergeant.

ALLOWED TO 'PHONE.

His Honor brought up the matter of the Hallowe'en escapade by the boys as to the boys being unable to 'phone for their parents. The Chief informed His Honor that the boys were allowed to 'phone for their parents, as per report from the sergeant in charge on the night.

WATER SERVICE FOR McDONNEL STREET WEST

Board of Health Recommends That Service be Given

CASES OF SICKNESS

People West of Park Street Use Well Water

The Board of Health, in session this morning with acting chairman Duncan presiding recommended that water service be provided for residents of McDonnel street, west of Park street.

They have applied for the service but there is not sufficient revenue as required by the Water Commissioners. These people use water from wells, and it is from this street that cases of typhoid fever have been reported. A sewer service for the street was passed some time ago. The Board also recommended a sewer of 184 feet, the service being applied for by Thos. Mitchell.

All accounts presented were passed.

HUNTERS WILL WELCOME THE FALL OF SNOW

Mr. Fred Roy, who has returned after spending ten days with the Ketchecum Hunt Club at Ketchecum Lake, reports a very good season. In five days' hunting five deer were dropped which is a fairly good average. Mr Roy had the honor of getting a fine buck.

According to Mr. Roy this snow will be more than welcomed by the various hunters. During the past ten days the weather was too hot and as there was a great deal of the bush burned during the summer, the deer make for the swamp where the richest grass is to be found. It is very hard for a hunter to follow them as it is very uncertain as to where they are likely to take to the water.

Quite a surprise was sprung in the district of Ketchecum Lake one day last week when it became known that a bull moose had been seen. Although no one has killed any of the "big ones" it is altogether likely that some hunter will bag one some of these days.

The remainder of the party which includes some 12 men will return about Nov. 15thth

THIS LISTER FOUND BOTTLE AT STATION

Italians Were Good Enough to Leave it Behind

SPEEDER IS FINED

A blacklister appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on the charge of being drunk while a member of the "Indian list." He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10. He told the court that he found his liquor at the G.T.R. waiting room yesterday morning.

He explained that he went to the station to meet a friend but that the friend had failed to come and that on going into the waiting room he saw a bunch of Italians drinking. He waited there for the train. Meanwhile the Italians went into the wash room to have another drink. When the train arrived they went out to the platform. He then went into the room and saw the bottle half filled with whiskey. He waited until the men had left and then went back and got the bottle, taking it and hiding it in the coal yards on his way home. He came up town after dinner and got drunk on the contents of the bottle.

Chief Thompson—Well, I received a report from a bartender last night that he had supplied you with liquor not knowing that you were on the list:

"I don't remember anything like that," replied the witness.

"Where was the last place you remember being in?" questioned the Chief.

"Irwin's barber shop."

"Oh that is another blacklister's shop," answered the Chief.

Asked if he had been with Killenbeck yesterday the witness denied seeing the man yesterday.

FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Sam Long, a local man, was fined $7.60 on his plea of guilty to speeding his automobile on George street last Wednesday night. Constable Reid, the informant, claimed that the man was travelling at a rate of thirty miles an hour.

REGULATIONS FOR MARKET

To Govern the Sale of Produce, Particularly Fowl

SCRUB THE FLOOR

Mark Baskets With the Name of the Owner

For the consideration of the 1914 Council, Sanitary Inspector will prepare a list of regulations governing the sale of produce on the market. If Council gives favorable consideration, the regulations will figure in the calls for tenders for the market tolls.

Sanitary Inspector Spence would have all poultry offered for sale on the market dressed with liver and heart exposed for the benefit of the buying public. At the Board of Health meeting this morning, Mr. Spence said last week he had found one turkey not all that it ought to be. Afterwards he had found the bird had been suffering from a disease known as black head. The lady who made the purchase said it was tuberculosis, but this was not correct.

Mr Spence held that the regulations should be placed at the market, then the farmers seeing it in black and white would govern themselves accordingly.

MARK THE BASKETS.

Dr. McPherson suggested that the baskets be marked with the name or sign of the owner. That would permit of recourse for the purchasers who found the goods not what they should be. At the present time there was no recourse such as in the case of a purchase at a grocery store, where the customer could return the goods.

SCRUB THE FLOOR.

Furthermore, Dr. McPherson claimed that the market hall was not as clean as it should be. In his opinion, it should be scrubbed once a week.

There was some uncertainty among the members as to the extent of scrubbing operations at the present time.

Mayor Bradburn thought it a good thing to educate the farmers on the question of preparing fowl for market. Down at Port Hope, he explained, there was no such trouble.

THE DREAM MAIDEN

"The Dream Maiden," which has been engaged by special inducement to appear at the Grand for one performance only, on Wednesday evening November 19th, is a new operetta, in two acts and intermezzo, by Allen Lowe, the author of "The Isle of Spice," "The Defender" etc., and Bela Lasky, the eminent Viennese composer, which is now being performed in the principal cities of Ontario on the way to its immediate presentation in New York.

The company includes among its principals Audrey Maple, the charming prima donna, well known for her success in "The Arcadians," "The Firefly," etc., Philip Simmons, the English tenor, especially engaged from Geo. Edwardes's London Company, William Pruette, the most noted American basso-buffo, John Morgan, recently with "The Siren," William Cameron, the popular comedian, Al. McGarry, the baritone, Susanne Morgan, who is said to be a second Marie Dressler, and Louise Morrison and Kathryn Bowen, two winsome singing engenues.

A chorus of forty, including a bevy of pretty girls, together with an orchestra augmented by selected soloists, forms a musical ensemble which assures a worthy rendition of Lasky's charming score, while the scenery and costumes are reported to be the final word in theatrical beauty and effectiveness: the production being up to the highest metropolitan standard in every particular.

TERRIBLE TALES FROM STORM TOSSED LAKES MANY VICTIMS BEING PICKED UP ALONG SHORES

COLLINGWOOD LOSES SEVEN CITIZENS IN WRECK OF THE WEXFORD

Bodies Washed Ashore at St. Joseph, Ont., Are Identified as Those of Captain Bruce Cameron and His Crew — English Steward and His Wife Are Among the Dead—Had Planned to Go to England.

COLLINGWOOD, Nov. 12. — The news of the loss of the lake freighter Wexford, which was received here yesterday afternoon, has shrouded the town in a sadness such as has not prevailed for many years. So many wives and families have been bereaved that the whole town mourns. The crew of the steamer included six or seven from this port, all being vigorous and experienced mariners.

The bodies of five drowned men, all with life-belts on, four of which had marked on them "Wexford," and the other "London," were found on Lake Huron beach, five miles south of St. Joseph, according to advices from that village yesterday, by Robert Turnbull, a farmer. The bodies were not far apart. All the men were young.

Captain Bruce Cameron, who was master of the ill-fated steamer, belonged to a family of mariners. He was the second son of the late Captain Alex. C. Cameron, and was born in Collingwood about twenty-six years ago. He had sailed on the lakes during the past ten years, and had successfully filled various positions on different steamers sailing out of this port. He was married last spring.

Archibald Brooks, second officer of the Wexford, was a young man and had sailed for several seasons. Last year he occupied the same position on this boat.

James Scott, chief engineer, had been on the lake steamers for several season. Scott was married and leaves a family of three children in Collingwood.

Richard Lougheed, assistant engineer, had also had some years' experience and had occupied positions on different boats on the lakes. He was married to Miss Dickenson of Collingwood.

Allan Dodson, watchman.

Orrin Gordon, watchman, was a young unmarried man, a son of Charles Gordon of this town. He was on the Wexford last year in the same position.

George Willmott, an Englishman, who had been in Collingwood but a short time, was another member of the crew. He had charge of the steward's department. Mrs. Willmott was with him on the vessel. He, with his wife, contemplated returning to Bristol at the close of the season.

Huronic Safely Released.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 12. — The Huronic got off the bar at Whitefish at three o'clock yesterday afternoon without damage. The Alberta left Whitefish to cross Lake Superior westbound at nine a.m. The local wireless station at 3.30 p.m. received a report that wreckage of the steamer Waldo had been picked up at Keeweenah Point on the south shore of Lake Superior.

ROBBERS GET $10,000 FROM BANK AND ESCAPE

RIFLE BATTLE WITH CITIZENS

Canadian Press Despatch.

SEATTLE, Nov. 12— A despatch from Hazelton, B.C., says five masked men robbed the Union Bank at New Hazleton last night and slightly wounded the cashier and escaped with ten thousand dollars after a rifle battle with citizens.

The cashier returning from dinner surprised the robbers at work. One robber opened fire striking the cashier between the eyes. Citizens, attracted by the sound of the shot hurried to the bank just as the robbers were leaving. The fleeing men fought a running bettle with their purssuers till the woods were reached. Six men have been arrested on suspicion.

LOCAL PEOPLE FEAR FOR SAFETY OF CAPT. GREENLEY

Since the first reports of the loss of ships and life as a result of the storms on the great lakes, Mr. and Mrs J. W. Hickey, Engleburne Ave., East City, have had fears for the safety of their son-in-law, Captain Greenley, who is in charge of the "Albert W. Marshall," a freighter which plies between Montreal and Chicago.

No mention of this boat has been made in the reports to date and it may be that Capt. Greenley was not in the danger zone. However, some anxiety will be felt till more assuring news is received.

Suffragettes Commit Several Outrages Throughout Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Militant suffragette arson squads and bomb troops were at work in several parts of the British Isles during Monday night.

The cactus house at Alexandra Park, Manchester, containing a collection valued at $50,000, was badly wrecked by a bomb; Begbrook, a fine mansion near Bristol, was gutted by fire; and the pavilion of the Bowling and Tennis Club at Catford, in the southeast of London, also was burned down.

On the scene of all the outrages quantities of suffrage literature and petroleum cans were found.

Capital Pledged For Line.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Times learns that the capital has been raised in Boston and Great Britain for necessary engineering work and the establishment of a line of steamers running direct from Blacksod Bay, County Mayo, Ireland, to Halifax and Boston. This project is in connection with the schemes for all British communication around the Empire.

Turco-Greek Agreement.

ATHENS, Nov. 12—The Greek and Turkish peace delegates reached an agreement yesterday practically on all points under negotiation. They initialed the draft convention which it is believed will result in a complete settlement of the controversy between the two countries.

Bridgeport Given Up.

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 12.—The wireless station at North Sydney picked up the Lake Champlain, bound to Montreal and the Reid steamship Lintrose yesterday morning, and enquired if they had seen anything of the missing collier Bridgeport, receiving the answer "Nothing." Hope has been abandoned that the ship is disabled and drifting at sea. In all probability she foundered in the gale which she ran into shortly after leaving this port.

He Stared at "Cop."

BRESLAU, Germany, Nov. 12.—Sentence of a fortnight in prison for staring at a policeman was imposed on a business man of this city yesterday.

In his defence the defendant said he believed the policeman was observing him to conspicuously, so he stared back.

The court in pronouncing judgment said the defendant had been guilty of a most serious insult to an official.

Miller Case Hangs Fire.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—The appeal of R. C. Miller vs. the Diamond Light & Heating Co. of Montreal will not likely be proceeded with by the Supreme Court at its present sitting. The Quebec courts ruled that Mr. Miller must give an accounting of some $50,000 paid to him by the company to secure business in Ottawa. Mr. Miller was the prisoner of state last winter when he declined to tell Parliament what he did with the money.

DETAILS OF TRAGEDIES ON LAKES ARE GROWING HOURLY

Property Loss Cannot Yet Be Estimated But it Will Run into Millions of Dollars--Survivors Arriving in Lake Ports Tell of Narrow Escapes From Death -- Seven Hunters Are Dead.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The shores of Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Lake Erie were strewn last night with the wreckage of a three-days' gale and snowstorm, which cost the lives of probably three-score persons, turned bottom up in mid-lake a three-hundred-foot vessel with its crew, wrecked or grounded numerous other craft and caused a property loss as yet unknown, but which will run into the millions.

The details of the storm, which literally swept from the western end of Lake Superior to the eastern shore of Lake Erie, became known only yesterday when survivors began arriving in various ports with tales of hardships and heroic rescues seldom equalled on the lakes.

On land the storm hit hardest at Cleveland, Ohio, where 21 inches of snow fell, five persons were killed and ten others injured, and where $2,000,000 damage was caused to property, chiefly telegraph and telephone companies, thus keeping the city out of direct communication for two days.

The escapes from death were numerous. After the storm about Friday midnight had blown away the forward part of the ship Captain J. W. Duddleson of the steamer L. C. Waldo, navigated by a small, inaccurate compass and the aid of a lantern held by a sailor. In this way he guided himself to a reef where the crew landed, suffering intense cold and hunger until their rescue yesterday.

The crew of the Turret Chief, when the ship struck the rocks in Lake Superior, were forced to go ashore scantily clad. They built a hut to protect them from the blizzard.

It was impossible even to estimate the loss to vessels wrecked or damaged by grounding. Shippers in Detroit estimated the loss in Lake Huron and the Detroit and St. Clair rivers alone to be several hundred thousand dollars. Three of the wrecked steamers increase the loss by $500,000, while the scores of small craft drive ashore in Lake Superior and Lake Erie will send the total much higher.

The more important mishaps to ships were:

Unidentified 300 foot steel freighter, floating bottom up in Lake Huron, a few miles south of Port Huron. Built in Canada, cargo probably flax; U. S. life-saving crew found vessel in such a position as to have made it impossible for any of the crew of 25 to 40 to have escaped.

Lightship No. 82, in Lake Erie, off Port Albino, 15 miles west of Buffalo, with a crew of six, believed lost; lifeboat found floating bottom up, with wreckage of ship floated into Buffalo harbor.

Steamer L. C. Waldo of Bay Transportation Co., Detroit, torn to pieces by storm Friday night and pounded against rocks on Gull Rock, Manitou Island. Captain and crew of 25 men and women rescued after having been without food for 90 hours; terribly frozen; taken last night to Houghton, Mich.; vessel, which is a loss of $300,000, was of 4,466 gross tonnage, with a 452 foot keel and was built in 1896.

Steamer Turret Chief of the Canadian Lake & Ocean Co., went to pieces on the rocks six miles east of Keeweenah Point in Lake Superior before daylight Sunday. Crew rescued after having lived for three days in a hut on a reef; loss $100,000.

Unidentified vessel wrecked on rocks at Angus Point, Isle Royale, Lake Superior.

Lost His Compasses.

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 12.—Captain J. W. Duddleson of the steamer L. C. Waldo of the Bay Transportation Co. of Detroit, which was broken in two at Gull Rock, Manitou Island, told of the wreck upon his arrival with his crew of 25 men and two women aboard the tug Hebard at Houghton last night.

The storm struck her at 11.45 o'clock Friday night. The mountainous waves tore off the forward house and pilot house and all structures to the forward part of the ship. The compasses were lost and connections with the electric lighting system were broken. Captain Duddleson's only resort was a small inaccurate compass, which he was enabled to follow with the aid of a lantern held by a member of the crew.

After being tossed about for about eighteen hours, the boat finally struck the reef. Until the arrival of the tug yesterday the crew was without food.

Lightship Goes Down.

BUFFALO, Nov. 12. — Fragments of wreckage, tossed ashore along many miles of lake front, yesterday confirmed the fear that the storm which lashed Lake Erie on Sunday and Monday had claimed its toll of death. Six men perished when Lightship No. 82 was torn from her anchorage 15 miles up the lake and either foundered or was shattered on the break wall under cover of the blinding snowstorm of Monday.

Inspector House chartered a tug and joined Captain Herbert in the search for the boat. No trace of the lightship was found, however, and when, yesterday afternoon, one of her lifeboats was picked up, all hope was abandoned. In the lifeboat were three life-preservers and a broken oar was still fastened to one of the row-locks.

Sportsmen In Duck Boats Are Caught In Storm.

Sebewaing, Mich., Nov. 12.—Seven hunters are believed to have perished Sunday in the hurricane which swept Saginaw Bay. The men were in duck boats on the "middle ground," a partly submerged, rush-covered spot, half a mile from the shore.

J. Ruby of this place, forced to leave the hunting grounds when his boat began to fill, saw eight men in the rushes as he passed. Of these, one is known to have escaped. Paul Emerich and Bert Cornwell of Detroit were among the seven missing, but the names of the others are not known.

Searching parties have been unable to find any trace of the men, but an empty boat was found last night in the weeds.

NORTHERN QUEEN IS AMONG LOST

Bodies can be Seen Rolling About Decks of Freighter

HOUGHTON, Mich., Nov. 12.—According to messages received yesterday in a roundabout way from the Canadian shore of Lake Huron seven bodies had been washed ashore at Kettle Point, and a ship, grounded far out from the point, was being pounded to pieces by the waves.

Seven other bodies, it was declared, could be seen rolling about the decks of the stranded vessel. Only a part of the boat's name could be made out, that being the word "Queen." The Northern Queen, a steel freighter, 300 feet long, owned by the Mutual Transit Co. of Buffalo, has not been accounted for since she passed this port Sunday morning, heading into Lake Huron.

The owners of the Northern Queen last night telegraphed reports at Port Huron that if any "Queen" is ashore they believe it must be the Northern Queen.

How long the ship has been on the rocks no one on shore knows. She was first sighted late yesterday. The message telling of her plight came from a railroad station agent several miles inland from Kettle Point.

No help can be sent to the "Queen," as the nearest life-saving station is located here, and the seas are still too heavy to permit sending small boats so great a distance.

There is no wire communication with Kettle Point.

A mile beyond the Northern Queen is another freighter, partly turned over on her side. The members of the crew can be distinguished on several parts of the boat. There is no possible means of absolutely identifying the boat or the line that she belongs to. Sturdy fishermen made several valiant attempts to launch their boats yesterday to go to the rescue, but were driven back on the shore by the tremendous waves which are breaking on the rocks.

CREW GOT TO LAND

Many Turret Chief's Sailors Barefoot in Bitter Cold

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 12.—Captain Paddington and crew of sixteen of the steamer Turret Chief of the Canadian Lake & Ocean Navigation Co., which foundered six miles east of Copper Harbor, Keeweenah Point at four o'clock Saturday morning, arrived in Calumet last night.

Frost bitten, thinly clad and without food since Friday night, the crew reached Copper harbor yesterday afternoon being directed there by a trapper. Yesterday they reached Mandan, Keeweenah County, and got into communication with civilization. Food and warm clothing were provided for their comfort until they could reach Calumet.

When the Turret Chief drifted ashore. The men were thrown from their beds and had time to don but little clothing. A number of them were compelled to leave the boat barefooted and several of these suffered from frostbitten feet.

The doom of the vessel was soon sealed, and with waves washing over the bulk the crew picked their way to the mainland. A hut was hastily built and in this they found shelter from the blizzard until yesterday morning. The Turret Chief will probably be a total loss, as her position is such that she cannot be taken off before the waves pound her to pieces.

May Release Larkin.

DUBLIN, Nov. 12.—It is reported here that James Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union, will be released from prison by order of the British Cabinet. Larkin was recently sentenced to seven months' imprisonmen in connection with the strike here.

BLOW FOR PROVINCES.

Privy Council Rules on Succession Duty Question.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—An important judgment was delivered yesterday afternoon by the Privy Council as to whether the Quebec Succession Duty Act, imposing a tax in respect of property situated outside the province at the time of their death was ultra vires.

The estates in question were those of Charlotte L. Cotton and Henry H Cotton, part of whose estates were situated in the United States.

The Quebec Government claimed the duty on the whole estate, which the executors resisted.

The Privy Council allowed the appeal of the executors and the cross appeal failed. Their lordships find that such taxation was not direct taxation and was therefore ultra vires.

Inquiry at the Parliament Buildings yesterday revealed the fact that the Privy Council's taxation decision will probably mean hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the provinces of the Dominion.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, Provincial Treasurer, seen yesterday, was not inclined to think that the decision could be retroactive, and although there will be an appreciable effect on the provincial exchequer, he could not say just what course would now be pursued.

Taylor Murder Trial Opens.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 12. — James Taylor, the self-confessed murderer of Charles Dawson, appeared in the dock before Mr. Justice Kelly yesterday afternoon.

Taylor had no counsel, and his lordship appointed A. M. Harley, the city's junior graduate in law.

The grand jury brought in a true bill, and the trial opens to-day. Medical evidence may be important in the case, as Taylor's mentality is held in question.

J. J. Drew of Guelph is crown prosecutor.

Smallpox Suspects at Farm.

GUELPH, Nov. 12.—The medical superintendent at the provincial prison farm has discovered two suspicious cases, which, although he has not yet diagnosed them as smallpox, he has taken every precaution to isolate from all the other prisoners. Eight teamsters with whom the suspects have come into contact have been quarantined.

Anti-Semitic Forces Are Rousing Russians Over Beiliss Acquittal.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 12.—The ending of the Kiev trial is regarded as opening a political struggle more dangerous than Russia has known for several years. The jury's finding that Beiliss was innocent, the murder was committed in the brick yard at Zaitseff, 47 wounds were inflicted and five cups of blood withdrawn, is already being used to intensify race hatred, although it is wholly consistent with the contention that thieves in the Tcheberyak's household, subsidized by the provocateurs, committed the crime in the manner most likely to arouse anti-Semitic feeling.

It is understood that Premier Kokotvzoff, who has been abroad, throughout the trial, strongly warned the authorities of the disastrous effect in western Europe of the latitude allowed at Kiev to the quack theologians, such as the priest Pranaitis and that conviction following such a trial would immediately be followed by revisionist agitation shaking the very foundations of bureaucracy.

Family Has Narrow Escape.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 12.—Fire destroyed the home of Arthur Smart at an early hour yesterday morning. The occupanst barely had time to dress scantily and escape with their lives.

The dwelling is one of the beauty spots overlooking the River St. Lawrence, and the flames being fanned by a stiff wind in a driving snowstorm, the place was entirely consumed, together with its entire furnishings, which included much valuable personal effects.

Over and above the insurance on the building and contents, which was $7,000, there is a loss of fully $6,000. The fire is supposed to have originated in the furnace room.

Search For Missing Men.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Believing that their friends are safe, a rescue party, comprising four men, set out in a launch yesterday in search of John Marsh, manager of the Astor Hotel, C. Smith, Hugh Dillon, W. Thorpe, F. Wyckoff and Scotty Young, who left last Saturday nigh in a gasoline launch for a Sunday outing at Macnab Creek and have not been heard of since.

Robbed Chicago Mails.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The theft of money and jewelry valued at $10,000 was disclosed yesterday by Col. James Stuart, postoffice inspector here. The crime is alleged to have been committed by a mail wagon driver, who told his wife Monday night he would write her as soon as he escaped across the border. Col. Stuart says the man is an ex-convict. The contractor for the mail collection is under bond to make good losses suffered through employes.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain will celebrate his silver wedding on Saturday. He first met Miss Endicott on a visit to Washington to receive acknowledgement of his success in dealing with the dispute between Britain and the United States regarding fisheries off the Canadian and Newfoundland coasts in 1887.

Much Wreckage Found in the Harbor at Goderich

Canadian Press Despatch.

GODERICH, Nov 12— This morning an oar marked "Jas Carruthers" was picked up off the harbor here and under instructions from superintendent Parsons of the Goderich Elevator Company, a systematic search was commenced.

Wreckage was found along shore for mile or more below the harbor including the rudder of a life boat also marked "Jas Carruthers"; part of an oak-finished cabin, pieces of oak chairs, part of a pilot's house, and other pieces of the upper works of a large boat.

It is evident that the "Jas Carruthers" the largest Canadian freighter on the Lakes, went down in Sunday's storm. She was owned by the St. Lawrence and Chicago Navigation Company. A.A. Wright of the Toronto Marine Company has been notified. Last night seven bodies from the "Chas. S. Price" came ashore below Grand Bend. This is believed to the boat lying off Sarnia upside down A life buoy from Edwin F. Holmes, a large American boat, has also been found.

KEIGHLEY GOES LIBERAL.

Sir Stanley Buckmaster Increases Previous Majority.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Keighley bye-election vote resulted as follows: Sir Stanley Buckmaster, Liberal, 4,730; Lord Lascelles, Unionist, 3,852; Wm. Bland, Labor, 3,646.

Fresh spirit has been put into the Liberal party by the return of Sir Stanley Buckmaster, who had to seek re-election in consequence of his elevation to the Solicitor-Generalship of England. He has retained the seat, and not only so, but has increased his majority to the extent of 59 over the Unionist and Labor candiuates. The excitement in the division was unprecedented, and the poll, which exceeds that of 1911 by 267 votes, constitutes a record.

The Irish vote was heavy, and is said to have been anything between 600 and 900 strong, as Linlithgow and Reading electors had been urged throughout the campaign by Liberal-Unionist candidates to concentrate their minds mainly upon the home rule question. The Labor candidate confined his propaganda to purely labor issues, incidentally claiming credit for the passage of the trades' dispute bill, old-age pensions and kindred measures.

Sir Stanley claims the lesson of the victory to be only too obvious, which is to free the British Parliament from preoccupation with Irish problems, and to open the way for the great changes Lloyd George has foreshadowed in his land campaign.

Workman Loses Both Arms.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 12.—Charles Coats of Toronto, who has been employed at the Lybster paper mill at Merritton for some little time, was caught in a machine that he was attending, and his arms were so badly mangled that both had to be amputated, one above the elbow.

Suit For Three Millions.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The United Booking Offices of America, promoters of theatrical enterprises, were made defendants yesterday in a Sherman Law anti-trust suit for $3,000,000 damages filed in the Federal Court by H. B. Marinelli, Limited, of New York, London and Paris.

CHAIRMAN NAMED.

Chief Justice R. M. Meredith To Arbitrate C.P.R. Wage Case.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Chief Justice R. M. Meredith of the Court of Common Pleas of Ontario, has been appointed chairman of an arbitration board to deal with a dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. and the maintenance of way employes on its entire system, to the number of approximately 5,000, by Hon. T. W. Crothers, yesterday morning.

The dispute in question grows out of a proposed new schedule of agreement submitted by the employes. Chief Justice Meredith is appointed by the Minister of Labor in the absence of any joint recommendation from the other two members of the board. The company's nominee on the board is Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto, and the employes' nominee is Mr. Henry Irwin of Portage la Prairie.

LOST BOTH EYES WHEN DYNAMITE CAPS EXPLODED

Employe of Rolling Mills at Belleville May Die — Has Family of Nine Children.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 12.—Thomas Cooper, an employe of the rolling mills here, was yesterday the victim of an accident which in all probability will prove fatal. He was assisting in breaking up some large plates, using dynamite. He had placed two charges which did not go off as quickly as he expected, and as he went to the plates the caps exploded. Pieces of the plate struck him in the face, lacerating it in a terrible manner, and both eyes were destroyed. In addition, the right arm was broken, the hand torn and other injuries inflicted. He was removed to the hospital. Cooper has a wife and grown up family of nine children in Montreal.

A NAVAL SUGGESTION

Here is a good suggestion which we think is original, and we offer it to Mr. Winston Churchill as an alternative to the Naval Holiday proposal. It is this: That Great Britain offer to withdraw her warships from the north sea, save such as are necessary for minor police purposes. This to be done on the condition that Germany does the same.

This ought to test the good-will and peaceful motives of the Fatherland. It can be taken for granted that if Germany were to withdraw its North Sea fleet Great Britain would do the same without being asked; for only a mad-men and a few German newspapers believe that England has any aggressive designs upon German territory.

If it be true, what Dr. Horning says, that there are Germans who believe that Great Britain is waiting for an opportunity to pounce upon them, then it only goes to show their utter ignorance of the motives of the Government and the inhabitants of the British Isles.

There is ground for English suspicion, for the Germans have only built their great navy within the last few years and seem to concentrate upon the North Sea, and it has been proven that they have spied out the weak points of the east coast of England. If England wanted to annex Germany (a really comical idea) she could have tried this on when Germany had no big navy to defend herself with.

The British North Sea Fleet is a defensive organization—who is the foe? Is it Denmark, Norway or Holland? The German North Sea Fleet is either an expensive play-toy or it is a machine of aggression, and who is the object of its aggression or threatening? There is only one answer.

It is foolish, not to say dangerous, for a man to be perpetually holding a pistol to your head and at the same time protesting his innocence of any ill intent. The above suggestion ought to satisfy the Germans of any aggressive motive on the part of England, and if the Germans are sincere in their dread of a British invasion then they should be only too glad to be rid of the great expense of sustaining a fleet which is not wanted.

THE LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE

To-morrow the Laymen of Peterborough and district meet in Murray Street Baptist Church to commune with one another as to the best means of forwarding the work of Christianizing the world. The fact that the world is not Christian, is not so much recognized as might be supposed. More than two-thirds of the human race are classed as heathen, or outside the pale of Christianity. And it is to be feared that the one-third who are nominally under the banner of the Nazarene are not living up to the privileges and high ideals which Christianity stands for. While many outside the pale, who have not had the light, are by no means in moral or spiritual darkness.

This Layman's missionary movement is not merely a movement for the spreading of the Gospel in foreign lands. All missionary money in Canada is put into a common treasury and practically one department controls and distributes the funds for the evangelization of the heathen at home as well as in foreign lands.

It is a good sign of the times that laymen are shouldering this burden. Priests and parsons, no matter how much Apostolic succession or grace they may possess, are only human and can only do one man's work. Christ Himself could not work without laymen and He took them from every department of life and gave each man something special to do for the establishment of the Kingdom—beginning at Jerusalem.

This, we take it, is the prime object of this movement; it is a democratic movement and invests every man with authority and responsibility for his share in the higher work of the world in which he finds himself—and woe be to him if he neglects that duty.

BERNARD SHAW AND THE BISHOP

The Bishop of London has come in contact with Bernard Shaw on the question of morals, and these two diverse individuals have "had words" on the matter. It would be strange and somewhat in the nature of a calamity, if Bernard Shaw found himself in direct agreement with a Bishop, or anyone else for that matter, but a Bishop of all men!

It all began over a French lady, Gaby Deslys, a music hall artiste, who has been performing at the Palace Theatre in London. Bernard Shaw sticks up for the Music Hall and says:

"The suggestion is made that gratification of emotion is one of the main uses to which the theatre is put. If the taste is voluptuous entertainment is sometimes morbid the taste for religious edification is open to precisely the same objection. If I had a neurotic daughter I would much rather risk taking her to the Palace Theatre than to a revival meeting. Nobody has yet counted the number of homes and characters wrecked by intemperance in religious emotions."

The gist of Shaw's plea is that what is moral to one person may be immoral to another, and if you don't like the programme at the Palace you don't have to go there.

Mr. Bernard Shaw has peculiar views on morals which he imbibed in part from that German madman Nietzsche. These views are only views, there is no greater hypocrite than Bernard Shaw, for he never practices the "non-morality" which he preaches.

The morals of theatres and other places of amusement are no light matters, and to dismiss an immoral performance or resort with "You don't have to go there," is to set a trap in the dark and tell people they don't have to fall into it.

Young people go to places of amusement to be amused, and not, in the first place, from any wicked motive or desire. They are attracted and they go in. If, when they get in, the performance or the company is clean and healthy they may come out none the worse and perhaps the better. But if they are entertained with subtle and insidious devilry tricked out in the shape of a grinning and loose-limbed girl, or a glib-tongued low-minded fellow, the effect too often is one of fascination and, having tasted, the chances are the appetite is whetted for more.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, and most people of his age or strength of mind, need not go and see or hear Gadby Deslys danse and sing, but no man lives unto himself and we cannot dismiss these evils with the plea of Cain—"Am I my brother's keeper?" The Bishop of London makes it plain that he at least knows his duty when he says:

"If the Church sat down under such a standard it would be disowning all its traditions. It would be better for it to abandon the title of Church of Christ.

"Thank God the Christian folk of London are in a majority, and the question we have made up our minds to ask is, Are we going to be masters of our own house?"

A box of skinned sardines, broken and mixed with a can of shrimps and served on a bed of shredded heart leaves of lettuce, with French dressing, to which has been added a tablespoonful of onion juice, makes a delicious salad.

FACTS REGARDING THE MAPLE SYRUP INDUSTRY

It may surprise many to learn that the maple sugar and syrup crop in Canada is worth about two million dollars per year. In the Province of Quebec the industry has maintained a strong foothold, more especially in those counties that contain more or less rough and rocky land. In Ontario it also holds force, and in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia considerable quantities of sugar and syrup are made each Spring.

During recent years the industry has shown signs of decline, and in order to encourage its improvement the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, has authorzied the preparation of a bulletin which should give it considerable support.

One cause of the decline is given as the poor quality of much of the goods made. On the authority of extensive dealers it is estimated that fully sixty per cent of maple products do not grade above No. 4 and that this vast amount has to be sold for not more than half the price per pound of No. 1 goods, of which about 10 per cent is made. On this account it is pointed out in the bulletin that makers are losing each year on quality alone, fully one million dollars.

The bulletin goes fully into the subject of syrup and sugar making, describing clearly the necessary equipment and its operation, and gives useful information on marketing. An interesting section describes the making of maple vinegar and the collection and preparation of sugar sand, which constitute two valuable by-products of sugar making.

The work, which is from the pen of Mr. J. B. Spencer, B.S.A., Editor of the Publication Branch, is gotten up in very attractive form, containing many beautiful illustrations portraying sugar making scenes, ancient and modern. To show the appearance of sugar and syrup of different grades, plates of samples of each are presented in natural colors. This work, which is designated "The Sugar Making Industry in Canada," will be sent free to those who apply for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Widening of the damaged area in Argentina turned the wheat market up grade today after there had been a material set-back. The close was nervous, varying from last night's figures to 3-8 to 1-2c advance. Other leading staples all showed a net loss—corn 1-4 to 5-8c, oats 1-8 to 1-4c, and provisions 2 1-2 to 10c.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 11.—The easier American wheat cables yesterday and the lower tendency in Winnipeg were offset here by unfavorable crop advices from Argentina, and as a result shorts covered and opening values were unchanged to ⅛d higher. Bullish advices from India, firmer spot market and an improved demand for cargoes and generally unfavorable weather for the new crop mostly thruout Europe, helped the advance. Following the opening there was a decline of ⅜d in the distant months, on a report of rain in Bahia Blanca, and expectations of a liberal increase in the visible here. Later, support developed and most of the decline was recovered on dryness reported in many provinces of Argentina. Argentine estimates being reduced. At 1.30 p.m. the market was steady, unchanged to ¼d higher.

Corn opened ¼d lower and further declined ⅜d to ⅝d with liquidation induced by the American Government and talk of larger arrivals. The pressure was in December. At 1.30 p.m. prices were ¼d to ⅜d under yesterday.

Valor of Ignorance.

Mr. Snipples got out of bed and slipped on his shoes.

"This must stop," he muttered irritably to his wife. "I'm going downstairs to teach that young man to keep away from my house in the future."

"John," cried his wife, "stop! Don't go"—

But before she could say more he had slipped out of the door. She heard him steal downstairs to the drawing room; she heard sounds of a struggle and of the breaking of glass; she heard him drag his adversary to the hall and kick him down the front steps. Then when he returned she flung herself upon him and clung to him admiringly.

"What's the matter?" he demanded.

"Don't you know?" she answered. "That was a burglar!"

"Great Scott!" he gasped, turning pale. "Why didn't you tell me before? I thought it was Ethel's sweetheart."—Harper's Magazine.

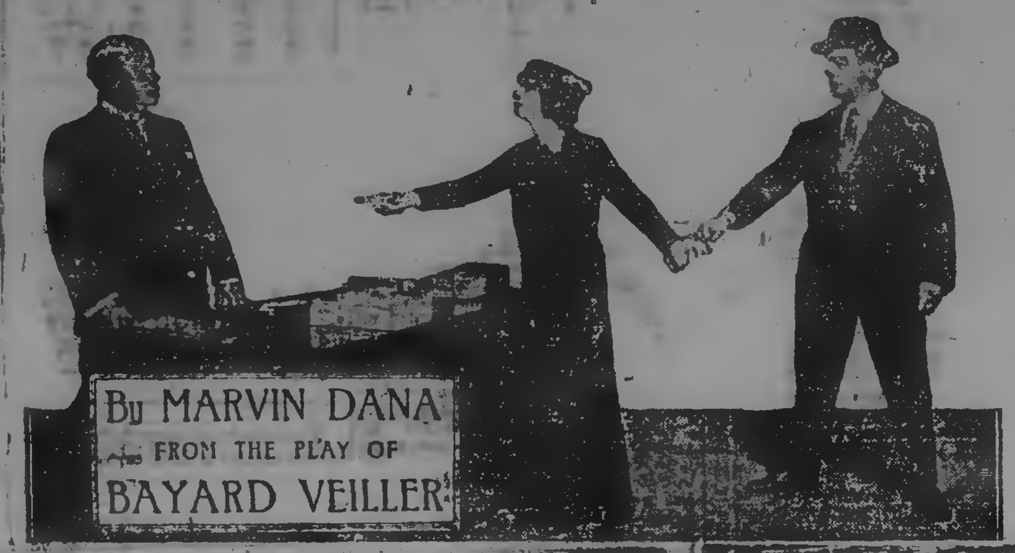
WITHIN THE LAW



By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"McCracken has detained—er—a—lady, sir," he said feebly. "She has been searched, and we have found about $100 worth of laces on her."

"Well?" Gilder demanded impatiently. Such affairs were too common in the store to make necessary this intrusion of the matter on him. "Why did you come to me about it?"

"I'm very sorry, sir, but I thought it wiser, sir, to—er—to bring the matter to your personal attention. The lady happens to be the wife of J. W. Gaskell, the banker, you know."

CHAPTER III.

The Victim of the Law.

YES, Gilder did know. The mention of the name was like a spell in the effect it wrought on the attitude of the irritated owner of the store. Instantly his expression changed.

"How extremely awkward!" he cried, and there was a very real concern in his voice. He regarded Smithson kindly, whereat that rather puling gentleman once again assumed his martial bearing. "You were quite right in coming to me." For a moment he was silent, plunged in thought. Finally he spoke with the decisiveness characteristic of him. "Of course there's nothing we can do. Just put the stuff back on the counter and let her go."

But Smithson had not yet wholly unburdened himself. He again cleared his throat nervously.

"She's very angry, Mr. Gilder," he announced timidly. "She—er—she demands an—er—an apology."

The owner of the store half rose from his chair, then threw himself back with an exclamation of disgust.

"God bless my soul!" he cried. Again he fell silent, considering the situation which Smithson had presented. At last, however, he mastered his irritation to some degree and spoke his command briefly. "Well, Smithson, apologize to her. It can't be helped."

When Smithson had left the office Gilder turned to his secretary.

"Take this," he directed, and he forthwith dictated the following letter:

> J. W. Gaskell, Esq., Central National Bank, New York.
>
> My Dear Mr. Gaskell—I feel that I should be doing less than my duty as a man if I did not let you know at once that Mrs. Gaskell is in urgent need of medical attention. She came into our store today, and—

He paused for a moment. "No, put it this way," he said finally:

> We found her wandering about our store today in a very nervous condition. In her excitement she carried away about $100 worth of rare laces. Not recognizing her, our store detective detained her for a short time. Fortunately for us all, Mrs Gaskell was able to explain who she was, and she has just gone to her home. Hoping for Mrs. Gaskell's speedy recovery and with all good wishes, I am yours very truly.

Smithson again entered the office even more perturbed than before.

"What on earth is the matter now?" Gilder spluttered suspiciously.

"It's Mrs. Gaskell still," Smithson replied in great trepidation. "She wants you personally, Mr. Gilder, to apologize to her. She says that the action taken against her is an outrage, and she is not satisfied with the apologies of all the rest of us. She says you must make one, too, and that the store detective must be discharged for intolerable insolence."

Gilder bounced up from his chair angrily.

"I'll not discharge McCracken," he vociferated, glaring on Smithson, who shrank visibly.

"But about the apology, Mr. Gilder," he reminded, speaking very deferentially, yet with insistence.

"Oh, I'll apologize," he said with a wry smile of discomfiture. "I'll make things even up a bit when I get an apology from Gaskell. I shrewdly suspect that that estimable gentleman is going to eat humble pie, of my baking, from his wife's recipe. And his will be an honest apology, which mine won't." And he left the room.

It was on this same day that Sarah, on one of her numerous trips through the store in behalf of Gilder was accosted by a salesgirl, whose name, Helen Morris, she chanced to know.

"What on earth do you want?" Sarah inquired snappishly.

"What did they do to Mary Turner?"

"They sent her to prison for three years."

"Three years?" The salesgirl had repeated the words in a tone that was indefinable, yet a tone vehement in its incredulous questioning. "Three years?" she said again, as one refusing to believe.

"Yes, three years."

"Good God!" There was no irreverence in the exclamation that broke from the girl's lips. Instead only a tense horror that touched to the roots of emotion.

"Say," Sarah demanded, with the directness habitual to her, "why are you so anxious about it? This is the third time you have asked me about Mary Turner. What's it to you, I'd like to know?"

The salesgirl started violently, and a deep flush drove the accustomed pallor from her cheeks. She was obviously much disturbed by the question.

"What is it to me?" she repeated in an effort to gain time. "Why, nothing—nothing at all, only—she's a friend of mine, a great friend of mine. Oh, yes!"

There was a monotone of desolation as she went on speaking in a whisper meant for the ears of no other. "It's awful—three years! Oh, I didn't understand! It's awful—awful!" With the final word she hurried off, her attitude one of wondering grief.

Sarah was thinking intently of Mary Turner after her return to the office. As she glanced up at the opening of the door she did not at first recognize the figure outlined there. She remembered Mary Turner as a tall, slender girl, who showed an underlying vitality in every movement, a girl with a face of regular features, in which was a complexion of blended milk and roses, with a radiant joy of life shining through all her arduous and vulgar conditions. Instead of this, now she saw a frail form that stood swaying in the doorway, that bent in a sinister fashion which told of bodily impotence, while the face was quite bloodless.

A man stood beside her, one of his hands clasped around the girl's wrist. It was Cassidy, from headquarters, who spoke in a rough, indifferent voice.

"The district attorney told me to bring this girl here on my way to the Grand Central station with her."

"Mr. Gilder will be right back. Come in and wait."

The two went forward very slowly, the officer, carelessly conscious of his duty, walking with awkward steps to suit the feeble movements of the girl. Sarah at last found her voice for an expression of sympathy.

"I'm sorry, Mary," she said hesitatingly. "I'm terribly sorry, terribly sorry!"

The girl did not look up. She stood still, swaying a little, as if from weakness.

"Are you?" she said. "I did not know. Nobody has been near me the whole time I have been in the Tombs."

"Why," Sarah exclaimed, "there was Helen Morris today! She has been asking about you again and again. She's all broken up over your trouble."

"Who is Helen Morris?" the lifeless voice demanded. There was no interest in the question.

Gilder entered the office with the quick, bustling activity that was ordinarily expressed in his every movement. He paused as he beheld the two visitors, then he spoke curtly to the secretary.

"You may go, Sarah. I will ring when I wish you again."

There followed an interval of silence while the secretary was leaving the office and the girl with her warder stood waiting on his pleasure. Gilder cleared his throat twice in an embarrassment foreign to him before finally he spoke to the girl.

"My girl," Gilder said gently—his hard voice was softened by an honest regret—"my girl, I am sorry about this."

"You should be!" came the instant answer.

"Come, come!" Gilder exclaimed testily. "That's no tone to take with me!"

"Why? What sort of tone do you expect me to take?" was the retort in the listless voice.

"I expected a decent amount of humility from one in your position."

Life quickened swiftly in the drooping form of the girl. She stood suddenly erect, and her face lost its bleakness of pallor. The eyes opened wide and looked straight into those of the man who had employed her.

"Would you be humble," she demanded, and now her voice was become softly musical, yet forbidding, too, with a note of passion, "would you be humble if you were going to prison for three years for something you didn't do?"

"Don't mind her, sir," Cassidy said. He meant to make his manner very reassuring. "They all say that. They are innocent, of course! Yep, they all say it. It don't do 'em any good, but just the same they all swear they're innocent. They keep it up to the very last, no matter how right they've been got."

The voice of the girl rang clear. There was a note of insistence that carried a curious dignity of its own. The very simplicity of her statement might have had a power to convince one who listened without prejudice, although the words themselves were of the trite sort that any protesting criminal might utter.

"I tell you I didn't do it!"

Gilder himself felt the surge of emotion that swung through these moments, but he would not yield to it.

"What's the use of all this pretense?" he demanded sharply. "You were given a fair trial, and there's an end of it."

"Oh, no, I wasn't! Why, if the trial had been fair I shouldn't be here. Do you call it fair when the lawyer I had was only a boy—one whom the court told me to take, a boy trying his first case, my case, that meant the ruin of my life? My lawyer! Why, he was just getting experience—getting it at my expense!"

There followed a few seconds of silence. Then Gilder made an effort to shake off the feeling that had so possessed him, and to a certain degree he succeeded.

"The jury found you guilty," he asserted, with an attempt to make his voice magisterial in its severity.

"Yes, the jury found me guilty. Do you know why? I can tell you, Mr. Gilder. It was because they had been out for three hours without reaching a decision. The evidence didn't seem to be quite enough for some of them, after all. Well, the judge threatened to lock them up all night. The men wanted to get home. The easy thing to do was to find me guilty, and let it go at that. Was that fair, do you think? And that's not all either. Was it fair of you, Mr. Gilder? Was it fair of you to come to the court this morning and tell the judge that I should be sent to prison as a warning to others?"

"You know!" he exclaimed in momentary consternation.

"I heard you in the courtroom," she said. "The dock isn't very far from the bench where you spoke to the judge about my case. Yes, I heard you. It wasn't, Did I do it? or, Didn't I do it? No. It was only that I must be made a warning to others."

Again silence fell for a tense interval. Then finally the girl spoke:

"Mr. Gilder," she said simply, "as God is my judge, I am going to prison for three years for something I didn't do. Why did you ask the judge to send me to prison?"

"The thieving that has been going on in this store for over a year has got to stop," Gilder answered emphatically, with all his usual energy of manner restored.

"Sending me to prison won't stop it," Mary Turner said drearily.

"Perhaps not," Gilder sternly retorted. "But the discovery and punishment of the other guilty ones will." His manner changed to a businesslike alertness. "You sent word to me that you could tell me how to stop the thefts in the store. Well, my girl, do this and, while I can make no definite promise, I'll see what can be done about getting you out of your present difficulty." He picked up a pencil, pulled a pad of blank paper convenient to his hand and looked at the girl expectantly, with aggressive inquiry in his gaze. "Tell me now," he concluded, "who were your pals?"

"I have no pals!" she ejaculated furiously. "I never stole anything in my life. Must I go on telling you over and over again?" Her voice rose in a wail of misery. "Oh, why won't any one believe me?"

"Unless you can control yourself, you must go." Gilder pushed away the pad of paper and tossed the pencil aside in physical expression of his displeasure. "Why did you send that message if you have nothing to say?" he demanded, with increasing choler.

"I have something to tell you, Mr. Gilder," she cried quietly. "Only I—I sort of lost my grip on the way here, with this man by my side."

"Well?" Gilder insisted querulously, as the girl hesitated.

"When you sit in a cell for three months waiting for your trial, as I did, you think a lot. And so I got the idea that if I could talk to you I might be able to make you understand what's really wrong. And if I could do that and so help out the other girls, what has happened to me would not, after all, be quite so awful—so useless, somehow." Her voice lowered to a quick pleading, and she bent toward the man at the desk. "Mr. Gilder," she questioned, "do you really want to stop the girls from stealing?"

"Most certainly I do," came the forcible reply.

The girl spoke with a great earnestness deliberately.

"Then give them a fair chance."

The magnate stared in sincere astonishment over this absurd, this futile suggestion for his guidance.

"What do you mean?" he vociferated, with rising indignation.

"Why," she said very gently, "I mean just this: Give them a living chance to be honest."

"A living chance!" The two words were exploded with dynamic violence. Gilder found himself unable to express the rage that flamed within him.

The girl showed herself undismayed by his anger.

"The district attorney told me to bring this girl here."

Appreciation.

"You never carry that beautiful umbrella I gave you," she said reproachfully.

"I can't afford to," he replied. "I feel as if I would have to take a taxicab to keep from getting it wet."—Washington Star

MRS. JOHN ALLAN GAVE ADDRESS

At Thank Offering Meeting of Fraser Mission Band

The annual thank offering of the Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's Church was held last evening in the Sunday school, Mrs. Adam Hall presiding. The various reports submitted showed that the Band was meeting with considerable success.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was an address by Mrs. John Allan on a "Women's Mission to the 20th Century." The capable manner in which the speaker dealt with her subject showed deep thought on the subject. A short musical program, in which Mrs. Alfred Perrin and Miss Hill were contributors, was also very much enjoyed by the members. The thank offering amounted to $57.75.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the young ladies of the Band.

All young men of the Association are invited to be present. This is one of a series of debates that will be conducted by the young men who are taking up the study of "Comparative Religion." Fifty men have enrolled as members of this class.

COMMENDED FOR THE GOOD WORK

Secretary [illegible] of the National Council of Y.M.C.A. Boys' Work was in the city yesterday on a tour of inspection. The members and the secretary of the Boys' Department were highly commended upon the good work they were doing. A vocational talk by H. B. Cowan, of the Farm and Dairy, will be the feature evening social hour. A musical program will also be rendered.

Points for Mothers

Poisons and Antidotes.

The mother who knows just what to do when the terrible accident of a dose of poison must be treated at once may save a child's life. It is every one's duty to have in mind a list of antidotes for ordinary poisons. If your memory is not good make one on a piece of paper and paste it on the wall of the bathroom.

Of course the prevention of the possibility of a child's taking poison is the important thing, but accidents are always occurring in the most carefully watched homes.

Impress on a child's mind the importance of taking nothing without permission. "Candy pills" may sometimes be poison. Sometimes a mother gives poison by mistaking a bottle in the medicine chest. An excellent idea is to have all bottles not only labeled, but marked with a card, on which a little bell is tied. This easy warning is particularly good in the dark, when so many mistakes occur.

Carbolic acid is one of the ordinary poisons that are found in the home and frequently taken in mistake. It burns the mouth, and its odor is unmistakable. Give epsom salts in abundance or soap. If the acid has burned the skin only, apply alcohol.

A child may take a large quantity of alcohol, which is classed as a poison Give any simple emetic, such as mustard water, soap and water, etc. Apply a cold douche on the head and warmth to the body. If respiration is at a low register raise and lower the arms regularly, as is done in cases of drowning.

Corrosive sublimate should be counteracted by an emetic, followed by whites of eggs or great quantities of milk. Give tannic acid freely and a dose of castor oil to open the bowels.

Opium, including laudanum, morphine, paregoric or soothing sirups, can be counteracted by permanganate of potash in doses of four to five grains if the mistake is detected right away. Strong coffee is another antidote; also atropine. Keep the patient awake at all costs by walking, artificial respiration and a cold douche on the head and spine.

Phosphorus poisons include matches and some roach and rat poisons. Give an emetic and follow it by doses of permanganate of potash, four or five grains well diluted. Epsom salts or magnesia should then be administered to open the bowels. Do not give milk or oil of any kind.

Silver nitrate (lunar caustic) has an antidote in table salt, followed by an emetic. Milk or whites of eggs are also effective.

Strychnine, especially in pills, is mistaken often for other medicine. Its antidote is tannic acid following an emetic. Bromide of potash given freely is good.

Alkalies, including ammonia, potash, caustic, should be treated by vinegar or lemon juice, followed by sweet oil.

An Apprehension.

"If you are a good, hard working young man," said the influential citizen to his son, "I may see to it that you are elected to the legislature."

"Yes," replied the world wise youth, "and right there is where I will lose my reputation for being a good, hard working young man."—Washington Star.

WATER COMMISSIONERS BEGIN WORK PRELIMINARY TO CONTROL OF HYDRO PLANT

The members of the Power Committee and the Board of Water Commissioners, met last night to discuss the Hydro Electric situation.

The Act provides that the control of this utility when taken over by the city passes to the Board of the Board of Water Commissioners who will be in full control as in the case of the waterworks system.

Mr. T. F. Matthews in speaking for himself suggested that the members of the Water Commissioners resign at the end of the year and that the people elect a new Board for both if they felt so disposed. In answer to his query if the Council were still of the opinion that the Water Commissioners should take control, Ald. Gordon answered that the majority favored a motion made in Council to this effect. Mr. Matthews' intimation that the would resign, was followed by the decleration fo Mr. W. H. Moore, K. C. that in view of the big work contemplated by the Water Commissioners—the water system— and Mr. Matthews having such a grasp of the situation, it was not advisable in the interests of he city, that he resign

$1400 FOR BOTH

The question of remuneration for the additional wrok was discussed and a total amount of $1400 named by Mr Matthews was accepted by the committee. The chairman will receive $600 and the other two members $400 each. This $1400 covers their services as Water Commissioners and Power Commissioners. This was considered very fair by the committee.

The members of the committee expressed their willingness to take charge and they are now engaged in organization work. This will include the securing of business offices and a staff. The stores on Simcoe street adjoining the city offices were suggested as premises for the new offices.

THE POWER SUPPLY

Mr. Moore asked regarding a supply of power and was informed that the Hydro Electric Commission had assured Council that when the city was ready, the power would be forthcoming.

It was also explained that in the event of the legal proceedings being continued longer than expected, thus making it impossible for the city to do business at the end of the year, agreement with the Peterboro Light and Power Company could be made for a supply of power to continue the present system of lighting.

REPLY TO "ONLOOKER" BY REV. JAMES ROLLINS

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Onlooker hits the nail on the head in these words: "Were such facts and definite evidence forthcoming they should be delivered to the Crown Attorney or the Magistrate, not to a clergyman." The trouble is that Onlooker and some other people expect clergymen to act on evidence that a Magistrate or a Crown Attorney would regard as worthless. Onlooker speaks of "the dangers of a particular place in question." Why does Onlooker not name the "particular place in question," while expecting me to do it? The fact is that Onlooker knows that the evidence in Onlooker's possession would not avail with the Crown Attorney and the Magistrate. I am free to say that I have no evidence that in my judgment would avail with the Magistrate and the Crown Attorney. I realize as I am sure Onlooker does, that that kind of evidence is very hard to get, and I am still convinced that the coming together of a dozen or so [illegible] situation keenly would be accomplish more than can be done otherwise. I think Onlooker and I could do more for the cause if we met face to face than by addressing each other through the press. Onlooker knows where to find me. If the Review is at liberty to give me Onlooker's address I shall lose no time in calling. As the Ministerial Association has been mentioned, permit me to say that very careful consideration was given to the matter to which Onlooker refers. Legal advice was secured and we were convinced that we had no evidence that would avail when the case reached the Crown Attorney and the Magistrate. I am not without hope that these matters will reach the Crown Attorney and Magistrate in due time. In the meantime I will be glad to enter into a generous rivalry with "Onlooker" and "One Who Knows," and any others who may feel like writing anonymously regarding my challenge as to which of us will first get the right kind of evidence into the hands of the Crown Attorney and the Magistrate.

Faithfully yours,

JAMES ROLLINS.

Sirius Is the Brightest of All, and Canopus Comes Next.

The results of that instrument of precision, the meridian photometer, are that Sirius is seven-tenths of a magnitude brighter than Canopus, which easily teaches that Sirius is brighter than any other star.

Canopus, next in brilliancy, is visible from all that portion of the world south of north latitude 37 degrees, since its declination is south 53 degrees and 53 is the complement of 37.

It therefore never rises above the south horizon of any point 37 degrees north. The latitude of this observatory is 34 degrees 17 minutes; hence Canopus rises very nearly 3 degrees above the watery wastes in the Pacific sea. Its low altitude makes it much fainter than higher Sirius, as the light must traverse layers of dust and water vapor near the earth's surface. Still it is magnificent, especially when standing over a calm ocean surface.

Canopus has no parallax that the highest power telemicrometers that can be made are able to measure. This is one of the most overwhelming facts within the entire range of human experience. This means that if one goes to Canopus with the most powerful telescope ever made, turns and looks back this way, the base line, the entire diameter of the orbit of the earth—185,764,000 miles—dwindles to a minute point too small to be measured by any microscope. Some idea may be had of the immensity of the universe by thinking of this fact during each spare minute. Better to so think than to waste the precious moments.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Uncle Sam's Antecedents.

A reader asks how the name Uncle Sam came to be adopted for the imaginary genius who directs the destinies of this nation. The answer is very simple. "Uncle Sam" is merely a popular expansion of the letters "U. S." Albert Matthews once wrote a forty-five page monograph to prove this, and he showed that the expression went back to the year 1813. James Fenimore Cooper in "The Prairie" in 1827 spoke of "the well known initials that have * * * gained for the government of the United States the good humored and quaint appellation of Uncle Sam."—New York Post.

Right to the Point.

Some months ago excavations were being made for new tracks on the line of a certain railway. At one point a nearby resident obtained permission to remove a quantity of turf to resod the premises, the section foreman being instructed to notify the excavating "gang" when the resident should have secured all he desired.

The foreman's report is as follows: "The man that wanted the earth has got it."—Exchange.

His Busy Day.

"You say you called this morning on my husband at his office? He's always so busy. Did you have any trouble in seeing him?"

"Yes, at first. He was sitting behind his desk, and I couldn't see him until he moved his feet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hit Both Ways.

Tramp—Yes, lady, I loved a girl. She wouldn't hev me, and I became a wanderer. Woman—Poor chap! If she had married you all would have been well. Tramp—Oh, I dunno. Me friend out in de road dere is de feller wot got her!—Puck.

Not only strike when the iron is hot, but make it hot by striking.—Oliver Cromwell.

A POPULAR OFFICIAL IS TRANSFERRED

Mr. Frank Sandy is to Leave Peterboro' in Near Future

No doubt many citizens will regret to learn that Mr. F. Sandy, the well known local Grand Trunk Agent, is about to be transferred to some other locality. Although it is not known just where Mr. Sandy is to be moved to it is certain that a more responsible place will be his charge. When the Review called upon Mr. Sandy this afternoon he would not commit himself, but intimated that full particulars will be obtainable the first of next week.

Mr. Sandy started into the railroad business some thirty years ago in this city as an operator and has since served in Lakefield and Stirling. For the last twenty years or thereabouts he has been connected with the Grand Trunk in this city and for the past several years he has acted in the capacity of local agent. Mr Sandy's successor is not named but it is rumored that he comes from Markham.

COURT STANLEY ANNIVERSARY

Good Time With Ancient Order of Foresters

The 24th anniversary of Court Stanley, A.O.F., held last evening in the S.O.E. Hall, was one of the most successful in the history of the lodge. The evening was spent in a musical concert and a most enjoyable evening was afforded the large gathering. Bro T. Henry, District Chief Ranger, presided and in his address briefly outlined the great success of the lodge during the past year. A short address from Bro Record and Bro. McWilliams was also of an interesting nature to the members and their friends.

Wood's Orchestra supplied the music. After the program, refreshments were served. The following members deserve great credit for the success of the concert: Messrs. F. Pratt, C. Joyes, A. Duthie, W. Flynn, G. Dayton and A. Lowes.

Those who contributed to the entertainment were Messrs. J. John, H. Wood, W. McKiniey, R. Henry, W. Eldred, A. Skilletter, W. Flynn and H. Carter, Miss F. Emmerson and Mrs. E Wood. Mr. Cyril Devey acted as accompanist.

GENERAL BOOTH

Large Audience Heard Lecture at the Temple

A most instructive and interesting lecture was delivered by Brigadier Rawlings and Adjt. Allen at the Salvation Army Temple last evening, when the famous illustrated lecture of "Glimpses of the Life and the Work of the great founder of the Salvation Army, the late General Wm. Booth was delivered by Brigadier Rawlings, assisted by Adjt. Allen, to a large audience, who evinced much interest in the lecture.

The one hundred and forty beautiful colored lantern slides gave a most vivid description of the work carried on throughout the entire world by the Army. Series of slides on the various modes and means in which the work is carried on in India, China, Japan and other countries were very interesting.

A number of the slides told a wonderful story of the last days of the great General in which his last tours and public appearances were made.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The two weeks' campaign of the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A.'s of New York to raise $4,000,000, began yesterday.

Hydro commissioners have found that the amount of money invested in the Brantford plant is insufficient to supply the service needed.

The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada have elected all the principal officers for the year 1914 by acclamation. S. M. Sterling is again president.

The death of Henry Benallick, one of Guelph's best known and oldest citizens, took place yesterday. He was for the past twenty years one of Guelph's foremost contractors.

Smashing a pane of glass in the door at the rear of the store burglars secured entrance to the store of the Takito Auction Co. of Kingston, and stole watches worth $300.

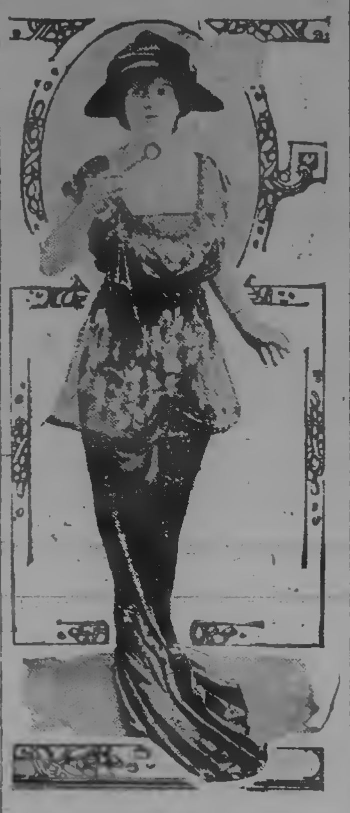
Mrs. Benjamin L. Banks, one of the most prominent women of Kentucky, killed her only child, aged 12, then blew out her own brains, upon learning of the death of her husband.

The suggestion is being revived that 1915 should also witness the celebration of a complete century of peace between England and France—a fact unique in the history of the two peoples.

Battersea, London, England, has elected John Archer, a colored man, to be mayor next year, this being the first time such an honor has been paid a colored man by a British municipality. Archer is a West Indian by descent.

THE MINARET GOWN.

Hoopla! The Hoopskirt Is With Us Once More.



PAUL POIRET'S FAMOUS CREATION.

This is the minaret gown that Paul Poiret, the famous Parisian dressmaker, wishes womankind to adopt as the 1913-14 style of costume. The tunic of transparent stuff is wired with a hoop, and the lines of the figure show through. In great contrast is the narrowness of the skirt, which can be seen through the tunic and tapers to the feet.

In spite of the odd appearance of the gown as it first comes into the line of vision, the designers say that there are undeniably sauciness and chic about it which will appeal to most women.

Prospective Sons-in-law.

"How much do most mothers know of the men their daughters finally marry?" asks a contributor to the Woman's Home Companion. "And how much real friendship and trust are there usually between young men and the mothers of the girls the young men choose to marry? Yet I do not as a general rule count this to be the fault of the young men. The mothers are older and wiser—should be wiser at least in all such matters—yet they are generally slow to speak of them or share in them, whether from shyness or jealousy or inability to express themselves or a forgetfulness of the years when they, too, were young.

"The mother who does not think herself wiser in all these matters than her daughter is rare to find. Yet there are not so many mothers who are consciously helping (fitting would be the better word) their daughters to make a wise and rational choice. Perhaps most mothers have a hope that when the time comes they may be allowed to choose for these daughters of theirs, and they fail to realize that almost their whole duty lies in fitting them to choose for themselves."

Malines Frills For Plain Frocks.

Provided they can be kept fresh looking, there is no easier way of dressing up the plain little frock in serge or dark silk which nearly every girl has for early autumn wear than a wrist, neck and plastron set in white malines. The wristlets are merely very full three inch wide frills, shirred on to narrow ribbons, by which they may be attached to cuffless sleeves, and the collar consists of two frills—one of three inch width overlapping one of four inch—at the center of the back. There they are wired to stand up, whence they taper gradually to beneath the chin, where they lie flat and are secured under a narrow velvet pump bow. The plastron is a bib shaped affair of finely tucked malines extending from the shoulders to below the bust and further lengthened and widened by a three inch frilling.

Two "Wheel" Patents.

Uncle Sam granted the first patent of the present series seventy-seven years ago. Patent No. 1, issued on July 13, 1836, was for a device to keep car wheels from slipping. Not long ago the millionth patent was issued on a pneumatic tire, which proves that inventions are still much concerned with "wheels."

NORWOOD NEWS

Special Correspondence.

NORWOOD, Nov. 11, 1913.—The weather for the past four days has been typical November weather. On Saturday it commenced to rain, and on Sunday it became a veritable downpour. By Monday the storm had turned to snow and continued throughout the day. To-day it is still snowing, but the weather is clearing and becoming colder. The moisture that fell was badly needed as many wells have gone dry, and the creeks and ponds are lower than they have been for several years. Many of the farmers in this vicinity have had to drive their stock several miles every day to water. This is a very great inconvenience and the rain and snow will be much welcomed to those people thus situated.

Several of our villagers manifested the fraternal spirit on Monday evening of this week by attending the fowl supper at the Methodist Church Hastings. A splendid time is reported by all who attended. The dinner was a decided success and was attended by a very large crowd.

On Friday evening last the Rev. and Mrs. Copeland entertained a number of their congregation in the interests of the Ladies' Aid of the church. Quite a number were present and about 10.30 supper was served, after which a collection was taken up in support of the pipe organ fund. The collection amounted to five dollars.

OMEMEE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, Nov. 11.—Mr. S. Lowe, of Peterborough, made a business call on Monday.

Mr. Walter Lawrence, who was assistant to Dr. Colebourn, when he practiced in Omemee, is looking up old friends in town, after a long absence in Winnipeg and the west. Walter says he likes Omemee. Dr. Colebourn has a good position as a meat inspector in Winnipeg.

King and Sturgeon Sts. have been torn up because of the civic workmen putting in sewers. It is hoped to check the accumulation of surface water near the junction of these streets. Reeve Mulligan is sure on the job.

The 5th November, 1913, has passed into history, so has the celebration of Guy Fawkes' night for the same year, been written on the tablets of local record. 'Tis little likely that the celebrated founder of the night ever dreamed that for three centuries beyond his ken there would be public celebrations to his memory, however, we are informed that "some deeds live forever." The exclusive and select committee of the Guys had met previous to the 5th inst., and arranged all the details of the evening's proceedings. A public notice announced the qualifications for eligibility to the ranks, so that when the mantle of darkness covered our fair village on Wednesday, the activity of the celebrants began and continued to about 10 o'clock. It is an irrevocable by-law of the society that all participants shall appear in costume and the various disguises were beyond verbal description it would require a Bengough, a McConnell or a Kyle to do them even small justice. The juvenile factors applied their multitudinous evolutions on the sidewalks till about 9.30 p.m. when a grand procession of all ages, sizes and ranks was formed and marched east on King St. There were many torch-bearers, a rag-time band and an effigy borne on the shoulders of one of the stalwart members who was supported and followed by a guard of veterans. South on George St. the cavalcade proceeded to the bank of the Little Lake where a huge pile of inflammable material had been placed. To the top of a pole surmounting the pile, the effigy was lashed and then began the ancient rites and the subsequent ignition of the crematory accumulation. The streets and grounds about were thronged with all ages of sightseers who seemed to enjoy the mystic observance. Many were present from the rural districts five or six miles distant. Ere the embers had died away the streets were quiet, the populace retiring to their homes. The unique celebration had passed like a "blare of trumpets" as a signal success for the Committee of Management.

A pupil of the public school obtaining permission to leave the classroom recently, was startled on entering the play-grounds to hear cries of distress from the water near by. He hurriedly conveyed the information to a painter who was working in the new armory. The artisan secured an old punt, a board for a paddle and went to the position from which the cries for help proceeded. Imagine his consternation to see one of our local young men in the icy water, his canoe drifting about and his legs wound around by the trolling line, which had become ensnared on a stump, and the attempted extraction of which had caused the trouble. The rescuer persuaded the immersed citizen to lean on the end of the punt while it was paddled to a log, and, with the help of two other citizens, the almost perished fisherman was conveyed to the shore and rushed to warmth and dry clothing. The victim of the accident soon regained his normal condition, and subsequently appeared little the worse physically. Certainly the circumstances for his rescue were benign! With great difficulty and great risk the rescue was effected. Surely the act is worthy of the consideration of a Humane Medal. The accident happened south of the power house, some five or six miles distant from the scene of the McCaffrey fatality.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night fire was seen issuing from a dwelling house in the west end owned by Mr. Allan Toole. Cries of "fire" were heard, but the fire gong was silent and the engine untouched. Many nearby residents gathered and formed a bucket brigade, which, with hard work, prevented the flames from spreading to the stable. The residence and property had been sold verbally, but the deed of sale had not been executed. There was no insurance, as the consumed building had been unoccupied. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The scene of the conflagration was half a mile beyond the limits of the parade in the earlier hours.

Mrs. McCrea, sr., and Miss McCrea went up to Toronto on Friday for a visit.

Dr. J. N. Thompson made a business trip to Lindsay on Saturday.

Mr. D. H. Moore of Peterboro was in Omemee on business.

Mr. W. J. Finlay of Orange Corners was in town on business, Thursday.

Mrs Lamb of Peterboro is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. H. R. Murray.

A number of wells in town went dry this fall, but after Sunday's rain and Monday's snow they should soon have a liberal supply.

The very disagreeable weather of Sunday was responsible for the decreased attendance of the congregations at Christ Church, to hear the Rt. Rev. Bishop Reeve, D.D., of Toronto, who was the special preacher at the services in connection with the anniversary of the church.

IN SPITE OF MAGIC

A Story For All-hallow Eve

BY LILLIAN WENTZ

Young Cornelius Babcock settled his necktie and thrust in its crimson folds the mock turquoise scarfpin he had bought at Levy's on his way home from work that night. Then he stood away and admired the snowy whiteness of the rubber collar that looked exactly like linen and saved many a laundry bill by its deceptive guise; he stroked the glossy smoothness of his olive green striped suit; he stuck out a neat foot attired in a pale blue sock and shiny patent leather pumps and smiled with satisfaction. It would be a critical maiden, indeed, who would not look with favor upon Mr. Babcock in this festal array, for he had health and youth and a measure of good looks. He was going to a party, and he was in love. It showed in his face and in his eyes.

Suddenly he reached into an obscure corner of the bureau drawer and drew forth a tiny box. From this box there issued a small gold ring, set with a cheap red stone. Cornelius gazed on it with quickened breath. He had planned to wear it on his little finger that night. She would ask him about it, and he would ask her to wear it if she wanted to. It all seemed so simple as he had planned it, and now he scarcely dared place it on his hand. Suddenly it found place on his finger, and the stone flashed as he lifted a hand and turned out the gas.

As he strode through the dining room, where the elder Cornelius sat reading the evening paper, his mother's voice halted his steps.

"Where you going, Corny? My, but you're dressed up!" She beamed at him over her spectacles.

His father lifted a shaggy gray head and surveyed his son with apparent scorn. "What you rigged like a nigger minstrel for?" he growled contemptuously.

Cornelius writhed inwardly. His face flushed, and he stammered confusedly. "I'm going to a party. I guess I won't be home till late. Mary Finn's giving a Halloween party."

The Finns lived in upper New York, and on this particular night their small flat was filled to overflowing with a merry company of young people.

All sorts of paper decorations hung from the walls and chandeliers. Jack-o'-lanterns were suspended in the doorways and swayed grinningly as tall heads passed to and fro. In a circle of laughing young men and girls Mary Finn was outlining her program for the evening's fun.

"We'll tell fortunes by melting lead and dropping it in cold water, and we can roast chestnuts on the gas stove. There's a tub of water and apples to duck for in the kitchen, and afterward you peel the apples and throw the paring over your shoulder. It curls into the initial of the one you're going to marry! It does!" Mary blushed charmingly, and Cornelius intercepted her smile and took it to himself.

"And what else, Mary?" A broad shouldered young man with a shock of thick, dark hair moved forward and obstructed Cornelius' view of Mary Finn.

"It's for us girls to do," giggled Mary. "We let down our hair at midnight and take a lighted candle and a handglass and walk backward around the house three times. Only this being a flat we'll have to walk up and down the hall, I guess. If you're ever going to get married you'll see the face of your future husband in the glass."

"Do you believe that, Mary?" asked a thin faced girl sharply. "You seem to take it like it was dead earnest, but"—

"Ask my mother," returned Mary proudly, and genial Mrs. Finn nodded complacently.

"It's true, ain't it Michael?" she asked of Mr. Finn, who murmured assent. "I saw Mike as plain as could be looking over my shoulder, and I married him, didn't I? Don't be so skeptical, Kitty; it ain't healthy. Keep young and foolish as long as you can."

The thin faced Kitty smiled politely and sat down near Cornelius. "Things don't come like that, do they?" she asked him. "I mean the things you want to happen don't come so easy. You have to work to make 'em come right."

"I—I don't know. I never thought much about it," admitted Cornelius, conscious that he had been wildly hoping that some reflection of his face might be projected upon Mary Finn's mirror.

"Humph!" ejaculated Kitty scornfully as she moved away.

It was a delightful evening. There were much fun and merriment over the fortune telling and the apple ducking. Cornelius was lifted to heights of bliss when Mary's paring dropped over her shoulder and formed a distinct B—for Babcock, of course. But he was plunged to the lowest depths when he learned that the broad shouldered young man's name was Brady—Christopher Brady—so he stood an equal chance with Cornelius.

But the hour of midnight was to be the crucial test of future partners for life. Apple parings might fall into all sorts of angles that would be mistaken or construed into any desired letters, but a face in a mirror—surely each countenance bore its own distinction, and there could be nothing but plain magic in that test.

Cornelius grew hot and cold as the hour approached. He had scarcely a word with Mary Finn, so absorbed was she in her duties as hostess.

At ten minutes before midnight the girls withdrew to a bedroom, from whence issued much giggling and pushing about and sudden shrieks of laughter. Mrs. Finn ambled to and fro in friendly banter with the waiting young men in the parlor.

"No cheating, boys," she warned, her voice shrill above the vigorous singing of Mr. Christopher Brady at the piano. They laughed good naturedly and joined in the chorus of "She Said She Loved Me, but Now She Loves Another Fellow," and something in the air stuck in Cornelius' memory and could not be eradicated for many a day.

"I don't see where we fellows get any fun out of it all," growled Mr. Brady, whirling around on the stool. "I wonder if I couldn't let down my hair and run around with a hand mirror—what do you think I'd see, eh?"

"You'd see a conceited puppy!" joked Mr. Finn, slapping Mr. Brady's broad shoulders with easy familiarity. "Let me whisper a secret, Chris—excuse me, gents"—he bent down and whispered in Mr. Brady's red ear, while that gentleman nodded mirthfully.

"Sure, I'll do it. I'm on. I thought maybe there was something more! Have a cigar, Mr. Finn." He followed Mary's father into the kitchen, and Cornelius sat silently alone, envying the easy manners of the big Mr. Brady and his apparent intimacy with the Finns. Did this friendliness portend some bond between Christopher Brady and Mary Finn?

Cornelius grew wretched as the time passed. Mary must soon make her test of fate in the gloomy hall. When would he know if it was his own face she had seen over her shoulder? Would she tell it to the assembled company or would she acknowledge it by blushing when his questioning glance sought hers? Desperately he calculated the chances that fate held for him, and he admitted they were very few indeed. Everything he had ever gained he had had to struggle for, as had his father before him. He had fought tooth and nail for his position as office boy in the beginning, and he had fought his way up to his position as shipping clerk by sheer force of will and pluck. In his practical experience he had never called upon luck or fortune or fate to aid him in his climb. He just planned what he wanted and then worked up to it. It had proved a good method in the past.

Now he wanted Mary Finn. If he won her it must be by his usual methods. He must not trust to chance nor to any other doubtful means. There was no time to fool with luck or the magic sorceries of Halloween. He must have Mary Finn in spite of magic, in spite of Christopher Brady, in spite of everything.

Then it was that a daring thought came to Cornelius Babcock—daring because he was unaccustomed to intrigue or fighting in the dark, and this game called for darkness. Leagued against him were Christopher Brady and his intimacy with the Finns, and also on the opposing side were the chances that Cornelius would not win. So he resolved to fight for what he wanted—for Mary Finn.

Mr. Finn entered the parlor and lifted a hand to the chandelier. "I'll be dousing the light, boys," he warned. "Everything's got to be dark as your hat. Out she goes!"

In the thick velvety blackness that followed, Cornelius stepped, swift as a cat, across the floor to the door that led into the corridor. It was ajar and he pushed it open, slid around it and entered the hall where he felt his way into the embrasure of another door and waited, his heart pounding heavily.

Mary Finn would soon come down the hall, her fair hair swinging loose, her sweet face peering in the mirror's depths for the face of her true love. And Cornelius would be there, looking over her shoulder, his eyes meeting hers in the candlelight—settling their futures at one blow.

A door opened, and with muffled shrieks a slender form came into view holding a lighted candle before her. It was Mary Finn!

Christopher held his breath as she advanced. She looked so much like an angel, with the mist of hair about her shoulders and her eyes fixed timidly on the glass, that he almost forgot the role he had selected to play.

As she approached his hiding place Cornelius braced himself to overcome the shyness that began to steal over him. Here was his opportunity to forestall the goddess of chance—he would win Mary Finn in spite of magic!

As she passed he leaned forward and peered over her shoulder just as a dark shock head leaned from the opposite doorway to perform the same service. Their heads bumped vigorously, were withdrawn and then met in growling threats. Mary Finn turned with a frightened cry.

"Whatever is the matter? Why-y!" She stared at the two rivals with mirthful eyes.

"Did you see my face, Mary?" snapped Cornelius sharply, aware that he had suddenly attained manhood. "Didn't you see my face first?"

She flushed and nodded with downcast eyes. In the gloom her hand stole into Cornelius' outstretched palm.

"Ah-h-h," growled Mr. Christopher Brady sourly. "You saw my face in the glass too! How about me, eh?"

"Maybe you're going to be my second husband, Chris—if anything happens to Corny—but I hope nothing happens!"

And Mr. Brady had to be satisfied with that arrangement.

Feyther and the Passon.

After a Saturday afternoon tramp in Cheshire, writes a correspondent in the Manchester Guardian, I stopped at a little whitewashed inn, where I heard the following rustic story. On a bench outside half a dozen farm workers, with faces and bared arms richly sunburned, were relating reminiscences of bygone times.

"Did Ah iver tell yo' about ma poor owd feyther and the passon?" asked a white-whiskered sturdy veteran. "No? Well, passon meets feyther one day, an' ses 'e, 'John, Ah could find yo' a bit o' a job blowin' t' organ up at t' church o' Sundays if yo' doan't mind.' 'Aye, thankee, sir,' ses feyther. 'Ah'd be very glad, but Ah doubt Ah heyna wind enough.'"

"Sustenance Space."

When we estimate that the average inhabitant of New York may have but a few score square feet for his own use, we are apt to forget that he can only exist on them because somewhere in the country there are acres of ground producing for him, as really and definitely for him as if he owned them and hired the labor on them, what Professor Penck has called his "sustenance space."—Mark Jefferson in Atlantic.

HEART SURGERY.

Daring and Successful Operations Are Not Unusual Nowadays.

Probably the most daring chapter in modern surgery is that which treats of operations on the heart. "The road to the heart is only two or three inches long, but it has taken surgery nearly 2,000 years to traverse it," is one writer's striking remark. The scientist as well as the layman has looked upon the heart with an almost superstitious awe. Any injury necessarily implied death. Any interference with such an injury could only hasten the end. Yet many shrewd observers in the course of the ages had noted that all heart wounds did not result in instantaneous death.

It was not until ten or fifteen years ago that surgeons began to act upon this knowledge. In exceptional cases death did not result immediately from a heart wound. There were intervals of a few minutes, a few days or a few weeks. Why not utilize this interval in an attempt to sew up the wound? Medical history now reports many successful operations of this kind. An especially noteworthy one, performed upon an Alabama negro boy in 1902, illustrates the resources of modern heart surgery.

This boy had been the victim of an especially nasty stab wound. The knife had penetrated the apex of the heart and passed into the left ventricle, making a wound nearly half an inch long. When the boy was placed on the operating table in a little negro cabin the signs of death had already appeared. His feet were cold, and his face showed signs of the utmost distress. The surgeons made a little window-like opening just above the heart. Through this they could readily see the injured organ, the blood spurting from the wound at each pulsation. One surgeon put in his hand, pulled the heart upward and held it while another sewed the wound with a catgut. The operation—performed without an anaesthetic—lasted fifty-five minutes. On the sixteenth day the boy was sitting up. In a short time his heart was as good as new.—World's Work.

BIG FORTUNES OF TODAY.

How They Would Compare With Stephen Girard's Nine Millions.

Stephen Girard died in 1831, leaving $9,000,000. Practically he put up the money for the war of 1812. He lent great sums of money to the government. Private subscriptions failing, he virtually subscribed the $5,000,000 loan of 1814. He was a plutocrat in a poor country. To speak very moderately, his $9,000,000 was more comparatively than twenty times that sum would be today.

We have not at hand the estimates of the wealth of the United States in 1830. The census reports and compendiums seem to begin with 1850, nineteen years after Girard's death. In that year the estimated value of that wealth was $7,135,780,000. The estimate for 1912 was $107,104,211,917. The wealth of the country was between fourteen and fifteen times as much as it was in 1850, and we regret not to know how many times more than it was in 1830, the year before Girard's death.

The fortune absolutely owned by the late Colonel John Jacob Astor was some $51,000,000. The net value was about $85,000,000. The gross amount is $87,216,691.05.

Judged by the growth of the wealth of the United States since 1850 and remembering that twenty years of growth are here left out, a great private fortune of today should have been compared with that of the Bordeaux sea captain's son, at least $126,000,000. All things considered, the rise in prices, standards of living, luxuries, refinements, arts, it is safe to say that the $9,000,000 of 1821 would not be made good by less than $180,000,000 in 1913. Private wealth has not grown equally with public wealth.—New York Sun.

Want Only German Words.

While the use of foreign words is steadily increasing among Germans, the government of Saxony has taken measures to stamp out as far as possible all words of alien origin. In an education bill passed by the Saxon landtag last year it was enacted that purely German substitutes are to be used in schools for the "Fremdenwörter" (foreign words), which have hitherto been officially recognized. Instead of "Geographie" the children are to learn "Erdkunde" (literally, earth knowledge), while "Kurzschriftkunst" (art of short writing) and "Raumlehre" (teaching of space) are to figure in the curriculum in the place of "Stenographie" and "Geometrie." Henceforth a delinquent official will no longer undergo "suspension," but "vorlaufige Amtsenthebung."

She declared that the antiquary who now wanted to sell the picture at so great a price bought it from her for 20 cents.

ALL JUNIOR HOCKEY PLAYERS ARE WANTED

Junior hockey players who would like to enter the ranks of the O.H.A. are asked to call at the Examiner office this evening and to-morrow evening, and be equipped with information relative to their age and time of residence in the city.

In past years much difficulty has been experienced in obtaining information which was, and still is necessary before a certificate can be taken as absolute proof that a player is eligible.

It is not necessary for any of last season's players to call.

The gate at the Rugby football match at Montreal on Saturday between McGill and R.M.C. realized $2,785, which is a record for this season by about $300, and is also believed to be the largest gate ever taken at McGill grounds.

ANIMALS IN OPERA.

Some of Them Raised Up Their Voices With Weird Effect.

Few persons realize how many animals appear in opera. By this I do not mean such animals as the tenor who played the part of Lohengrin and was told by Von Bulow that he was the knight of the swine rather than of the swan, but real bona fide animals. They extend all the way from Monteverde to Wagner.

About A. D. 1600 it was not unusual to have lions or elephants upon the operatic stage. One can never tell what these animals may improvise in their parts. I know of a case where an elephant caused a most hasty exit of the orchestra in London long ago, when the father of B. E. Woolf, the Boston critic, was conducting.

The donkey in Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" has not a speaking part, yet once that I know of he lifted up his voice and made Canio's great solo an unexpected duet. Balaam himself was not more astonished than was the tenor on that occasion.

In spite of the saying, "Thou shalt not yoke the ox and the ass together," Pierne caused these two to sing a duet in "The Children of Bethlehem." On this occasion the ass was a tenor, but I do not believe that Pierne meant any reflection upon the high voiced fraternity.—Louis C. Elson in Musical Observer.

The father, not believing in corporal punishment, concluded to try a moral lecture.

Dave's lips trembled as he replied:

"But, father, what can I do? I ain't got a deaf ear."—Lippincott's.

MAJOR CROFOOT

As Usual, the Grand Promoter Is Full of Schemes.

HE HAS A FAIR VISITOR.

With His Usual Munificence He Contributes $500 Check to a Home For Crippled Children—Gets $3 From Young Lady Caller.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

MAJOR CROFOOT, the hardup but undaunted and hopeful promoter of many good things, had 11 cents in his pocket.

He had counted them over and over, and there was just 11 to promote on.

The major was happy. He had seen days when the beer and lunch was to be left out. He was singing to himself when there came a knock at the door. It was reckless of him to cry out, "Come in," but he took a chance and did it.

It was a young woman who stood in the door and begged his pardon.

"The fact is," she exclaimed as soon as she had reached the middle of the room, "I—am engaged in a work of charity and was told by the dentist upstairs that you would probably assist me."

As the major had been owing the dentist upstairs a bill for the last three years and as the dentist had threatened to lick him only the week before if he didn't come down, there seemed to be a mixup somewhere, but the man of many schemes smiled and offered his hand and replied:

"My dear lady, I am glad to see you. If I can forward your charitable work in any manner you have only to command."

"That is kind of you," she said as she took the broken backed chair he pointed out. "The society I belong to is engaged in supplying crippled children with crutches and other appliances and I can assure you that we are doing much good. We bought thirty crutches last month."

"It is a grand work, a noble work, a work well worthy of you, and you can count on my help. Do you meet with much success in your canvassing?"

"Only moderate, sir."

World Growing Hard Hearted.

"I presume so. The fact is, that as a people we are growing hard hearted. Only yesterday as I stood on the corner a lame boy made his way past me with painful effort. My eyes filled with tears at the sight, but several other men made sport of his affliction. Just how much have you collected this morning, please?"

"Three dollars, I believe. I have only been out an hour."

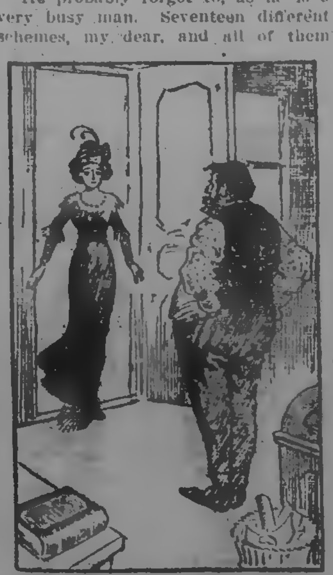
"If I should give you a check for $500," said the major as he scratched his ear and looked around the room—"If I should give you a check for $500"—

"Oh, sir, but how liberal, how very liberal!" exclaimed the caller as she rose up in her excitement.

"Well, that is my way of doing business. Did the dentist mention to you that I had promoted seventeen successful corporations and trusts, each one capitalized for more than $3,000,000?"

"I—I don't think so."

"He probably forgot to, as he is a very busy man. Seventeen different schemes, my dear, and all of them making 10 per cent for the stockholders. I am just now putting the eighteenth afloat, the last and best of all. As you knocked on the door I was wondering where I could find a young lady to take the secretaryship at a salary of $12,000 a year. You are here."



IT WAS A YOUNG WOMAN.

"But I couldn't take a place in an office, you know," she protested. "I live at home, and my papa would not permit it."

"He surely will when he understands matters. As a secretary you would not have to appear at the office at all. All your work will be done by others. Once a month you ride down in your carriage and get your check and bank it. You can continue your society work just the same. In fact your opportunities for discovering crippled children will be greatly enhanced."

"I—I might talk with you later or send papa down."

"Don't delay a day, not an hour, not a minute, my dear. Don't wait to send papa down, but close with me at once. A person who finds a hill of solid gold should not walk away and let some one else pre-empt the claim. There may be a hundred applications for the place before sundown."

"But what is it?"

Biggest Scheme Ever.

"The biggest scheme ever launched in this world. It will be the prize of the century. I was offered $5,000,000 for the idea as soon as it came out, but I wouldn't look at the price. Let me say to you, my dear girl, that I have originated and launched the Great American Pie Crust company, capitalized at $1,000,000 and divided into shares of $100 each. You are a woman. As a woman you realize how difficult it is to make a good pie crust. The pie itself can be made most any old way, but it is positively necessary that the crust be all right. Every crust warranted to be flaky and brittle and to please the most fastidious palate. No lumps in them. No foreign substances. No pie eater is startled at discovering a piece of bicycle tire in our crust. King George orders 1,000 per week as a starter. As soon as things quiet down in Russia the czar will order twice that number. Put up in air tight tin boxes, and every box contains twelve crusts. Price 25 cents."

"But I don't think"—began the young lady as the major paused for breath.

"But you must think, my dear girl. If you let this golden opportunity pass it will never come again. The clear profit on every box is 15 cents. We shall sell a billion boxes a year. No more family quarrels on account of pie crusts. No more driving husbands to drink. No more divorces. The husband devours one pie and smacks his lips for more. All the great actresses of the day are ready to certify that they can't go to bed without eating a pie with one of our crusts. Great financiers, ministers of the gospel, heads of trusts, etc., are going to draw further fame from our boxes. Twelve in a box and warranted to keep for twelve years in any climate. The next expedition to the north pole"—

"I think we will dispose of the other matter first," said the young lady as she arose.

To Consult Papa.

"Ah, I see! You will take the check now and then consult with your papa about the secretaryship?"

"Yes, sir, if you please."

"Very well. I will now sit down and write you a check for $500, and much good may it do the crippled children. It is a noble work, a grand work. There it is, and now you may hand me over $3 in cash."

"But I don't understand."

"Plain as that stove over there, my dear. You hand it to me as an earnest that you will consult with your papa. I trust you with $500, and you trust me with only $3. It is simply doing business on a guarantee. I propose to let you in on the ground floor as to stock, even if you don't take the secretaryship, and the $3 will hold you a block of $10,000 for a week."

The caller handed over the cash in a hesitating, puzzled way and took the check, while the major briskly shook hands with her and said:

"Think it over—think it over, my dear, and don't let that thousand dollars a month get past you. The Great American Pie Crust company is bound to be a Golconda. There isn't a diamond mine in South Africa that can touch it. And now good morning to you. Good morning. Take the check to any bank—any bank—and good morning."

An hour later the young lady returned. She had visited three different banks, and her cheeks were red and her eyes flashing. She knocked in an aggressive way at the major's door. [illegible] knocked again, but all was silence. She was knocking for the third time when a small boy came down the hall and said:

"No use. The old deadbeat went out an hour ago. That's his little way, you know!"

"That's the best I can do for you," said the theatrical manager. "You've been idle all season so far. Now will you stay idle the rest of the season or take this small part?"

"I'll take it," replied the comedian. "In this case a small role is better than a whole loaf."—Philadelphia Ledger.

164 DWELLINGS IN TEN MONTHS COST $239.432

A Clear-cut Illustration of the City's Growth, During the Year

A look over the list of building permits for this year, reveals the fact that one hundred and sixty-four permits calling for the erection of dwellings were issued. These one hundred and sixty-four houses represent an outlay of $239,435. Ask the real estate agents and they will say there are few, if any, empty houses.

The permits for the houses as issued per month were as follows:

Month.	Permits.	Amount
January	4	$8000.00
February	5	7500.00
March	1	600.00
April	35	62350.00
May	26	32250.00
June	18	28575.00
July	32	45610.00
August	13	9300.00
September	11	19000.00
October	19	26050.00

April, with a string of thirty-five permits for the construction of houses at a cost of $62,350, leads the list. The smallest month was March, when only one permit was taken out for a house, although considerable work was done in the alteration line. The amount of alterations during the ten months amounts to $3,570, while permits taken out for the construction of some of the new factories comes to $150,625.

The south end of the city is apparently the biggest building ward in the city.

Some of the permits issued for the big buildings were:

Matthews-Laing Co.	$10000.00
Bonner Worth	10000.00
C.G.E.	14000.00
De Laval Co.	40000.00
De Laval Co.	5000.00
C.P.R. freight sheds	15625.00
Henry Hope building	65000.00

CALL OUT THE SUFFRAGETTES; MEAT PURVEYOR SAYS ONLY FEW WOMEN KNOW HOW TO COOK MEAT

And This is Contributory to the High Cost of Living in His Opinion

An exchange refers to the drama being staged at present in this country by the high cost of living as a true representation of "The Wolf and the Lamb," having the high cost of living to impersonate the wolf and the unhappy consumer in the role of the lamb. It matters not that the unwilling lamb becomes a vegetarian, pawns his auto, cuts down his wife's pin money, fires the cook because she won't make hash of the roast, tells the children Santa may not come this year and then acknowledges his willingness to live on peanuts and his last year suit. He can make as many economical moves as he pleases but still he is hard up.

This morning a Review scribe dropped into one of the local butcher shops and after the thread-bare salutation of "anything strange or startling?" he leaned against the rather greasy marbled top counter and struck up a conversation. In a few minutes the conversation drifted from the condition of business to the high cost of living, and its cause. From the butcher's point of view it was all the fault of the female division of the populace. J. J. Hill, the great railway magnate is credited with saying that "the high cost of living was living so high" and this was the very exact opinion of our white-aproned friend.

"What we want in this city and in many more cities in the Dominion is an illustrated lecture on how to cook the various cuts of meat and how to cook them right," exclaimed he.

"Would you believe me," he continued, punctuating his remarks by digging holes in the meat block with his large knife, "that only one woman in twenty knows how to cook meat. The average lady knows about two kinds of cuts and asks for them alternately. She cooks them the same way all the time and never appears satisfied. She'll come in here and tell me what a fine 'rake off' I'm making, and at the same time it would suit her better if she used that time in learning to cook."

The Review man remonstrated and asked him if he wasn't a little harsh in his judgment. To this he replied with an illustration. "About a week ago I had a lady come in and buy a T-bone cut. While I was tieing it up she told me that she could always get a delightful steak at any of the local cafe's or hotels and she didn't see why a butcher would sell a cafe or a hotel better meat than to a regular customer. I told her that the meat these institutions obtained was not any better, if it was as good, as what she bought, but I added 'they know how to cook it.' She told me she didn't think any cook knew more about cooking meat than she did, so rather than offend her I handed her her meat and smiled. Do you know that that very same lady's husband will 'phone home about 11.15 and request that dinner will be ready sharp at twelve, and she'll put the meat on the stove and if her husband is detained a few minutes, she will let it simmer away and before she thinks of it the flavor is all boiled or fried out as the case may be."

CHEAPER CUTS.

"My idea is this, that if the average man's wife understood the art of cooking meat she could use a cheaper cut and obtain better results. What do you think of a man earning $1.75 a day who will buy sirloin steak and buy it regularly? Why its nonsense. Its alright for a wealthy person to live on that class of meat but the laboring man should live within his means and he can do this by using a cheaper cut of meat. Take for instance the pot-roast. Why a more delicious part of the animal cannot be found and under proper treatment this could be cooked and made as tender as chicken. Take it from me," he concluded "if the women knew how to cook and cook right, there would be less privation. As I said before there is about one in every twenty women who knows how to cook meat and the only way to reach them all is to get a well versed speaker here to address them on 'How an Inferior cut of meat can be made Superior to the very best cuts.'"

Not wishing to be the cause of some lady not getting her meat on time, the Review scribe took a walk and came to a stop in another butcher shop. He asked the manager what he thought of the people blaming butchers for the high price of meat. "They're on the wrong track," answered this pessimistic purveyor carefully wiping his meat block off with his cleaver. "It's the farmers in the west who are to blame. They are shipping their cattle into the United States just as fast as they can, and take it from me there is not enough cattle raising around Ontario to keep us going. If we increased the price when the price is raised on us, we'd have to close our shutters and it looks as though there'll be some of us close our doors this winter anyways."

Considering these two facts, namely, that the average housewife is not buying the meat she should, considering her financial standing, and that there is a scarcity of cattle in Ontario it is little wonder that the butcher bill is kept out of the conversation until father has had his dinner.

Music and Drama

The select entertainment under the auspices of the young men of the Murray Street Baptist church, held last evening was one of the most enjoyable and successful held yet by an organization of the church.

Those who assisted in the program were Miss Dorothy Allan, Mrs. L. J. Pettit, Miss Mignon Telgeman, Mr. Geo. Schneider.

Mr. W. Rambo was chairman.

The concert held last night in the lecture hall of Knox Church, under the auspices of the Board of Managers, was a splendid success, both from the point of attendance and the enjoyment for the audience. Rev. H. J. Keith, as chairman, opened the concert with a short address.

Talented artists contributed to the program. Miss Barbara Foster, added to her popularity in this city by her rendition of several very fine numbers and her singing of "A Hundred Pipers" was particularly pleasing.

A new vocalist in Canada was introduced in the person of Miss Agnes Johnston, who recently came from Dundee, Scotland. Miss Johnston possesses a voice which is distinctly musical and one that promises to win popular favor. Her father is a musician of considerable note.

The violin selections by Miss Logan of the Conservatory staff, the baritone solos by Mr. George Kenyon, organist and choir leader of Knox Church, and the selection by Miss Parker were very heartily received. It might be added that Miss Foster spoke very highly of Mr. Kenyon's work as accompanist.

Miss Kenyon supplied the accompaniments for the vocal numbers of her father.

The platform was dressed by Richard Hall & Son with carpets and hangings

The program was as follows:

Solo, "Angus MacDonald" — Miss Foster
Selection—Miss Parker.
Violin solo—Miss L. Logan

WARM PRAISE FOR MR. KENYON

Miss Foster Highly Pleased With His Accompaniments

After the concert at Knox church last night, Mr. George Kenyon, the organist and choir leader, was complimented by Miss Barbara Foster, for his work as accompanist. Miss Foster stated that Mr. Kenyon was the best accompanist she had ever had.

Such praise from a talented singer like Miss Foster must be very gratifying to Mr. Keynon, and also the people of the church.

A DISTINCTIVELY METROPOLITAN CAST

With "The Dream Maiden" Coming to "the Grand Next Wednesday Nov. 19

"The Dream Maiden" the most notable of big musical productions of the present season, is not a musical comedy but a pretentious, mammoth superbly mounted operetta with a distinctively metropolitan cast. It was written by Allen Lowe and the music by Bela Laszky, men of reputation in both hemispheres, and ranks with "Robin Hood," "Merry Widow," "Florodora" and is even given a place among the class of the Gilbert and Sullivan successes by the critics in the cities in which it has been seen.

Audrey Maple, the golden haired beauty with the glorious voice is even better as "The Dream Maiden" than she was in "the Firefly" or "The Arcadians." Philip Simmons, England's noted lyric tenor, is the Prince Charming. William Wallace Cameron fo "Madame Sherry" and "Belle of New York" fame, is the comedian; John Morgan, buffo-basso of the Boston Grand Opera Company and last year with "The Siren" is the Duke, and the seventeen principals in the cast of seventy-one include Al McGarry, Suzanne Morgan, Emily Fitzroy, Norman Blume, Chas. Frederick, Louis Morrison, Kathryn Bowen, Ethel Walsh, Gertrude Gugler and Albert Varsha, the tenor robuste

PARENTS WILL BE FINED

If Their Children Under Age Limits Are Found on Streets

AFTER NINE O'CLOCK

"Hereafter the parents of the children will be brought before the Magistrate, and a fine will result instead of the child being brought to my office and warned as I have been doing in the past, since the Act went into force," said Police Chief Thompson to-day in an interview with a Review reporter in regard to the question of boys under the age of 10, and girls under the age of sixteen being found on the streets after nine o'clock, contrary to the new Act, forbidding the children from being on the streets after the above time.

Numerous cases have been settled in the Chief's office, so as to save trouble for the parents. Sometimes the officer would take the child home, and the parent would come before the Chief the next day and warned, but the parents seem to think that this is too easy and, therefore, the Chief desires to warn the parents of children under the age limit that they will, in the future be the ones to pay the penalty by paying a fine, which after each conviction will increase.

A Ministerial deputation waited on Chief Thompson yesterday in regard to the matter. They were informed that the notice forbidding the children to be out after the above hours would be published in the papers.

The Act provides for a fine of $1 and costs for first conviction; second conviction $2 and costs and the third $5 and costs

TWO HUNDRED LIVES MAY BE LOST THROUGH STORM; DEATH LIST GROWING

At Least Twenty Vessels Have Been Dashed to Pieces.

TORONTO, Nov. 13.—With the slow passing of the weary hours comes additional evidence of the awfulness of the storm which lashed Lake Huron into a three-days' fury, and carried with it a terrible toll of life and wrecked vessels.

The extent of the loss probably will not be known for days, but every hour piles up fresh debris on the shores and brings to light the fact that one of the worst disasters of the Great Lakes has occurred.

Probably 200 souls perished in the turbulent waves. Twenty boats or more went to destruction. A property loss of three and a half million dollars was caused. Marine circles received a great shock yesterday when the finding of wreckage indicated the loss of the giant steamer James Carruthers.

Along with the tales of bereavement and suffering last night came the story from Port Franks that ghouls are robbing the bodies of victims, and that morbid thieves are carrying away the wreckage, making identification more difficult. The matter will be reported to the Attorney-General.

Inquests were opened at Thedford and Goderich last night on bodies of the victims recovered.

The probable victims are as follows:—

ARE ROBBING THE VICTIMS

Ghouls at [illegible] Shore of Lake Huron.

THEDFORD, Ont., Nov. 13.—Terrible as has been the greatest of the Great Lakes tragedies it has been left for man to make the horror more horrible. Last night steamboat officials returned from Port Franks with information that will be placed in the hands of the Attorney-General Department. Not only have they the names of men they found carting wreckage away from the death-strewn shore, but they have under surveillance one man who is alleged to have in his possession $800 taken from a foreigner's belt found on shore, and the names of other men who are believed to have robbed the dead.

The ghouls found three victims of the storm in or near a lifeboat of the Regina. Two of the men were visible, but one body lay in the bottom of the boat under water, and this fact saved his body from being desecrated. The latter was the man identified as Lawson of the Regina, and the other two are the men at Undertaker Woodhull's here, and practically identified as Gustave Olsen of Toronto and L. E. Burton of Montreal. The work of the body-looters was limited by a creek, for they could not get across this, and it was on the other side of it that the other eight bodies were found. On one of the other bodies was found $113, while all the others had money on them. The bodies which were washed up west of the creek had their pockets rifled, the perpetrators of the crime not even leaving anything by which the men might be identified.

Was Lost In the Bush.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—Harry Watts, son of J. W. H. Watts, R.C.A., of this city, reached home yesterday after a thrilling experience in the woods north of Madawaska river, where he was lost in the dense wilderness from Friday until Sunday last, with no food save a few pieces of candy and two biscuits. He was suffering badly from exposure.

At one time on Saturday he was within half a mile of camp and failed to hear the whistles at the Booth mill, which were kept blowing at intervals to attract his attention.

THE DISASTERS CERTIFIED AND THOSE OF WHICH THERE IS DOUBT

Unknown vessel upset off Port Huron, with loss of entire crew. Identity of steamer still in doubt, but may be the steamer Regina, the bodies of ten of whose crew were washed up along the Canadian shore, or the steamer Wexford, not reported since she passed the Soo last Saturday. Four bodies with life-preservers bearing her name were washed up at St. Joseph, Ont.

Unknown lumber carrier, seen half sunk and abandoned in Lake Huron.

Steamer Hutchinson, on beach above the Soo. Bottom badly torn.

Steamer Huronic, which was ashore near the Soo, released.

Steamer G. J. Grammer, ashore on beach near Lorain, Ohio.

Writes Farewell on Wood.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 13.—A message from the missing lightship No. 82 was found by searchers among the wreckage of the craft on the south shore of Lake Erie yesterday. The message was written on a piece of wood and read:

"Good-bye, Nellie. Ship is breaking up fast. (Signed) Williams."

It is believed the message was written by Captain H. M. Williams of Manistee, Mich., who was in command of the ship. No bodies have been recovered.

WAS BIGGEST FREIGHTER

Mariners Almost Certain That "James Carruthers" Was Lost.

GODERICH, Nov. 13.—All day parties have been walking the shore to Bayfield, and from Bayfield on, looking for bodies off the different boats wrecked between here and Sar[illegible] les have been found south of Black's Point, a place six miles south of here. Three of [illegible] to be Goderich boys, but as yet these have not been identified. Relatives left here yesterday afternoon to identify them.

While it has not been absolutely established that the James Carruthers, the largest freighter on the lakes foundered in the great storm, the belief here last night is that there is practically no reason to hope that the giant vessel, heavily laden with a cargo of grain, weathered the gale which proved so disastrous to many other freighters on the great lakes. The discovery yesterday morning of an oar, life belts and life boat rudder on the shore marked "James Carruthers," seemed to indicate that the freighter had succumbed to the violence of the waves, and as no word has been received since, it is regarded as most improbable that Captain Wright of Toronto and his crew of 25 men still survive.

The James Carruthers left Fort William on Nov. 6 in company with the Wexford, which is known to have been lost with all on board.

As a result of a careful search along the shore for miles, part of an oak-finished cabin, pieces of oak chairs, part of a pilot house and other pieces of the upper works of a large steamer were found. It is believed that they belonged to the big freighter.

The James Carruthers was launched at Collingwood on May 22 last and was reputed to be the largest boat on the great lakes, as well as one of the most up-to-date. She was 550 feet long. She had a gross carrying capacity of 15,000 tons on a 19-foot draft. She was built of steel on the arch and frame web system, leaving the holds unobstructed. She has a carrying capacity of 375 carloads or 600,000 bushels of wheat.

In the afternoon three bodies tied to a life raft came ashore at Naftel's Point, five miles down the shore. Coroner Hunter was immediately notified, and upon examining the clothes they were found to be Thomas Stone, an Indian from the reserve at Sarnia; George L. Smith and John Owen. The papers and their union cards were so badly damaged by water that it was impossible to get any further information from them. The raft was from the steamer McGean, likely owned by Hutchinson & Co. of Cleveland, bound up the lakes light.

A life raft was found fully equipped, bearing the name Argus. It is possible that this raft was washed away, but it was rigged as though it had been used, and it looked as though the bodies had been washed away.

The tug Logie from Saugeen was in port yesterday afternoon and reported passing six large hatches and much other wreckage.

The report that the spars of the Wexford were seen at Black's Point is unfounded. The Wexford was off this port on Sunday night about two o'clock, as she could be heard blowing, and her distress lights were plainly seen.

Among the marine men it is surmised that she might have anchored off here to wait daylight, and the anchors pulling her bow so much that she foundered. However, this will never be known. However, it is [illegible]

The fact that the Kaministiquia escaped disaster is a miracle, as she left [illegible] Soo, but in the afternoon [illegible] to turn back and run for Sarnia, where she reported Monday afternoon. The tug Horton went out twice to search, but it was too rough to get anywhere near the shore and were forced to return.

Hunters Still Missing.

DETROIT, Nov. 13.—No more wrecks or vessels in distress were reported yesterday from points on Lake St. Clair and along the Detroit river. A number of hunters, believed to have been on these waters in open boats, when the blizzard swept Michigan Sunday, are still missing.

HEROIC FARM HANDS

Daring Feats Enacted at Rescue of Northern Queen Sailors

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 13.—Tales of heroism are told of the rescue of 22 men of the crew of the Northern Queen, a big lake freighter that was grounded on the beach at Port Frank on Monday morning.

While breakers rolled in a manner that appeared to render the loss of all inevitable, the members of the crew strapped on their life belts and tried to put off in boats.

Repeatedly they were thrown into the water and their rafts smashed to pieces. Farmers of the district attracted to the scene worked valorously.

Battered by the waves since Sunday, the sailors were practically helpless. Starved and frozen, soaked with each succeeding roll of the foundering ship, they were cast overboard. The boat was close into shore, but the undercurrent carried them back as they were knocked about on the storm-tossed lake. Repeatedly plunging into the water, young farm hands by heroic efforts snatched unconscious men from death. Many of them were hauled on shore apparently lifeless.

Canadian Press Despatch.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13 — Letters received yesterday from Premier Borden, who is in West Virginia, state that he is enjoying the best of health, and makes daily visits to the golf links. He will not return to Ottawa until December.

MAY BE "REGINA"

Doubt Still Exists As to Identity of Over-turned Vessel

PORT HURON, Nov. 13.—While it is certain that the Regina went down in the storm, doubt exists as to whether she is the freighter which turned turtle in Lake Huron a few miles from here. A theory borne by many is that there was a collision between the unidentified vessel and the Regina, that the former went over immediately, while the Regina's crew abandoned her and took to life boats. Those who adhere to this belief think that the wreck of the Regina will be found in another place.

The wreck of the Regina was confirmed when ten bodies were found strewn on the beach at the little Canadian fishing village of Port Frank, thirty miles northeast of Sarnia. A short distance up shore was found a lifeboat, lying on its side, containing two dead men. The lifeboat carried the name "Regina," and scattered along the beach was other wreckage and cargo identified as that of the Regina.

Quebec Treasury Is Nervous.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—By the decision of the Privy Council Tuesday that the Province of Quebec had no right to collect estate duty from securities held in Boston by the late Henry Cotton, who died in Quebec, it is stated to-day that the Government may be called upon to reimburse $2,000,000, moneys collected from the foreign or outside estates of other people who have died in this province.

Mr. Cotton left an estate valued at $350,000, from which Quebec claimed $82,000 death duties.

SEVEN WORKMEN PERISH IN THE LACHINE CANAL WHEN BOAT CAPSIZED

Went to Their Death as They Fought For Places on Upturned Craft.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—Seven, and perhaps nine men lost their lives in the Lachine canal at Cote St. Paul early yesterday morning when a flat-bottomed boat capsized, throwing fifteen workmen into the water. All were employed in the construction of the Montreal Heat & Light Co.'s new plant at Cote St. Paul. It is believed that all were foreigners whose names will not be known until the power company's timekeepers check up to-day.

It is understood the indirect cause of the accident was the passing of a tug and the injudicious movement of the men from one side of the boat to the other as the craft passed through the tug's swells.

The tug put back as soon as the boat capsized and rescued two of its former occupants. A boat put out from shore and rescued four others, and two reached the south shore on planks sent floating in the canal by watchers on shore. Two others were seen swimming for the north shore, but in the darkness it was not known whether they reached it. About 200 men cross the canal night and morning in the single flat-bottomed boat, as a short cut to a suburban car line and the consequent congestion has been the subject of comment frequently owing to the danger from passing craft.

It is stated that more might have been saved but for the scramble for positions of vantage on the upturned boat, which swamped from the pressure put upon it by the fighting men.

MUST PAY PENALTY

Murderer at Brantford is Sentenced to Hang.

JANUARY 23

Confession Made After Arrest Used Against Him.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 13. — James Taylor was sentenced last night to be hanged Friday, Jan. 23, for the murder of 12-year-old Charlie Dawson. The jury was out twenty minutes before it reached a unanimous verdict. [illegible] the prisoner, [illegible] Kelly displayed no little emotion. It [illegible] the most dastardly crime, his lordship said, he had ever met with in all his experience at both bench and bar. The prisoner took the sentence stolidly.

The trial lasted all day. A. M. Harley, junior member of the bar in Brantford, was called upon by the judge to defend Taylor. At the last minute a plea of intoxication was entered, when the prisoner, the only witness for the defence, was put into the box. Taylor said he was drunk when he hacked and carved the boy to death.

The confession made by Taylor to the police a few hours after he was arrested was used against him in the trial. Coroner Ashton, Constables Kerr and Chapman and others told of Taylor leading them to the knife with which the deed had been committed.

Taylor testified yesterday that he threw the knife away because it had a broken handle. He told various stories on the witness stand, all of which conflicted with his previous confession.

A guard was immediately placed over the condemned man, and he will be closely watched. It is unlikely that an appeal will be entered.

TIGHTENS HIS GRIP

An Administrative Council Will Henceforth Govern China.

PEKING, Nov. 13. — President Yuan Shi Kai intends to summon an "administrative council," which, in addition to transacting state affairs, will draft regulations governing the new Parliament? The council will number 71 members, consisting of the Cabinet officers and others appointed by the President and provincial governors who have already been appointed by him.

Yuan Shi Kai considers that the present House of Representatives is unwieldy and deserves its reduction to three hundred members. The original number of representatives was 596. The powers of the Parliament will also be materially curtailed, and the Senate will disappear, giving place to the administrative council, which will be a permanent body.

This program was announced yesterday, and it will probably be carried into effect if the opponents of the President are not able to bring about its modification.

In the meantime the remnant of Parliament is permitted to continue holding informal meetings, but can do no business, because of lack of a quorum.

WIFE OF HIGH COMMISSIONER PASSES AWAY

Lady Strathcona's Illness Developed Into Pneumonia.

LONDON, Nov. 13 — (C. A. P. Cable.)—Lady Strathcona, wife of the Canadian High Commissioner, died last night at 28 Grosvenor square, in her 89th year. Her ladyship had been ill just a week. On Thursday evening last she contracted a severe influenza, which a day or two developed into pneumonia.

The Times, referring to the death of Lady Strathcona, says: "More than sixty years of singularly happy married life are ended. She was a woman who was beloved and trusted by a wide circle of friends and was conspicuous for her charitable nature. There was only one child of the marriage, now Hon. Mrs. Robt. Howard, who married Dr. Robert Howard of Queen Anne street, Cavendish square. By special remainder Mrs. Robert Howard is heir presumptive to a barony."

"Of retiring disposition and not often prominent before the public Lady Strathcona," says the The Daily Mail, in a lengthy memoir, "worked quietly with her husband in those great Imperial schemes which have done so much to strengthen the bonds between Canada and the mother country. Close comradeship between Lord and Lady Strathcona was demonstrated in the late summer this year when the couple undertook the journey to Canada and back. She was moved by a great spirit of charity, and in 1906 she gave ten thousand guineas to Queen Alexandra's unemployed fund, and imperial work that lay near her heart was revealed in her wish that the greater part of the money should be used to enable the unemployed and their wives and children to emigrate to the Canadian northwest."

MIND AND MATTER

Collier's Weekly, speaking of brains, says:

"It has long been known that there is a certain rough relationship between the size of the brain and intelligence; and, still further, between brain surface and intelligence; but both of these facts are complicated in a variety of ways. As, for example, there is a rough relationship between the size and weight of the brain and the weight of the body, so that, for example, the largest animal that lives (or ever has lived) the whale has also the largest and heaviest brain."

It seems impossible to disassociate mind from matter, grey matter in particular. And the inference would seem to be that the more grey matter one has the more mind or intelligence one ought to display. But this is far from being the case or whales and elephants would, instead of man, be

"The roof and crown of things."

The ant is an insignificant creature and its brain is infinitesmal yet it is as "brainy" as the elephant, despite its paucity of grey matter. Well, then, it is not the grey matter which thinks. The amount of matter does not matter at all. As much thinking can be done within a hundreth part of an inch as in a square foot.

Another interesting piece of information is contained in the following paragraph:

"No human being ever saw in a [illegible] people. But there are at least fifteen hundred million on earth. Yet the human brain has from five to ten times as many individual cells as there are individuals on earth."

If this means that the human brain is capable of taking in and remembering ten times as many impressions as there are persons upon the earth, then this accounts for the ever fresh interest we have in the great panorama of life. And perhaps this also accounts for some people ceasing to take any interest in life. There are people who cannot absorb new ideas, whose minds are fixed. These people presumably have used up all their cells, or possibly they had a very poor supply to begin with.

The relation between mind and matter is a big subject to tackle in a newspaper; great scientists have tried to fathom it in vain. Science can direct the human brain and count its cells, but THAT which acts on this matter, they cannot tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth.

PERILS OF THE LAKES

The awful chapter of wrecks which has been read to us as the result of the recent storm on the lakes is more tragic than was at first realized. Canada, except for the Maritime Provinces, is regarded as being an inland country, whose people do not know what a good sized ship is much less a shipwreck. But this series of disasters on the great waters will provide a tragic illustration of Canada's inland navigation and the perils that beset the fresh-water sailor.

The finding of the bodies is, doubtless, a sad and horrible business, but it has its pathos and perhaps its poetry for those who are in the habit of looking at even the tragedies of life with an eye or ear for the "sad sweet music of Humanity." The following account of the finding of the body of a young Scotchman, may be merely an item of news to most readers of newspapers:

A young man, apparently twenty-eight years of age, clean shaven, reddish hair and blue eyes, of about five feet ten inches in height and weight about 170 pounds. In his pocket was a letter addressed to George Glen, Saltford. His clothes were of dark material, with a knitted jersey having a white border. On the left hand he wore a gold ring with flat top.

It has since been learned that the description of this man would indicate him to the James Glen, from Scotland, who had been sailing on the Wexford and made Goderich his home for a short time.

There is a theme for an elegy here which as sweet as "Lycidas" but we lack the Milton to write it.

FROM WHOM SHALL WE HIRE ?

Our evening contemporary repeats the old Globe nonsense about "hiring Great Britain to do our fighting." Did Great Britain never do any fighting for Canada—and when was Canada able to do any fighting on the sea for herself? What would Canada do if war broke out between England and Germany to-morrow? Would Canada not have to hire someone to do her fighting? Would the United States do it for nothing? Does the Examiner think that Canada could remain neutral? We would be helpless and at the mercy of any country that might defeat England.

Canada is part of the British Empire and is part of the prize of any nation who defeats England.

While we fly the British flag we can never be neutral, and if we were to fly the stars and stripes in its stead we would have to pay for it and hire the U. S navy to defend our coasts, but at the expense of our Canadian freedom and nationality.

Milkers and Springers.

A steady market. Supply of good fresh and forward cows very limited. Such kinds get the call, there being practically no country demand for backward springers. Sales largely at $60 to $75; choice to extra quotable from $80 to $100; trashy light stuff down to $50 and lower.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves of good quality are scarce and in demand at $9 to $10.50; medium to good calves, $7 to $8.50; common, $4.50 to $6.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep market was steady to strong, and lambs were again 5c to 10c per cwt. higher. Sheep, ewes sold at $4.50 to $5.50; culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.25; lambs, $7.60 to $7.90 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts of hogs were light, and prices consequently were very firm. Selects fed and watered sold at $8.75 to $8.90.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 12.—At the C.P.R live-stock market the offerings this morning amounted to 250 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves.

An active trade continues to be done in cattle for shipment to the United States, there being a good demand for stockers and common cattle today, and shipments of 30 carloads were made. The tone of the market for all grades was firm. There was also a good demand from butchers, and the market on the whole was very active, with sales of choice steers at $7.50 to $7.75; good, at $7 to $7.25; fair, at $6 to $6.75, and common at from $4.50 to $5.50 per cwt. Choice butchers' cows brought $6 to $6.25, and the lower grades from that down to $4.50, while bulls sold at $5 to $6 per cwt.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs was very firm at the recent advance in prices noted owing to the smaller offerings and the continued good demand from local butchers and packers for supplies for winter requirements.

A Letter From India.

Strangely-constructed letters of strange diction are common enough. Sometimes it is by sheer ridiculousness that they entertain. The original of the following was recently received from India by a Liverpool shipping firm:

"Most Honored Sir,—Understanding that there are several hands wanted in your honors' department, I beg to offer my hand as to adjustment. I appeared for the Matric. Exam. in Octy, but failed, the reason for which I shall describe, to begin with my writing was illegible this was due to climatic reason, for having come from warm to a cold climate found my fingers stiff and very disobedient to my wishes. Father I had received great shock to my mental system in the shape of the death of my only fond brother, besides most honored Sir I beg to state that I am in very incomfortable circumstances being the soul means of support of my fond brother's [illegible] issues consisting of three adults and four females, the latter being the bain of my existence, [illegible] my own wives as well as their issues, of which by God's misfortune the feminine gender predominates. If by wonderful good fortune the few humble lines meat with your benign kindness and favorable turn of mind, I the poor menial shall ever pray for the long life and prosperity of yourself, as well as your Honor's posthumous olive branches."

Audience Crazy.

Ham—Gee, but our audience was mad last night!

Let—Sore, eh?

Ham—Naw. We played at the insane asylum.—Stanford Chaparral.

In Condition.

"I don't feel quite well, doctor. Do you think I could go to a coffee party this afternoon?"

"Certainly, miss. Your tongue is all right."—Fliegende Blatter.

ANYTHING BUT SAVAGE

THE MAORI WOMEN ARE AN ORNAMENT TO THEIR RACE.

Remarkable Aboriginal People of New Zealand Have Attained a High State of Civilization and Their Girls Are Coquettish Dressers In Their Own Styles—Tattooing Dying Out

Despite the popularity deservedly earned by New Zealand within the past few years, the tributes paid to her Administration, her adoption of drastic social and political reforms, her disposition to divert from the well-worn paths of other and older lands and adventure in speculative policies, or, as has been laid to her charge, of stepping in "where angels fear to tread," little has been learned outside the Dominion of the life and life-work of the Maori woman. This is not as it should be, for she is not only an ornament to her race and highly interesting personality, but is also prodigally endowed by Providence with an intelligence and perspicacity of a very high order. She has as truly emanated from her former state of savagery as her male companion. It is true that the tattooed chin and underlip may still be seen among some women, but it is [illegible] pressant [illegible] ing of the hideous practice of tattooing as a lost art. The young women, imbued rightly, with a high regard for their personal appearance and undoubted attractions, scorn to mar for life, that distinctive facial beauty which counts for so much in their sex in every civilized land.

The Maori belles, possessed of a considerable amount of coquetry, blended with an inherent modesty, know full well the chic effect produced by the hula feather, as a hirsute adornment, with the result that its usage is almost universal. Their love of dress is nothing more than the prerogative of their sex, but their affection for colors which might be termed gaudy, is somewhat reminiscent of other days, but lends to their dusky beauty a peculiar charm. In their own way the Maori women may be considered every whit as attractive as the men, and their intellectuality of an equally high order. The forms of the women are the envy of many of their white prototypes, and among them there are very many who might be considered models in respect to shape and proportions. It would be almost impossible to give a correct delineation of their features on account of the varied character they present in different individuals. Their lips are not often of a thick or negro form, and although the noses are in general rounded at the end, this rule is not universal, many having genuine Roman noses, and a full set of refined features. In color, they are lighter than most South Sea Islanders, many of them being but little darker than the much-admired women of Italy and Spain. In the matter of hair—together with the women of the Tongan Islands—they are more akin to Europeans, their heads being clothed with a luxurious growth of true hair, sometimes quite straight, but usually with a bewitching wave or undulation approaching to a curl, but never arriving at the condition of "crisp."

For gracefulness, there are few sights to equal the charming "poi" dance and action songs of the Maroi women. There is before us a vision of brown, rounded arms swinging the elastic raupo balls from side to side, twirling them cleverly in the air, striking them in regular measure on their head and shoulders and bosom, and swaying their bodies easily from side to side throughout [illegible] practiced eye can follow them. It is a picture pulsating with savage poetry, and semi-barbaric life—a vision of gleaming black eyes, dancing feathers, tossing tresses of the night, lithe limbs moving with one accord, and the air full of deftly-juggled balls, and wild with a high and liquid chant. The old, old race feeling possesses them—they are back on the old, old paths—they are once more beneath their ancestral palm groves on some Polynesian atoll "at the gateways of the day," where their Eve-like girls and women dance the Venus dance by the light of the round tropic moon. No pale-face mummers, no pakeha corps de ballet hold one in such thrall as does this poi of the brown villagers of Whakaewarewa or Ohinemutu.

The magnificent physique and splendid physical proportions of the New Zealand Maroi are to be seen at their best at a native war-dance, or haka, such as may be frequently seen at Rotorua. The dancers usually strip to the waist in the fighting costume of the Maroi, their bare brown skins and limbs a mass of rich brown color. A large cloak is worn on such occasions, toga fashion, the right arm free, the better to grasp the weapon. Their faces are daubed with blue and black warpaint, their heads circled with handkerchiefs for the purpose of keeping in position the invariable feathered head decorations, for without a prodigal display of feathers, much of the [illegible] spirit of the proceedings would be lost. At a signal from the [illegible] leader, the [illegible] of a long line of [illegible] heroes, the Tuwharetoa, who have been crouching in a listening attitude, silent as statues, spring into [illegible] savage life. A leap into the air of some three or four feet is followed by a thunderous thud as two hundred and forty feet land on the sounding soil. With another leap, like so many deer, the leader shouts the opening line of the song, "[illegible]," an ancient chant, which makes a splendid accompaniment to these dances. With eyes glaring and tewhatewas raised and lowered in lightning-like [illegible] follows the "Weku-weku-wesu [illegible]" and the barking [illegible] of the wild peruperu their [illegible] have danced many a time in deadly earnest.

In packing away summer clothes be sure to let them be put away rough dry. If they are starched there will be great danger of their cracking when next brought out to use.

By MARVIN DANA

FROM THE PLAY OF

BAYARD VEILLER

"Yes," she went on quietly, "that's all there is to it. Give them a living chance to get enough food to eat and a decent room to sleep in and shoes that will keep their feet off the pavement winter mornings. Do you think that any girl wants to steal? Do you think that any girl wants to risk"—

By this time, however, Gilder had regained his power of speech, and he interrupted stormily:

"And is this what you have taken up my time for? You want to make a maudlin plea for guilty, dishonest girls, when I thought you really meant to bring me facts!"

"We work nine hours a day," the girl's quiet voice went on, a curious pathos in the rich timbre of it, "nine hours a day for six days in the week. That's a fact, isn't it? And the trouble is an honest girl can't live on $6 a week. She can't do it and buy food and clothes and pay room rent and carfare. That's another fact, isn't it?"

Mary regarded the owner of the store with grave questioning in her violet eyes.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts. When they first locked me up I used to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course!"

"And then I thought that perhaps you did not understand—that, if I were to tell you how things really are, it might be you would change them somehow."

"I!" he cried incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to!"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course, you don't. Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over the two burner gas stove and our own washing and ironing evenings, after being on our feet for nine hours."

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated. [illegible] coldly. "Please answer me. Have you? Of course not," she said, after a little pause during which the owner had remained silent. She shook her head in emphatic negation. "And do you understand why? It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down—loafing, you know! So she would be discharged. All it amounts to is that after being on her feet for nine hours the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired, it don't make much difference which you are."

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store? That was the excuse for your coming here. And instead of telling me something you rant about gas stoves and car fare."

CHAPTER IV.

Inferno.

THE inexorable voice went on in its monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And when you are really sick and have to stop work what are you going to do then? Do you know, Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals it's often because she had to have a doctor—or some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that"—

"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke the anger provoked by this unexpected assault on him out of the mouth of a convict flamed high in virtuous repudiation. "Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girls their fine rest rooms upstairs? I did! Who gave them the cheap lunchrooms? I did!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!"

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated sullenly.

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!"

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

"I wasn't forced to steal," came the answer, spoken in the monotone that had marked her utterance throughout most of the interview. "I wasn't forced to steal, and I didn't steal. But, all the same, that's the plea, as you call it, that I'm making for the other girls. There are hundreds of them who steal because they don't get enough to eat. I said I would tell you how to stop the stealing. Well, I have done it. Give the girls a fair chance to be honest. You asked me for the names, Mr. Gilder. There's only one name on which to put the blame for the whole business, and that name is Edward Gilder! Now, won't you do something about it?"

At that naked question the owner of the store jumped up from his chair and stood glowering at the girl who risked a request so full of vituperation against himself.

"How dare you speak to me like this?" he thundered.

"Why, I dared," Mary Turner explained, "because you have done all the harm you can to me. And now I'm trying to give you the chance to do better by the others. You ask me why I dare. I have a right to dare. I have been straight all my life. I have wanted decent food and warm clothes and—a little happiness all the time I have worked for you, and I have gone without those things just to stay straight. The end of it all is, you are sending me to prison for something I didn't do. That's why I dare!"

Gilder could not trust himself just then to an audible command. He was seriously disturbed by the gently spoken truths that had issued from the girl's lips. He was not prepared with any answer, though he hotly resented every word of her accusation.

Cassidy faced about, and in his movement there was a tug at the wrist of the girl that set her moving toward the door. Her [illegible] meant was shown in [illegible] in a level voice. "When I come out

"Won't you do something about it?"

you are going to pay for every minute of them, Mr. Gilder. There won't be a day or an hour that I won't remember that at the last it was your word sent me to prison. And you are going to pay me for that. You are going to pay me for the five years I have starved making money for you—that too! You are going to pay me for all the things I am losing today, and"—

The girl thrust forth her left hand, on that side where stood the officer. So vigorous was her movement that Cassidy's clasp was thrown off the wrist. But the bond between the two was not broken, for from wrist to wrist showed taut the steel chain of the manacles. The girl shook the links of the handcuffs in a gesture stronger than words.

"You are going to pay me for this!" she said. Her voice was little more than a whisper, but it was loud in the listener's heart. "Yes, you are going to pay—for this!"

* * * * * * *

They were grim years, those three years during which Mary Turner served her sentence in Bornsing. There was no time off for good behavior. The girl learned soon that the favor of those set in authority over her could only be won at a cost against which her every maidenly instinct revolted. So she went through the inferno of days and nights in a dreariness of suffering that was deadly. Naturally the life there was altogether an evil thing. There was the material ill ever present in the round of wearisome physical toil—the coarse, distasteful food; the hard narrow couch; the constant, gnawing irksomeness of imprisonment, away from light and air, away from all that makes life worth while.

The best evidence of the fact that Mary Turner's soul was not fatally soiled must be found in the fact that still at the expiration of her sentence she was fully resolved to live straight, as the saying is which she had quoted to Gilder. This, too, in the face of sure knowledge as to the difficulties that would beset the effort and in the face of the temptations offered to follow an easier path.

There was, for example, Aggie Lynch, a fellow convict, with whom she had a slight degree of acquaintance, nothing more. This young woman, a criminal by training, offered allurements of illegitimate employment in the outer world when they should be free. Mary endured the companionship with this prisoner because a sixth sense proclaimed the fact that here was one unmoral rather than immoral, and the difference is mighty.

For that reason Aggie Lynch was not actively offensive, as were most of the others. She was a dainty little blond, with a baby face, in which were set two light blue eyes of a sort to widen often in demure wonder over most things in a surprising and naughty world. She had been convicted of blackmail, and she made no pretense even of innocence. Instead, she was inclined to boast over her ability to [illegible] actions of the [illegible] beguile the heart of the wisest of worldly men.

She had been reared in a criminal family, which must excuse much. Long ago she had lost track of her father. Her mother she had never known. Her one relation was a brother of high standing as a pickpocket. One principal reason of her success in leading on men to make fools of themselves over her, to their everlasting regret afterward, lay in the fact that in spite of all the gross irregularities of her life she remained chaste.

The girl saw in Mary Turner the possibilities of a ladylike personality that might mean much financial profit in the devious ways of which she was a mistress. With the frankness characteristic of her, she proceeded to paint glowing pictures of a future shared to the undoing of ardent and fatuous swains. Mary Turner listened with curiosity, but she was in no wise moved to follow such a life, even though it did not necessitate anything worse than a fraudulent playing at love. So, she steadfastly continued her refusals. She would live straight.

"You will find that you are up against an awful frost," Aggie would declare brutally.

Mary found the prophecy true. Back in New York she experienced a poverty more ravaging than any she had known in those five lean years of her working in the store. She had been absolutely penniless for two days, and without food through the gnawing hours, when she found employment in a milliner's shop. Followed a blessed interval in which she worked contentedly, happy over the meager stipend, since it served to give her shelter and food honestly earned.

The police informed Mary's employer concerning her record as a convict, and she was at once discharged. The unfortunate victim of the law came perilously close to despair then. Yet her spirit triumphed, and again she persevered in that resolve to live straight. She found a cheap position in a cheap shop, only to be again persecuted by the police, so that she speedily lost the place.

A third time she obtained work and there, after a little, she told her employer, a candy manufacturer in a small way, the truth as to her having been in prison. The man had a kindly heart and he ran little risk, so he allowed her to remain. When the police called his attention to the girl's criminal record he paid no heed to their advice against retaining her services. The police brought pressure to bear on the man. They even called in the assistance of Edward Gilder himself, who obligingly wrote a very severe letter to the girl's employer. In the end, though unwillingly enough, he dismissed Mary from his service.

It was then that despair did come upon the girl. She had tried with all the strength of her to live straight. Yet, despite her innocence, the world would not let her live according to her own conscience. It demanded that she be the criminal it had branded her—if she were to live at all. She still walked the streets falteringly, seeking some place, but her heart was gone from the quest. Came an hour when she thought of the river and was glad.

So she went through the long stretch of ill lighted streets, crossed some railroad tracks to a pier, over which she hurried to the far end, where it projected out to the fiercer currents of the Hudson. There, without giving herself a moment's pause for reflection or hesitation, she leaped out as far as her strength permitted into the coil of waters. But in that final second natural terror in the face of death overcame the lethargy of despair—a shriek burst from her lips.

On the side of the pier a man had just tied up a motorboat. He stood up in alarm at the cry and was just in time to gain a glimpse of a white face under the dim moonlight as it swept down with the tide, two rods beyond him. He threw off his coat and sprang far out after the drifting body. He came to it in a few furious strokes and caught it.

Then began the savage struggle to save her and himself. The currents tore at him wrathfully, but he fought against them with all the fierceness of his nature. What saved the two of them was the violent temper of the man. Always it had been the demon to set him aflame. His rage mounted and gave him new power in the battle. Under the urge of it he conquered and at last brought himself and his charge to the shore.

Mary revived to clear consciousness, which was at first inclined toward hysteria, but this phase yielded soon under the sympathetic ministrations of the man. His rather low voice was soothing to her tired soul, and his whole air was at once masterful and gently tender. When finally she was [illegible] she went forward [illegible] as a question of [illegible].

Joe Garson had performed, perhaps, his first action with no thought of self at the back of it. He had risked his life to save that of a stranger. The sensation was at once novel and thrilling. Since it was so agreeable he meant to prolong the glow of self satisfaction by continuing to care for this waif of the river.

MAGNETITE ARC LAMPS

Some Points About Type of Lights to be Used With Hydro System

A very large gathering attended the lecture on Magnetite Arc Lighting by Mr. L. W. Burpee, Consulting Engineer of the Canadian General Electric Company, Toronto, held last evening in the lecture hall of St. Andrew's Church. The lecture was of the most interesting nature as the type of lamp in question is the one that will be used in the new light-system for this city. Therefore the lecture was a most timely one, and a large and representative audience was present.

After the lecture, which was held under the auspices of the Technical Society of Peterborough, refreshments were served by the Society.

Mr. Burpee described the various lights by the means of slides thrown on the screen and also by drawings. Mr. N. C. Mills, president of the Society, presided.

In describing the lamp which will be used in this city, the speaker described it as a 6.6 Magnetite lamp which has an energy consumption greater than that of the open arc lamp which has an hemispherical candle power of 1,328, with an efficiency of 530 watts. It gives the same illumination at 510 feet that the open arc gives at 255 feet.

For some years back there has been a strong tendency toward ornamental lighting especially in congested thoroughfares and on residential streets and parks.

After experiments the Magnetite lamp has, within the last two years, been adapted to ornamental lighting by re-designing the case and converting it into an inverted form for pole use, or bracket mounting.

These forms of lighting for the Great White Way, residential and other kinds were then described by the speaker. The beautiful white pearl light contrasts pleasingly with the comparatively red light of the incandescent lamps used in stores and shop windows and advertising signs.

Mr. Burpee then showed the curve of the Great White Way lamp with data and in tabulated form, as designed on a medium alabaster globe. It could be seen from the plans that the illumination obtained from the equal expenditure of energy in the two forms of lighting is about three to one in favor of the ornamental lamp, with the further advantage in the latter, that of one globe requiring attention and replacing, compared with five of the Tungsten cluster. To get the same intensity of illumination as obtained by arc lighting, it would be necessary to place the ornamental Tungsten cluster standards much closer together thus increasing the cost of not only the original installation but also of the maintenance and operation.

The residential type is mounted on an ornamental standard of such a height that the arc will be fifteen feet above the pavement. This form of a lamp makes it possible to obtain good illumination on residential streets.

The Black and the White Lamps [illegible] with internal [illegible] globe such as used in the pendant lamp. Automobiles and pedestrians can be discerned [illegible] greatest of ease. Although this lamp is ordinarily developed for a four ampere, it is possible to furnish it with a 6.6 ampere winding if greater illumination is desired.

Many lamps are exceeding the average life guaranteed, by as high as 100 and 500 per cent. The highest average at present is on tubes in operation at Reading, the outfits being 75 light, 4 ampere, 60 cycle, two tubes in series on transformers operating on 13,300 volts.

The average of the tubes in service at the last report was 7,000 hours. The longest life recorded for a tube is 16,000 hours.

ROMANCE OF A PICTURE.

Trophy Gained by Britain In Battle Restored To Russia.

The recent visit of the Russian fleet to Portland was marked by a curious incident, as the outcome of which Admiral von Essen, the Russian commander, says Reuter, is carrying back with him a venerated ikon (sacred image or picture) of St. Alexander Nevsky, the patron saint of St. Petersburg, which has been in England nearly sixty years. The ikon, moreover, is going back to Russia through the action of a Russian political refugee, a leading Radical member of the first Duma.

This ikon belonged to the chapel of the garrison of Bermansund, a fort on one of the Aland Islands, in the Baltic, stormed by the united English and French forces on Aug. 28, 1854. It fell into English hands, was brought to England, changed owners several times, found its way into the shop of a Southampton firm of picture-dealers, was bought by a customer as a fine specimen of Russian ecclesiastical painting, and, finally fell into the hands of M. Aladin, who emigrated to England, after the sudden closure of the first Russian Parliament, and is now living at Portsmouth.

Admiral von Essen was rather astonished when he received at Portland a letter from M. Aladin, informing him that the ikon was in his possession, and that he wished to present it to the admiral "as an offering to the flagship Rurik, to be returned to its native land." The letter was written in English, not in Russian.

The Russian admiral felt himself in a position of some embarrassment. How could he enter into official communication with a political refugee? The difficulty was got over by a despatch to Portsmouth of an officer in mufti, who came back with the ikon which had been duly handed over to him.

The painting, which is on canvas, represents a handsome young warrior in an attitude of prayer with eyes uplifted. There is no signature and the only indication of its history on the picture itself is a much-faded pencilled inscription on the back, "Taken at Bermansund, 1854."

Mark Twain Liked Girls.

Mark Twain, although the creator of the most lovable boy in literature, Tom Sawyer, was really more interested in little girls, and it was through his interest and affection for my little daughter Helen that we came to know him so well and to share the last months of his life. He used to pretend that only girls were interesting, that boys ought not to exist until they were men. The fact was, he really was interested in any young creature. In one of the books he gave Helen he wrote "It is better to be a young June beetle than an old bird of paradise."—Marion Schuyler Allen in Strand Magazine.

CONFERENCES ON MISSIONARY PROBLEM BEING HELD TO-DAY

Arrangements for The Banquet at Market Hall This Evening

A goodly number of laymen assembled at 10.30 this morning in the Murray Street Baptist church, for the first session of the Conference of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. There were men from every department of city and country life, from the mart and the workshop, from the plow and the office, all were represented in this truly democratic gathering; they were met in one place and with one purpose, to show their lively interest in practical religion, and the extension of the Kingdom of God.

Rev. R. G. Peever opened the conference by conducting a prayer service, in which many of the laymen and pastors joined.

THE FOREIGN WORK

Mr. J. A. Aylmer presided, and called upon Mr. J. Cuthbertson, superintendent of the Japan Branch International Police Association, who gave a graphic account of the experiences of the missionary in Japan. He pleaded for the obliteration of denominational differences, which were a stumbling block to the acceptance of the Gospel by the heathen.

Buddhism in Japan is a gaudy decorated corpse; there was something good and noble in Buddhism, but the way in which it has worked out it keeps the people in a spirit of fear. They will go for miles on their bended knees, and pour oil into the palms of their hand and let it burn to mortify the flesh in penance. They have no sense of the forgiveness of sin. Shintoism is another religion which is full of superstition and cruelty, the brightest ideal is suicide, which was exemplified in the recent suicide of Admiral Togo which stirred the Japanese to great enthusiasm.

MISSIONARY ATMOSPHERE

Rev. Walter Daniel, Toronto, gave an address on "the Development of a Missionary Atmosphere." When God created the world he made an atmosphere, and it is necessary for life to-day. The atmosphere might be impure. There is an atmosphere which creates business. The atmosphere of indifference, or of hostility, or adverse criticism. There are people who hold that it is a pity to disturb these heathen people. If this spirit prevailed, we would have no missionaries and no pastor at all.

God swathed this world with an atmosphere. He has created an atmosphere for his churches. We will have to go back to the beginning of things.

The Kingdom of God is not a democracy, it is a Monarchy, an absolute Monarchy. Those early missionaries went out under orders; they had to go. "Go ye into all the world." [illegible] the Sovereignty of [illegible]

There [illegible] of ignorance among certain people as to the work that is going on in the missionary world. Intelligence will dispel this ignorance. A man once said to me: "Why should I do anything for missions? What have missions ever done for me?" I chased him back to the Druid of Great Britain. How did we get the Gospel; did we climb to the heavens to get it? No, it was brought to us. Some people think the first missionaries were English, Scotch and Irishmen.

The atmosphere which should surround us is, love, sincerity and devotion; given these and you will have the cheerful giver, the earnest intercessor, and the diligent worker.

The Conference was then thrown open to discussion. Mr. Rose, of Toronto, led by appealing for the organization of special campaigns among church members.

Mr. Davidson said that to produce the atmosphere we need thought and inspiration Godward. Mr. Peever asked what prevents the spiritual atmosphere. Mr. Gregory, of Lakefield, said that the home has the creating of this atmosphere in its hands.

Mr. Gowan said that too many of our churches have no definite aim. Each church should make up its mind to send a missionary to the foreign field.

Mr. Priest said that each church should have a roll of missionaries sent out with a blank space at the bottom with the words, "Who is next?"

Rev. Mr. Mansell spoke of the many young ladies and men whom he had sent out from the various churches he had administered, and he hoped that before his time was up at Charlotte Street he would have the joy of sending another out to the work.

Mr. Aylmer, the chairman, said we ought to carry our missionary atmosphere into our daily lives.

Rev. F. J. Sawers closed the session with prayer.

Between the afternoon and evening sessions a new feature will be introduced which has not been tried in connection with any of the conferences held elsewhere. The delegates representing the different denominations will meet in separate rooms according to denominations and hold denominational conferences. These will be under the chairmanship of Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. J. Rollins, Rev. J. R. Webb and Rev. R. G. Peever. These conferences will last until about a quarter to seven when the delegates will unite and march in a body to the Market Hall where the big banquet is to be held.

THE BANQUET.

The Banquet Committee under the chairmanship of Mr. R. F. Downey, is making arrangements to seat 850 at the tables as it now seems likely that the original estimate of 800 will be exceeded. The chairman at the banquet will be Judge Huycke. Young ladies from the different churches of the city under the direction of Mr. C. S. Thompson, will assist in waiting on the tables. The committee is anxious that any people who have any tickets unsold shall report them to their pastors as quickly as possible so that they may be placed in the hands of other parties who otherwise may not be able to attend.

The devotional exercises at the banquet will be under the direction of Rev. R. B. Grobb. The speakers will be Rev. J. Y. Ferguson, of Formosa, Rev. J. A. Arnup, Toronto, [illegible] Judge of the Court of Appeals, Toronto. The Salvation Army Band will be in attendance in uniform and assist in the musical features of the program. The speaking will commence about 8 o'clock. Any men who have been unsuccessful in obtaining tickets and who would like to hear the speeches may do so free of cost up to the limit of the accommodation of the hall if willing to stand around the walls. It is claimed that this Missionary Movement is doing more than armies and navies to extend peace throughout the world and that its world wide importance therefore cannot be over estimated.

COULDN'T SING HIM TO SLEEP

Serenade by Feline Colony Not Appreciated

Last night some members of the feline family near the corner of Sherbrooke and Reid streets, held an at home, and the result was that some neighbors were swindled out of their lawful sleep. One of these unfortunate persons remarked to the Review this morning that the only remedy he knew of was a double barrelled shot gun.

ELEPHANTS IN A TEMPER.

When Enraged They Are Apt to Tear Their Victims to Pieces.

An elephant uses several original and effective methods of exterminating its victims. It may rush upon a man, seize him in its trunk, beat him to death on the ground and before leaving tear up the foliage for yards about.

There are many instances of elephants literally tearing their victims to pieces. The story is told of an English official in Uganda who on noticing a "safari" passing stepped to the door to inquire of the head man the whereabouts of his master. In response the black swung a human arm before the official and replied that a few days previous his master had been torn to pieces by an elephant and that he had brought back the arm in proof of his assertion.

Then again after knocking a man down an elephant will often continue on its course without stopping to learn how much damage it has done. A hunter who was within close proximity of a herd of elephants handed his rifle to the gun bearer and started to climb a tree to look about. At that moment an elephant charged from the tall grass and made for the gun bearer. As the man started to run he threw up his arms, and in some manner the elephant in reaching for him snatched the rifle from his hand and stopped to hammer it on the ground, while the black made good his escape.—J. Alden Loring in Outing.

A Stenciling Hint.

Few people realize that scrim curtains should always be stenciled on the wrong side. These curtains, done in the pale roses, blues or greens, add considerably to the beauty of a bedroom, and the ones done in the darker tones are quite suitable for living rooms. However, when they are done on the right side and hung at a window [illegible] design, while if the stenciled side is [illegible] the window the light shining through the curtains gives the effect of having been stenciled on both sides. Many people use the scrim curtains for boudoir of bedroom during the entire winter.

QUEER GREETINGS.

Tribes That Spit Upon or Weep Over Their Visitors.

Among the Masai and Ukerewe it is a mark of respect to greet an acquaintance or a stranger by spitting at him. Almost as strange is the custom ascribed to the Tibetans of sticking out the tongue by way of salutation. Rubbing noses is quite common; the Burmese and many tribes of Eskimos, Laplanders and Malays do so.

Stranger than any of these customs is the weeping salutation that has been observed among central South American Indians. This form of greeting occurs, too, in the Andaman islands, New Zealand and Polynesia. A Portuguese explorer describes the custom as he saw it used among a tribe of South American Indians:

"Whenever a guest enters a hut he is immediately honored and made welcome by being wept over. Without a word being spoken he is led to the hammock. As soon as he is seated the hostess and her daughters and any of their girl friends who happen to be in the house at the time come and sit about the guest, touch him lightly with their fingers and commence to weep loudly and to shed many tears. During this ceremony, in a sort of connected discourse, they recite everything that has happened to them recently and talk of the hardships of the road that the visitor has suffered and of anything and everything that can arouse compassion and tears. The guest, his hand before his face, pretends to weep and does not speak until the crying has gone on for some time. Then they all wipe away their tears and become as lively and merry as if they had never cried in all their lives."—Exchange.

English Words In German.

Like the word "sport" and many other English words for which the German language has no adequate terms, the word "strike" has become one of common usage in Germany. "Start, finish, mutiny, trick, snob, smart, partner, detective, picnic, film, handicap and hundreds of other words," says a letter on the subject, "are used in their original form, with not a letter changed. Panic has been made into 'panik' and check into 'scheck,' record as 'rekord' when the German uses the word, and strike, in order to preserve the proper pronunciation, is written 'streik.' These words look English enough when you see them printed, but when you hear them you involuntarily think of the 'English spoken here' signs."—New York Tribune.

CHILDREN'S HOUR SUCCESS AT THE LIBRARY

Large Attendance of Youngsters at First Meeting

At a meeting of the Public Library Board last night, a letter from Mr. L. J. Pettit was received advising the Board that Mr. J. H. Firth had been appointed to represent the Teachers' Institute on the Public Library Board for the ensuing year.

NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17 the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. [illegible] a return ticket will be issued for single fare plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the province, except the territory west of Azilda on the C.P.R. round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held in Canada. Poultry entries number over 3,000, with pigeons canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650. While flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production.

A woman frequently changes her mind but the quality remains much the same.

Woman's World

Miss Benton First Dining Car Conductor.

MISS CAROLYN MARIA BENTON.

Shuttling back and forth in a rail road train, keeping passengers in good humor and advising the traveler ignorant as to what to eat while a train is running sixty miles an hour, Miss Carolyn Maria Benton of Cincinnati, the first woman dining car conductor in America, happily earns her daily bread. She likes the work.

Miss Benton, who directs the buffet car which is operated by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railway between Cincinnati and Dayton, was put in the place as an experiment. Now she is a fixture, and the railroad is looking for more efficient young women who can run diners.

"It means application, attention, tact and diplomacy to run a dining car," said Miss Benton. "I do not believe there will be many women dining car conductors. They cannot stand the work. There is too much rush, and the constant traveling is hard on the nerves. Men stand the work better, but I don't think they can do the work better than a woman.

"Every morning I start at 11 o'clock for Dayton. In the evening I make the return trip. I serve luncheon on the morning train and supper at night. No, it's just supper. You see, this is a buffet car, not a regular diner, and we don't have the same facilities for cooking large quantities.

"I have all my evenings at home, and I do not believe I am nearly as tired even with the shaking of the train, as I would be if I worked in an office or factory."

For Serving Ice Cream.

There are modes even in the serving of ice cream. At present macaroon baskets, wafer boxes and a disguising covering of lady cake are among the most popular ways of serving this always acceptable dessert.

To make macaroon baskets dip the outer edges of five almond macaroons in the sirup obtained from melted granulated sugar. The first macaroon is used for the bottom of the basket and the others are stuck together [illegible] upon it gravely like the bur baskets we used to make when we were children. Fill this receptacle with ice cream and sprinkle ground macaroons on top.

Wafer boxes are put together in exactly the same way. Square wafers are the most desirable, two being used for the bottom and one at each end, standing upright. The ice cream should be cut into blocks that fit into the frame. Pink and white ice cream, garnished with cherries, makes an attractive color combination.

A novel way to serve brick ice cream is to cover the sides and ends of the brick with thick slices of lady cake. Cut the cream as usual. Each slice will have a frame of cake, contrasting prettily with the colors of the cream.

For the Schoolgirl.

To make a dress wear longer and look neater while it lasts pretty collar and cuff sets in white or pale toned linens prettily trimmed with lace are a wise investment for the small girl, as they are easily laundered. They should be made in various shapes and sizes.

Sandpaper Baby's Shoes.

Always sandpaper the soles of baby's new shoes before they have been worn. This keeps her from slipping on the bare or polished floors and prevents many a bad fall, which could easily result in a sprain or [illegible].

FRUIT AND LINEN

Many Contributions for the Protestant Home

The fruit and linen shower held at the Protestant Home yesterday afternoon proved to be a most enjoyable success. The Directors and Superintendent report a most generous response, and as a result the Home is the richer by some 150 jars of fruit, and many gifts of linen, such as table cloths, a web of linen, towels, sheets, and numerous articles used in the up-keep of the Home. The matron of the Home desires to thank the many citizens who so kindly responded.

A donation was received from Richard Hall and Son.

$3100 TO BE SPENT ON COUNTY ROADS

Belmont and Methuen Council at their last meeting introduced a by-law to expend $1550 on roads and bridges for 1914. As the Legislature duplicates the amount under by-law it means $3100 will be spent this year.

The largest steel ingot ever cast was recently produced in England. It weighed 150 tons, was 23 1-2 feet long and 80 inches wide.

PASSING OF REV. J.H. ROBINSON

Was Born in Smith Township and Educated in This City

The Hamilton Spectator has the following reference to the life of the late Rev. J. H. Robinson, whose death at Arthur, Ont., was reported in Wednesday's issue of the Review.

The funeral will be held at Oakville on Friday afternoon, and Mr. T. W. Robinson, Weller street, who is a brother will attend the obsequies.

John Howson Robinson was born in the township of Smith, near Peterboro, and was of English descent. His mother, Frances Howson was a saintly woman, who died when he was nine years of age, but her teaching and example shaped his life. His father was a devout man, and an official in the Wesleyan Methodist Church for years. He entered the ministry when he was twenty years of age, and was ordained in Toronto by Rev. W. Morley Punshon at the conference in 1870. He received his education at the Peterboro High School and Toronto University. As a pastor he was faithful in the discharge of his duties, and was an earnest evangelical preacher. He took an active part in the work of the Sunday school, the Epworth League and the temperance movement. He was a careful man of good judgment and deep sympathy and made many friends wherever he was known.

Deceased was an ex-president of the Hamilton Conference and also served as chairman of district and was elected delegate to the general conference in 1903. During his pastoral work he was located at Bobcaygeon, Minden, Oakville, Streetsville, Tavernay, Markdale, Scarboro Merriton, Grimsby, Trafalgar, Stamford and St. Davids, Hagersville, Simcoe, Tillsonburg, Emerald street, Hamilton, Norwich and Simcoe street Hamilton. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Calhem of Oakville, three daughters, Mrs. Edward Brocklebank, of Arthur; Mrs. George Symons of Oakville, and Mrs. Gilvert Dunkin of Norwich; and one son, Catham, in the west.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Snoring.

Snoring during sleep is generally an evidence of some obstruction in the nasal passages. Possibly the person is suffering from adenoids or thickening of the nasal mucous membranes, and, if so, he should consult his family physician. If it is a mere habit and there is no sign of obstruction of any kind, then bandaging of the mouth will sometimes bring about a cure. Apply the bandage sufficiently snug to prevent the air from getting into the mouth. Bandage the same as you would for a broken jaw, taking pains to close the mouth.

NOT A TWINGE OF RHEUMATISM
RHEUMA

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years; tried different doctors, with no relief. I saw your advertisement and decided to try RHEUMA. I have taken three bottles and am entirely free from the disease. I was so bad I could not sleep nights, now I sleep well, and my kidneys work perfectly."— P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Pa.

"For 14 months I was so badly afflicted with Rheumatism that much of the time I was obliged to use a cane. I used one bottle of RHEUMA and THE CANE IS IN THE CORNER NOW. No one could be happier to be rid of the pain, swollen knees and badly swollen ankles. I certainly believe there is no remedy for the disease like RHEUMA."— Mrs Daniel S. Knox, Severance, N.Y., Aug. 8, 1912.

The Warne Drug Company guarantee RHEUMA to cure rheumatism Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Chronic Neuralgia and Kidney disease or money back— and only 50 cents a bottle.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

TO BENEFIT OTHER SUFFERERS

You May Publish My Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. Jones is proud to acknowledge the great debt of gratitude he owes "Fruit-a-tives". He is glad to have his letter published in order that other sufferers may be induced to try these wonderful tablets made of fruit juices.

SARNIA, ONT., FEB. 5th. 1911

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement for "Fruit-a-tives" I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends, and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly"

FIGHTING A FIRE IN IRKUTSK

A Comedy of Flaming Torches and Empty Water Wagons.

They fight fires in a peculiar way in Siberia. First you find the fire. The city is plotted into districts, each with its engine house and watchtower. On the watchtower by day and night stands a guard who scans the house tops for a sign of smoke. When the fire has got enough headway for him to see the smoke he gives the alarm and the engines dash out. The spectator is amused, not so much at the fire as at the engines. They are primitive and the use of them is more so.

We went to a fire one Sunday afternoon in Irkutsk, continues Mr. Richardson L. Wright in his book "Through Siberia." It was close to our hotel, so that we had an excellent view. First came a troika team that dragged a hook and ladder carriage. On the carriage clung the firemen, howling Cossacks with brass helmets jammed down over their ears, who carried in one hand—how the symbolism would have stirred the heart of Maeterlinck!—flaming torches. Behind the hook and ladder was the hosecart, and then came a hand engine of the type our grandfathers used to drag to fires. After that, for two blocks, trailed a queue of water filled hogsheads on wheels. The cavalcade passed us in a cloud of dust, accompanied by the yells of the torch bearing firemen. When the supply of water ran out the carts dashed down to the river and were replenished.

This crude high pressure service gave rise once to a rather humorous incident that the Irkutskians tell with great glee. During a fire several years ago a string of water wagons went down to the river, were filled and came rumbling back. When they reached the fire the water was gone. The enthusiastic captain of hogsheads had neglected to put back the plugs in the barrels [illegible] spilled the supply [illegible] several blocks along the main street.

Couldn't Be Divided.

In Felix Moscheles' "Fragments of an Autobiography" occurs the following: Mme. Schumann was wanted to play at a little musical reunion, but she did not respond. Mr. Moscheles was deputed to approach her. "Was she inclined to play?"

"Particularly disinclined," was the discouraging response.

The envoy tried again and mentioned her husband's "Carnival." "One part I particularly love, the 'March of the Davidsbundler.' If I could only hear you play just that page or two!"

This roused her. "Page or two, indeed!" she cried. "Wenn man de 'Carnaval' spielt, spielt man ihn ganz." (When one plays the "Carnaval," one must play it all.) And she played the whole.

CITY OF ORATORS.

London of a Sunday Is Crowded With Public Speakers.

"London is a city of orators," writes Harry Furniss in The Windsor Magazine." There is more public speaking to the acre, especially on Sundays, in this city than in any other. To get the full benefit of this boon, go to Hyde Park on a fine Sunday. By selecting a location advantageously it is possible to listen simultaneously to lectures on Fruitarianism, Socialism and Christian Science, [illegible] valuable fragments of discourse on Esoteric Buddhism and Mormonism. A movement is on foot to establish a fund for providing Hyde Park orators with voice lozenges—a much needed charity. There is also another society for providing them with muzzles, but this by the way. Visitors to London who wish to orate themselves are at liberty to do so. Stand at a corner of a street talking in a large voice—it is immaterial what you talk about—and a crowd will soon gather round you and as long as you go on orating, nothing but a policeman or a collecting box will move them on."

On the subject of mammoth shops, he says: "There are several big buildings in London called stores or mammoth shops. The idea is to gather under one roof all that the heart of man—and man, in this instance, embraces woman—can desire. If they have a fault, they are too large. The other day I met my friend George, with his wife and son and heir; they were bound for a certain mammoth shop. By invitation I accompanied them. We entered, and left George, junior, in a room devoted to such encumbrances, and parted from Mrs. George, whose objective was gloves, while his was cigars. As they intended to buy a lamp-shade, a purchase needing joint selection, we arranged to meet in the lamp department. We parted lightly, little guessing [illegible] anticipate. George and I [illegible], and some time later tracked the cigar department to its lair. His purchase made, we strolled onwards, seeking lamps. This entailed using the lift for the third time, for, curiously enough, no two articles one wants are ever on the same floor. The lamp department took a deal of finding. Again and again, as we traversed department after department, we seemed to sight the promised land, but mirage like, it turned to Ironmongery or Haberdashery or Garden Requisites. It was like the story of Diogenes inverted, two (I trust) honest men seeking a lamp. At last, with the kind assistance of a page-boy, whom we commandeered as guide, we located it. We found ourselves in a wilderness of lamps. But not with the aid of all their radiance—for most of them were lighted—could we discern the familiar figure of Mrs. George. We inquired for her in vain. After waiting a little, we went for the gloves, or, rather to look for her. In brief, we picked up the trail in the glove department, some way between gloves and lamps. We heard of her in perfumery, just missed her in lamps, doubled back for gloves, missed her again. Went to fetch George, junior, but she had been before us. Hours passed. George's hair began to turn gray under the strain. We [illegible] of civilization—I mean, the stores—into activity, and so by this time [illegible] George, tired of being [illegible] floorwalkers and department managers were pressed into service. Telephones were used. But the impatience of husband and wife time and again spoiled everything. Suppose George, by telephone, was told his wife was in leather goods, and she was informed at the same time that we were in silverware, she immediately started to join him via jewelry, and he to meet her via games, and so again they lost each other. At last, by dint of much tact and diplomacy — for by this time she was hysterical and he homicidal — both were decoyed simultaneously into boots and shoes. It was a touching scene, like the last act of an old-fashioned melodrama. The three of us were so affected that we had to adjourn to linen and buy new pocket handkerchiefs. And, by the way, I don't think they ever bought that lampshade."

London's Smallest House.

London's smallest house, No. 10 Hyde street, visited by tourists from every part of the world, was recently put up at auction. It is built in the passage between No. 11 and 9, and has a street floor guarded by an iron gate leading on to Bayswater. There is, however, only one room in the house, and this is reached by a kind of ship's ladder, which runs up to it from the passage below. The house really goes with No. 9, but it was en[illegible] existence as a house and a number [illegible] street door by the then owner of the house next door, who built it in the early 70's for her maid to live in.

George III. In Politics.

If the Kings of England are precluded from voting, there have been kings who were by no means disinclined to make their influence felt at the time of a general election. George III., for instance. He was a Tory of the kind described by Macaulay as "stern and unbending," and Mr. G. W. E. Russell tells us that in 1780 he "personally canvassed the Borough of Windsor against the Whig candidate, Admiral Keppel, and propitiated a silk-mercer by calling at his shop and saying: 'The Queen wants a gown — wants a gown. No Keppel. No Keppel.'"

Forty-Five Years in the Army.

For meritorious service in the army the King has conferred a $50 annuity on Mr. David Yorke, of Chichester, Eng. Mr. Yorke, now 75 years of age, was associated with the army for forty-five years. He enlisted in 1859 in the East Indian Force, which became the 107th Regiment, and is now the 2nd Sussex. Promoted to color-sergeant in 1869, he served twenty-one years with the battalion. For the next twenty-four years he was on the permanent militia staff and in the regimental pay office at Chichester. Three of Mr. Yorke's sons are [illegible]

W. T. Little, of Carlisle, Eng., riding a motorcycle, recently succeeded in ascending to the top of Skiddaw. Mr. Little started off from Keswick about 12.30, and arrived at the top before two o'clock. He made three stoppages en route, two in order to pass through gates. On another occasion he hit a boulder and had to dismount, but the engine continued to run.

Dean Swift Dies Again.

In the process of expansion press telegrams often undergo a wonderful transformation, says Chambers' Journal. Some years ago the first three horses in the Lincoln handicap were Ob, Dean Swift and Roseate Dawn. A press agency in London wired the result to an Australian papers as follows: "Lincoln Ob Dean Swift Roseate Dawn." The sub-editor who was in charge had never heard of the Lincoln handicap, and for some time puzzled vainly over the mysterious message. Finally he came to the conclusion that "Ob" must stand for obit, the Latin word expressing [illegible] turned out the following paragraph, which duly appeared in print: "We deeply regret to announce the death at Lincoln of the celebrated Dean Swift, the author of that favorite hymn, 'The Roseate Hues of Early Dawn'."

CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES LOCAL BOYS WILL PLAY

On Saturday rugby games in the three rugby unions depend the championship.

If McGill defeats Varsity, the former takes the championship of the Intercollegiate; if Varsity wins the teams will be a tie. In this game two Peterboro boys, Pete Campbell and Dick Sheehy will figure.

If Argos beat Ottawa, the Big Four title will go to Hamilton and if Father Stanton's boys win they will be a tie with Hamilton. If Hamilton R.C. beat T.R. and A.A. the O.R.F.U. goes to Parkdale, and if the Toronto team wins they will be a tie with Parkdale. In this game Frank Heffernan will appear.

With so much importance attached to these games and Peterboro boys figuring in the battles, there will no doubt be a great deal of local interest displayed.

TRENTON STAR TO BE SEEN WITH MIDLAND SENIORS

Frank Heffernan May be Played at Rover For Champions

Clarence Doheny, the former St. Michael goalkeeper, has signed a conditional contract with the Wanderers. The latter have also secured Baker, the Sherbrooke centre player.

The McNamara brothers, who were the mainstay of the Tecumseh team last year, are getting into condition with a two weeks hunting trip in the north.

The new rink at Preston is now nearing completion. The ice area will be 185 by 80 and it is estimated that the seating capactiy will be about three thousand. The seats go right around the building, starting at the boards, in theatre style. The new rink will be brilliantly lighted with 250 lights, 14 feet apart.

Midland will again be in the senior O.H.A. this season and from reports from the north they have the championship as good as won. Armstrong, the crack Trenton player, is now situated in Midland, but it is common gossip that he does not qualify under the residence rule.

Manager Jimmy Murphy of the Ontarios will pass up Gaul and Smith, who were with the Tecumsehss last year; but will give Eddie Longfellow, the Toronto lacrosse player, a trial.

Frank Heffernan, the speedy T.R. and A.A. defence player last year will lickly be found at rover this seasson for the O.H.A. champions, thus giving them weight as well as speed.

ORATORICAL AND NERVY.

An Old Cobbler Who Won a Laugh and Favors From Napoleon.

On Napoleon's arrival at Mars-la-Tours the mayor, a farmer, tried in vain to make the speech he had prepared. Bowing and scraping, he stood fascinated by Bonaparte's scintilating black eyes—an unhappy squirrel in the gaze of the rattlesnake.

Close behind the trembling mayor stood an old shoemaker, in figure a true Don Quixote, clad in his working dress. "Why don't you speak, you fool?" he muttered from time to time to his leader. At last his patience gave way. He pushed the [illegible] advanced, with his left hand removed his greasy cotton nightcap, with his right lifted the horn spectacles from his nose, made his bow and delivered the oration: "Emperor, you are on your way to thrash the Prussian rogues once more. I hope soon to see you return crowned with glory, and I have nothing more to say, but that Caesar and Alexander were botches in comparison with you."

The emperor laughed and inquired of the old man whether he had any sons. "Yes; four are in the army—two of these in the guards." Their names were taken down, and the honest shoemaker soon saw them raised to the rank of officers and found himself provided with a comfortable pension.

Gunpowder.

The explosion of gunpowder is divided into three distinct stages, called the ignition, inflammation and combustion. The ignition is the setting on fire of the first grain, while the inflammation is the spreading of the flame over the surface of the powder from the point of ignition. Combustion is the burning up of each grain. The value of gunpowder is due to the fact that when subjected to sufficient heat it becomes a gas which expands with frightful rapidity. The so called explosion that takes place when a match is touched to gunpowder is merely a chemical change, during which there is a sudden evolution of gases from the original solid. It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder on exploding expands about 9,000 times or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in a solid form.

A CORNER IN WHEAT.

It Didn't Take the Usual Course of Deals of That Nature.

John Willer of Scarboro township had a good crop of spring wheat one year—almost the only good crop for miles round. He thrashed it out during the winter and cleaned it carefully, but did not sell it. "Seed wheat will be scarce in the spring," he said to his wife. "I'll keep it till then."

One day in April a man who lived several miles farther out in the country drove up to John Willer's barn and said he wanted to buy a load of seed wheat. The farmer did not answer him at once.

"You needn't be afraid, Mr. Willer," said the would be purchaser. "I've got the money to pay for it right here."

"Now, that's just what I wanted to know," said John Willer, and his face brightened perceptibly; "I'm glad you told me. Lots of my neighbors need seed this spring and haven't the cash to pay for it. If they can't get seed on credit they can't get it at all, and I want to help them out. But if you've got the money you can get seed wheat anywhere. So just drive on into town. You'll find plenty there."—Youth's Companion.

No Place For Postmen.

The new postman was called before the office superintendent for a reprimand.

"You were seen loitering in the neighborhood of that big fire down the street," the superintendent said.

"I only stopped a minute," the man pleaded, "and I was already eight minutes ahead of schedule time."

"It is not a question of time, but safety," the superintendent replied. "The last place on earth a postman can afford to loiter is in the vicinity of a big fire. On the contrary, he ought to make a detour to avoid it.

"By neglecting that simple precaution more than one postman has had his leather bag drenched by a stream from the hose and a lot of ruined letters charged to his conscience if not to his pocketbook."—New York Times.

44 WOODEN POLES TO BE REMOVED FROM GEORGE AND CHARLOTTE STREETS

Agreement Between the City and the Radial Railway Co. is Accepted by Council

The agreement relating to the use of the hydro electric poles by the Radial Railway Co. to string the trolley wire supports, which was drafted by the City Solicitor and approved by the Electric Power Co., was discussed at a special sitting of the Council last night and accepted.

Mayor Bradburn, speaking for the Power Committee, said it was the best agreement that could be made with the Company, and Council must accept it if the wooden poles were to be removed.

Ald. Johnston explained that the agreement provided for 44 poles being removed from George and Charlotte streets.

NOT ALL THE POLES.

Only the wooden poels carrying the supporting wires alone will be done away with. Those poles used for this purpose in conjunction with power wires will remain. It is the hope of the Council that eventually all wooden poles will be sidetracked.

The agreement only covers those streets on which the hydro poles are not located. The city pays the cost of making the change.

Some objection was taken towards one clause that provides that in the event of the Railway Company desiring to run a feeder, ground or other wire on George or Charlotte streets, and the city does not give the permission the city must pay any additional expense incurred by the Company in running the wire by an alternative route. For instance if the Company had to branch off George street and run the wire along Brock street to Water and down Water to Hunter, then east on Hunter to George street, and this work cost $100 in excess of what it would have cost to bring the wire down George street, as is now possible because the Company have their own poles, the city would have to pay this additional $100. But should the city feel that the amount was excessive, appeal could be made to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The agreement further provides that the Company's employes shall at all times have access to the poles. The city accepts all liability except in case of accident which can be traced to the negligence of the Company.

Ald. Johnston said that there was as much difference as day and night between the original agreement drafted by the Company and the agreement before the Council.

For the removal of the poles it is proposed to cut them off as close to the sidewalk surface as possible, then work downwards till sufficient space is made to permit of the sidewalk being returned to its original state by filling in with cement.

BUSINESS OF BOARD OF WORKS

Drainage System to be Improved—A New By-law

Charles A. Londerville, 576 Homewood Ave., waited on the Board of Works last night with the request that the drainage system of that locality be improved.

It was admitted that Mr. Londerville's request should receive consideration and the matter was placed in the hands of the City Engineer.

PROTECT PAVEMENTS.

Mr. Parsons submitted clauses of a by-law in operation at Toronto which prohibits the burning of leaves or other refuse on the streets, and recommendation was made that the City Solicitor prepare a by-law along similar lines, so that people will not be allowed to burn leaves on the streets, and thus damage the pavements.

APPLICATION GRANTED.

The application of J. J. Turner and Sons for permission to install a ring and cover in the pavement to facilitate the handling of coal, was approved by the Engineer and granted by the Board.

SURETY BOND ACCEPTED.

The Board accepted a surety bond from the paving contractors, Foley and Gleeson in exchange for their cheque of $3,500, which accompanied the tender for the work.

MUST KEEP THE SIDEWALKS CLEAR.

The Board frowned upon the notions of contractors and others who use the sidewalk space during alterations and other construction work to the inconvenience of merchants and pedestrians. Action will be taken to stop the practice.

THE REGULAR POLICE COURT INVESTIGATION

$35 Added to Treasury From Blacklister's Case

William Rose, charged with supplying liquor to Con. Ryan a blacklister, was fined $25 at this morning's session of police court. He pleaded guilty to the charge, but denied knowing Ryan was on the list, until the truth was dragged out of him by the Chief.

Questioned by the Magistrate if he would swear that he knew that Ryan was on the list, witness replied that he would not swear as to that, for he wasn't sure, whereupon His Worship asked him if there was any truth in him. Afterwards in the box, however, Rose said that he did not know Ryan was on the list.

"You say that you didn't hear Wilson tell you to be careful with your whiskey, as he was on the list?" questioned the Chief.

"I certainly didn't."

Asked by the Chief, how long he had known Ryan, witness said that he had known him for about six weeks.

"He has asked you to buy liquor for him before, then?"

"Well, not as I know of."

"Why didn't you buy it for him?" asked the Magistrate.

"I didn't care to get it for him. I thought it would be best not to [illegible] from the Mag[illegible] "Well, I did not know the man very well."

"On what occasion did not one of the officers appear on the scene?" enquired the Chief.

"Not that I know of," answered the witness.

"Why were you so dubious as to not getting the liquor for Ryan on that occasion?" asked the Chief.

"Well, when a man is on the list he should not ask another man to get the liquor for him." The court agreed with the suggestion.

"Then your reason for not getting the whiskey for Ryan was that he was on the list?"

"Yes," replied Rose.

Con Ryan, the man whom Rose supplied with the liquor was fined $10 to be paid in ten days.

"The redemption of the world is not the snatching of men from Hell fire, but the transformation of life from within."—Rev. J. H. Arnup.

FROZEN BODIES OF THIRTEEN MEN ARE FOUND IN BOAT FROM FREIGHTER REGINA INDICATIONS POINT TO COLLISION

Loss of the John A. McGean is Confirmed—Crew of 28 Believed to Have Been Lost—Penetang in Mourning.

GODERICH, Nov. 14. — Thirteen bodies of members of the crew of the steamer Price were found in a lifeboat from the freighter Regina, which was washed ashore near Bayfield yesterday. Each body had a life-preserver on and all were frozen. This seems to show that the Price and the Regina, which is thought to be the big overturned freighter at the mouth of the St. Clair river, collided and that the Price sank after the collision. A lifeboat was sent from the Regina to rescue the crew of the Price, and as the men were making their way through the storm to the Regina that vessel also sank and left the men stranded.

The loss of life in Sunday's storm is appalling and as yet no definite idea can be given as to what the number will be; but up to the present time upwards of sixty bodies have been found on the shore from Goderich to Sarnia, with only about a dozen identified. Four bodies of the Wexford were found on Tuesday near St. Joseph and were identified as Murdock McDonald, James Gleen, both Sarnia; Archibald Brook and Chief Engineer Scott of Collingwood.

Wednesday a life raft of the steamer McGean washed ashore, with three bodies lashed to it. By all appearances they had taken to the raft, but were unable to keep upright and were washed off. A watch on one of the men had stopped at 1.30 a.m. and Dr. Hunter says they probably were dead two days; it is likely that she foundered on Sunday night some distance south of here. The bodies were identified as those of Stone, an Indian from the reservation at Sarnia; Smith and Owen, from letters found on the bodies, but their addresses could not be made out.

The daily patrol of the shores is bringing news of the finding of wreckage belonging to the Argus, McGean, Mills, the Crowe, Holmes, Price and the Carruthers, the latter the finest and newest boat on the lake.

Another Proof of Collision.

PORT HURON, Nov. 14.—Does another vessel lie beneath the wreck of the overturned boat in Lake Huron, thirteen miles from here?

This is the theory advanced by Milton Smith, assistant engineer of the ill-fated steamer Charles S. Price. Mr. Smith had a premonition of the approaching danger and left his ship at Cleveland the day before it rode in to the teeth of Lake Huron's gale and foundered with all hands on board.

Mr. Smith returned to Port Huron last night from Thetford, Ont., where he went to help establish the identity of the men whose bodies were in the morgue there. [illegible] was that of John Groundwater, chief engineer of the Price, whose home was in Cleveland.

"Are you sure?" asked the coroner.

"As sure as I know my own name is Smith," he replied.

"Well, this man had one of the Regina's life-preservers wrapped about his body," said the coroner.

Smith was dumbfounded. How the chief engineer of the steamer Price happened to be found in one of the life-preservers of the Regina was more than he could fathom. Then it dawned upon the Port Huron man that the Regina and Price may have collided, and in the excitement, sailors of each vessel grabbed the life-preservers that happened to be nearest.

His theory is further strengthened by the fact that the bodies of the men who went down on the Regina and the Price were found in precisely the same position on the shore, some of them even clasped in each other's arms. This practically substantiates the belief that the overturned vessel on Lake Huron is either the Regina or the Price. It is also thought that the vessels collided with such force that one is under the other.

McGean's Loss Confirmed.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 14.—The loss of the steamer John A. McGean, of 7,000 tons, one of the larger craft on the lakes, operated by the Hutchinson Steamship Co., here, was confirmed by officials of the company yesterday. The ship sunk in Lake Huron.

It is believed that Capt. C. R. Ney and all of the crew of 28 men were drowned.

The company has received despatches from Goderich, Ont., saying three bodies were washed ashore there, lashed to a raft, and have been identified.

Penetang In Mourning.

PENETANGUISHENE, Nov. 14.—The wrecks of the past few days on the great lakes have struck home to many families in Penetanguishene, and more particularly so in the case of the Toronto steamer Regina. Two Penetang boys were among her crew, Bert Dusome and Robert Stalker.

Capt. Ed. McConkey, who sailed the steamer, was a resident here for a number of years, and married a young lady from this place. Latterly he had resided in Barrie. All were highly respected.

Thornton Also Suffers.

THORNTON, Ont., Nov. 14.—The reported loss of the "James Carruthers" was sad news to this village, as the chief engineer, E. J. Odall, and three of his men, namely, Jas. Crossley, Elmer Speers and Malvin Corbrett, belonged to Thornton. The people of Thornton are anxiously waiting for further news.

NEGLECT

The Crown Attorney at Goderich Will Inquire Into Negligence Ashore.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 14.—Did the Wexford founder with her crew of 25 men off Goderich harbor because of the culpable negligence of any person ashore?

This is the question being investigated by Crown Attorney Seager of Goderich, and an attempt will be made to solve it at the inquest conducted under his directions by Coroner Campbell of Hay Township at Zurich, on Nov. 20.

"We will endeavor to learn if signals were set up at Goderich harbor and if the protection to incoming vessels was adequate," Coroner Campbell said yesterday morning.

"It has been reported here that the siren of the Wexford was heard off Goderich, where she was due to put in on Sunday afternoon. She left Fort William with 96,000 bushels of grain Thursday and should have been safely in Goderich Sunday afternoon. Had she been she would have avoided the blizzard in which she foundered Sunday night or early Monday morning.

"We will endeavor to learn if anything had been done on shore to admit of the safe entrance of a ship to the harbor."

Norton's Safety Reported.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 14.—The Norton, mentioned in a despatch from Fort William as overdue, is probably the David S. Norton, owned by W. C. Richardson, Cleveland. The owner yesterday received a message from Duluth stating that the Norton docked there Wednesday at 2.15 p.m.

WRECKAGE FROM ILL-FATED STEAMER ARGUS

One Body Also Discovered on the Shore

Canadian Press Despatch.

KINCARDINE, Nov. 14— Wreckage [illegible] came ashore all day yesterday and this morning. The body of a man five feet nine, one hundred and seventy pounds, smooth shaven and sandy complexion came ashore wearing a life belt with steamer "Argus" on it.

The man was tatooed on both arms one arm bearing the figures of a man and a woman with two hearts joined and the words "You and Me"

Written in a small pocket diary was an address Tom Nelson, 114 Trinity Place, Buffalo and same name with an address of 18 Lafayette st., Chicago.

Nine bodies it is reported came ashore at Point Clark, nine miles from here.

TORONTO Nov. 13— Previous reports that seven bodies had come ashore at Goderich from the "James Carruthers" are incorrect. Nothing but wreckage came ashore from that steamer until this morning when one body was reported from Amberly, twenty miles north of Goderich as having come ashore, encased in a "James Carruthers" life belt.

FATAL HOLIDAY

Donald McDonald Was to Have Been G.T.R. Engineer on Return.

GUELPH, Nov. 14.—The ambition of every man who ever shovelled coal into the firebox of a locomotive is one day to hold the throttle himself as engineer. This ambition was that of Donald MacDonald, who was fireman on the G.T.R. local between Guelph and Hamilton. He had obtained a week's holidays, and as he had a cousin on a lake boat he decided to sail from Goderich to Fort William. It was to be his last holiday before returning to work as a full-fledged engineer on the Grand Trunk. They reached Fort William safely, but as MacDonald had to return to work and the boat he had come with was not ready to sail, he shipped with the ill-starred Wexford, as another cousin of his was on this boat. The fate of the craft has been written and young MacDonald and his cousin went down with her. MacDonald was well known here. He was unmarried and hailed from Goderich.

ORE STEAMER FOUNDERED

Steamer Henry B. Smith is Said to be Lost in Lake Superior.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 14.—The steamer Henry B. Smith, loaded with 10,000 tons of ore, which sailed from Marquette on Sunday in the teeth of a heavy storm, is lost on Lake Superior, and last night it is believed the vessel foundered off Stannard Rock with her crew of thirty men. The Hawgood Transportation Co. of Cleveland, owners of the boat, yesterday afternoon telegraphed Captain Brown here, asking for information concerning the Smith's whereabouts, and stated that although she has been on the lake five days she has not reached Sault Ste Marie, for which port she sailed.

The sighting of a drowned sailor floating upright in Lake Superior supported by a lifebelt, eleven miles southeast of Marquette last yesterday afternoon, and the drifting on the beach here of bits of wreckage and furnishings of a ship's cabin, confirms the belief that the Smith and her crew perished.

The Henry B. Smith, with Captain James Owen of Cleveland in command, after taking on ore and waiting two days for the storms to abate steamed out on Sunday night. The Smith is solid steel, 565 feet long beam 55, depth 30. She was launched at Cleveland in 1906.

Ghouls Are Checked.

SARNIA, Nov. 14.—The pilfering of the wreckage cast up by the [illegible] along the Canadian shore of Lake [illegible] Thomas Acton of Sarnia, with County Constables Patterson and Pitfield, are on the job. Four beach patrols have also been placed, and are now maintaining a watchful eye to see that nothing is being carried away by the ghouls who were at work Wednesday. The officers are making close searches about the surrounding country, as it is reported that many hiding places of stolen wreckage have already been located.

Suggestions From Synod.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—The Presbyterian Synod of Manitoba in session Wednesday night passed resolutions urging the Dominion Government to amend the Dominion Elections Act, favoring national schools for Manitoba, with only English taught, for the ordinary transference of ideas to the child's mind, favoring a campaign to abolish the bar, and praying for a better observance of the Lord's Day in Manitoba.

Russian Attache Ends Life.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Col. Boulgarin, the Russian military attache at Rome, committed suicide yesterday. He had been suffering from a serious illness.

TEN BODIES FROM THE "JAMES CARRUTHERS" STREWN ALONG SHORE

Canadian Press Despatch.

GODERICH, Nov. 14— Bodies from the wrecked steamer "Jas Carruthers" are now coming ashore. This morning the corpses of eight men and one woman, all from the 'Caruthers" were found along the shore of Laek Huron in the vicinity of Point Clark lighthouse, twenty miles above Goderich. Seven of there were found on the Bruce County side of the boundary and they will be taken to Ripley. The other two will be brought to Goderich, having come ashore within the jurisdiction of Huron County authorities.

In addition to these bodies, a body came ashore at 9 o'clock this morning at Kintail, bearing a Carruthers' life belt but it has not yet been identified. The man is about forty years of age and red haired. John McKay on whose farm the body came ashore is in charge, awaiting the arrival of an officer. One of the bodies at Point Clark appeares to be that of J. Evans of Detroit.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—The inclusion of the Maidland Queen among the lost or missing vessels seems to be an error. She arrived here with a cargo of grain Monday, discharged the cargo and sailed for the upper lakes only yesterday.

COLLINGWOOD CITIZENS WANT LAKE PATROLLED

Appeal is Sent to Hon. J. D. Hazen to Assist in Finding Crew of Missing Steamer Leafield—Forty Citizens on the Death Roll.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 14.—Not since the calamity to the steamer Asia, in 1883, when over two hundred men were lost, all of Collingwood, has this town been thrown into such utter gloom as to-day, when the last ray of hope for the safety of the Leafield is fast falling away.

A telegram yesterday afternoon from the Algoma Steamship Co. told relatives and friends not to give up hope until the return of search tugs of the company, which have gone out along the shore. Sanford H. Lindsay, president of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., last Wednesday night sent the following rush appeal to Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries:—

"Can the Government do anything to patrol Lake Superior to look for the crew of the steamer Leafield? Immediate action and numbers of boats are necessary. I understand American Government have taken similar action."

Over forty brave residents of this town are now known to be dead, and it is quite probable that the number will reach forty-five, or perhaps fifty.

Flags are flying at half-mast, stores and houses have drawn blinds, and everybody is talking in hushed whispers. Old sailors and captains can hardly believe it true that so many well-known faces will never turn up again. Nearly every family in town has been affected by the calamity, as the missing men are related to almost everybody through marriage or blood.

To make matters worse, the whole town has been closed up, and is in quarantine on account of an outbreak of smallpox, and even church services have been prohibited by the health authorities.

The exact number of Collingwood men who have gone down may not be known for weeks, as many of the deck hands stay for only a short time on one boat.

BATTLE WITH THE STORM

Captain Could Not See Funnel From the Wheel House.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 14.—After battling with the angry elements for 96 hours, the steamer Kaministiquia arrived in port yesterday morning from Goderich, from which port she cleared last Sunday morning.

Capt. D. L. Stephens stated yesterday morning that a few hours after leaving Goderich he ran into the first of the storm.

"I never experienced such a blow," said he. "The wind blew with terrific force and the snow hurled through the air and fell hissing into the lake. It cast a pall over the ship and at times I could not see the funnel from the wheelhouse.

"Every little while the wind blew a rift through the driving snow, and I could catch glimpses of the shore. The ship kept driving nearer and nearer the rocky shore, despite everything we could do, and I expected any minute to hear her crunch on to the bottom of the lake, which I knew could not be many fathoms below us. I headed her nose straight up into the storm and called for full steam ahead. It took us four hours to make half a mile."

He stated that he passed a ship floating bottom up when some distance out on the lake, but did not think it was the Regina. He also saw the Wexford and another vessel, which he took to be the Northern Star, near Kettle Point.

British Companies Lose.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(C. A. P. Cable)—The Canadian Associated Press understands that considerable misgivings have sprung up among London underwriters in connection with the recent Canadian shipwrecks. They feel that in adopting the present rates on vessels trading on Canadian lakes they have not taken into account the possibilities of such serious gales as those that have taken place. Roughly, their loss is estimated at $1,500,000. Judging by later cables, however, this figure may be considerably increased.

Russia's export of eggs exceeds 1,500,000,000 a year.

Half Already Secured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The volunteer committee of one thousand engaged in a two weeks' campaign for [illegible] for the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. yesterday announced contributions amounting to $94,[illegible] total contributed for the first four days of the campaign is $2,275,634.

The largest single contributor yesterday was W. L. Dodge with $25,000. There were several contributions of four and five thousand dollars each.

NOBEL PRIZE FOR TAGORE

British Indian Poet First Person Not White to be so Honored.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 14.—The Nobel prize for literature was awarded yesterday to the British Indian poet Rabindranath Tagore, the first time on record that this prize has been given to anybody but a white person.

The works of Tagore were scarcely known outside of British India until recently, when some of them were translated into English.

The Tagore family is Hindu and belongs to the province of Bengal. Many of its members have devoted themselves to literature and the arts, and some of them are in the Indian civil service. Two of the most prominent are Maharajah Sir Pradyot Kumar Tagore and Rajah Sir Scurindro Mohun Tagore, the latter of whom was given the degree of doctor of music by the University of Philadelphia in 1875.

Radium Too Scarce Yet.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Scarcity of radium has prevented a thorough test of what its curative properties may be in cancer, according to the report made to the clinical congress of surgeons in session here by the cancer campaign committee.

"Only time will tell what percentage of cases can be cured with radium," the report states. "In the meantime the public should be informed through every possible source that early surgical treatment offers the best chance for cure."

The surgeons who have reported the best results from radium still urge early operation whenever possible.

PRESSURE ON HUERTA IS SHOWING RESULTS

Rumors of Mysterious Seclusion of Provisional President, Attitude of Europe and General Feeling Among Huerta's Friends Create Optimism in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—United support from the great powers abroad over the American policy toward Mexico, shown in a variety of quiet diplomatic activities gave President Wilson and Secretary Bryan a confident feeling yesterday that the elimination of Gen. Huerta as provisional president of Mexico would seen be an accomplished fact.

That the financial blockade instituted by the United States had effectually tied the purse strings of Europe, that diplomatic pressure was being exerted incessantly on all sides at Mexico City, that close friends of Huerta were applying their influence, and persistent reports, saying that Huerta had gone into mysterious seclusion, raised the hopes of the Washington Government that at last it was making definite progress toward solving the Mexican problem.

An exchange of cablegrams with Ambassador Page, an agreement by Great Britain to leave the solution of the Mexican problem in the hands of the United States, and an announcement that no moral or financial support would be granted by England to the Huerta regime, set forth in London press despatches, created a favorable impression throughout official Washington. It was felt that Great Britain, France, Germany and other nations now stood together in acquiescence to the plan of the United States for the elimination of Huerta.

President Wilson had prepared early in the day a statement of the situation, reciting what had been attempted in the communications presented by Charge O'Shaughnessy and John Lind; but within a few hours such favorable advices were received as to cause the President to withhold the document from publication.

"There are elements in this case," said the President yesterday, "which I cannot at present discuss, but which make it look to me very much more favorable."

To Dissolve Royal Marriage.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 14.—Negotiations are proceeding between the courts of St. Petersburg and Stockholm, according to the Stockholm newspapers, for the dissolution of the marriage of Prince William of Sweden and the princess, who was the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna, daughter of the Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch. The couple were married in May, 1908. Recently there were reports of domestic troubles and Princess Marie left her husband.

Death of Joseph Stratford.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14.—Joseph Stratford, a pioneer resident of Brantford, passed away suddenly here early yesterday from heart failure. For twenty years he was the manager of the Brantford hospital, bequeathed to this city by his brother, John H. Stratford. He was organizer of the Farmers' Binder Twine Co. and an active leader in the interests of the Patrons of Industry. He leaves a widow and eight sons and two daughters.

NEGRO MUST HANG

William Campbell Found Guilty of Slaying George Muir.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14. — William Campbell, the negro, who is wanted in Cincinnati, where the police think he committed several murders, was yesterday morning in the Court of King's Bench found guilty of killing George Muir and sentenced to hang on Dec. 31.

Campbell appears to have murdered Muir on Aug. 24 by [illegible] throat with [illegible] had been out for a walk in the country. Muir's body was found in an old disused shed.

The evidence that convicted Campbell was a straw hat spattered with blood, which had belonged to Muir and which the murderer had apparently taken in mistake for his own. He was wearing it when arrested.

Testimony was submitted by Lily Hubbard, who had jilted Campbell for Muir, showing that the negro had threatened to kill his successful rival.

WORKMAN KILLED

Another Probably Fatally Hurt by Bursting Concrete Form.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 14.—Louis Gardella, 465 Second street, Niagara Falls, N.Y., was instantly killed, and Richard Misner of this city, was probably fatally injured in an accident in the generating station of the Ontario Power Co. on the lower river bank yesterday. A wooden form into which concrete was being poured gave way and fell upon Gardella and Misner. Several other workmen had narrow escapes.

Gardella and Misner were buried by a mass of concrete and timbers. The Italian's neck was broken. Misner sustained a fracture of the skull which necessitated a delicate operation at the General Hospital. But little hope is held out for his recovery.

Gardella, who was 28 years old, came here from Warren, Pa., two years ago. He was to have been married this winter.

To Have Dental Clinic.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14. — Following a trip of inspection to Toronto on Wednesday by two representatives of the public school board, it is more than likely that a dental clinic, open to all public school children, will be established in Brantford. It is estimated that such a clinic would cost $500 for its establishment and $800 annually for up-keep, but the investment is one that would yield a great reform in the betterment of the health of the children.

The results achieved in Toronto were found by the representatives to have been remarkably successful. An inspection of the Toronto system was brought about by the large number of cases of defective teeth reported monthly by the Brantford nurse.

FACES CHARGE OF MURDER

W. H. Babcock Had Altercation With Neighboring Farmer.

CHATHAM, Nov. 14.—W. H. Babcock, a prominent farmer of Harwick Township, near Ridgetown, is charged with the murder of Henry Allbright, his neighbor, on Nov. 5.

Allbright and Babcock got into a quarrel over a drain while they were assisting at a threshing. Babcock is said to have knocked Allbright down, and in falling he received internal injuries. An operation for peritonitis was necessary, but Allbright died on Sunday.

Babcock is now out on a bail of $10,000 and will appear on Nov. 19 for his preliminary hearing.

The inquest into the circumstances surrounding Allbright's death will be held to-day at Ridgetown.

During the course of the first of the argument, which took place the week before the threshing, Allbright is stated to have called Babcock a "liar" and Babcock vowed he would make him take it back. At the threshing Allbright refused to retract his words, and the altercation started with the above fatal result.

LARKIN IS FREED

Irish Strike Leader Receives [illegible] on His Release.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Nov. 14.—James Larkin, leader of the Transport Workers' Union, whose members have been on strike since early in September, was liberated yesterday from Mount Joy Prison, where he was serving a sentence of seven months' imprisonment for sedition. Larkin subsequently appeared at the labor headquarters in Liberty Hall, and the occasion was seized upon by his followers to make a remarkable demonstration of their devotion to him.

Laborites Not Satisfied.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The release of James Larkin from prison in Dublin yesterday has far from satisfied the labor world of the British Isles. It seems still further to have intensified the determination of the trade unionists to fight the labor dispute in Dublin to a finish.

Strikers Abandon Train.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 14.—All the men in the Algiers shops of the Southern Pacific, and all trainmen and enginemen on the New Orleans-New Iberia division, numbering about 1,000, were called out on strike at seven o'clock last night.

A train out on the road was abandoned by the crew promptly at seven o'clock. The crew of a freight that was between Algiers and Gretna, just across the river from New Orleans, struck at the announced hour and and walked into Algiers. The men have been admonished by union officials to attempt no violence, but last night deputy sheriffs were protecting the company's property.

Police and River Pirates.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A miniature naval battle was fought under the shadow of Brooklyn Bridge, just after midnight yesterday morning when detectives, concealed aboard barges, and policemen in launches exchanged shots with armed river pirates. Four detectives were injured, but three pirates were captured and three motor-boats loaded with stolen coffee were recovered.

One Thousand For Alienation.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 14. — Robert Craig, a mechanic of Brantford, brought action yesterday in the High Court against Charles Wooden, contractor, of Burford, for the alienation of his wife's affections. He sued for $5,000. The case went to the jury shortly before five o'clock yesterday afternoon, and a verdict was returned allowing Craig $1,000 damages.

CHRISTIAN IMPERIALISM

If the practical interest and earnestness of the laymen of Peterborough and district is at all commensurate with the enthusiasm displayed at the banquet in the Market Hall last evening, then this Laymen's Missionary Movement ought to move something. There are movements which don't move, which are mere squibs, or sky-rockets, which look very fine at night, but the next morning there is nothing found of them but a burnt stick and the remembrance of a "fine time."

Some such criticism has been made against this Laymen Movement, and it has been keenly resented by our clergy and laymen. But if the criticism is false and unjust there need be no concern for the cause, for the thing is not being run for praise and condemnation. Indeed, if there is one thing that will do this or any movement good, it is this very antagonism which is so irksome to many people. If this movement cannot bear the brunt of criticism and even opposition, it is no movement at all. If it has not enough vital motive power in itself to sustain it and propel it along without the pamperings of popularity, it had better die an early death.

There is no question as to its lofty purpose. To awaken business men to a sense of their responsibility in the matter of Christianizing the world is a [illegible] in the right direction. Even from an intellectual point of [illegible] it extends the [illegible] Most men are parochial and narrow in their mental vision, [illegible]quently selfish and out of sympathy with things beyond their purview.

Apply this to national matters, the lesson is the same. There are Canadians who see nothing on the map but Canada. They have not the imperial vision which has made Canada what it is to-day. Canada is the result of the larger vision of Great Britain. It is good to concentrate at home, but we must not forget that we are only a part of a vast Empire which encompasses the globe. If we do our duty to the whole we will do our duty to the part. The Laymens Missionary Movement is an Imperial movement in that its object is the establishment of the world-wide Empire of Christianity.

QUACK POLITICANS

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier has declared that the navy question is dead, and that cheap bread and the lowering of the cost of living are the most important questions confronting the people of Canada to-day."

As to the naval question being dead, if it is dead, it is certainly not "resting in peace." And a great many live people are talking about it. Dr. Horning travelled from Toronto to Peterborough last week to lecture upon the corpse to an audience of very wide awake people, and the meeting was by no means in the nature of a funeral. Sir Wilfrid himself is forever resuscitating this dead question. If he honestly believes it to be diseased, he seems to be very much troubled with the ghost, for he endeavors to lay it upon every public occasion.

Cheap bread is what Sir Wilfrid is after. That is a frugal proposition, and one that ought to catch the votes of housewives, and the first thing that Sir Wilfrid should secure is "votes for women." It would be as well for him to know first that Canada has cheaper bread than England. That free-trade, free-food England is paying seven cents for a Canadian five cent loaf at the present time.

It is as well for Sir Wilfrid to know this before he attempts to meddle with the present arrangement, which is so satisfactory. Patent medicines, which are advertised to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to, are suspected by most sensible people. Canada is not yet in need of the doctor—quack doctors especially.

Huerta is still lingering despite the continual broad hints of President Wilson. The reports from Washington are all in the same line—"Huerta must go." But Huerta won't go. Punch, in a cartoon entitled "The Sorrows of Huerta," depicts the Mexican opening a telegram from the United States and hoping it is an ultimatum. The inference being that if the States were to intervene the Mexicans would unite and support Huerta.

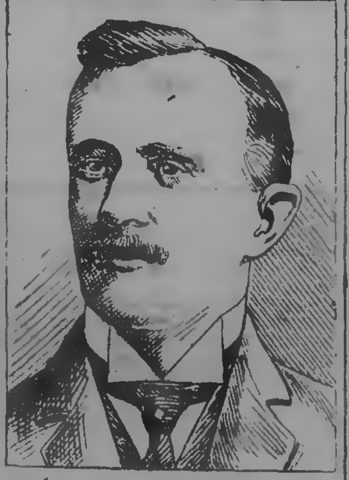
IS MASTER DAIRYMAN

J. A. RUDDICK MADE CANADA'S BIG ST CHEESE.

Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner for the Dominion Taught New Zealanders the Arts by Which They Now Threaten This Country's Supremacy—He Was Born In Oxford County In 1862.

A despatch the other day announced that we were in danger of losing our primacy in the British cheese market to the New Zealander. That primacy was probably due to a large extent to the immense advertisement we gave ourselves by making the biggest cheese in the world. That cheese was manufactured in the fall of 1892 in the Canadian Pacific Railway station shed at Perth Ont., and was sent to the World's Fair in Chicago the next year. It weighed 22,000 pounds, and required for its making the equivalent of the September milking of 10,000 cows. After the fair was over the cheese was shipped to England where it was widely exhibited and called attention in a startling manner to the cheesemakers of Canada. Their cheese had already made a prominent place for itself in the English market; but that place was enormously enlarged as a result of the unique advertisement, which was fully supported by the quality of the Canadian article. The man who had charge of the making of that cheese was Mr. John Archibald Ruddick, then a member of the staff of the Dairy Department for the Dominion, since 1905 the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner and official chief of the dairy interests for Canada.

At the time he superintended the making of this giant cheese, Mr. Ruddick had for a decade been a figure in the cheese-making world of Canada. He was at the time just thirty years of age, having been of Scotch-Irish and United Empire Loyalist stock in the rich county of Oxford. It was natural enough that he should turn his attention to dairying and make a success of it, for Oxford has long been one of the premier counties of the Dominion in cheese and butter-making. It was not Oxford, however, which gave him his chance, though it did lay a broad and a strong foundation of knowledge for him. It was under the "cheese king," Mr. D. M. Macpherson, of Lancaster, in the eastern end of the province, that Mr. Ruddick got his most valuable experience and made his name. When twenty years of age he entered the service of Mr. Macpherson as manager of one of his factories and for five years before [illegible] superintendent [illegible] sixty factories, which Mr. Macpherson then controlled in Glengarry and in Huntingdon, Que.



MR. J. A. RUDDICK.

Soon after this it was that Mr. Ruddick entered the service of the Government as a member of the staff of the Dominion Dairy Commissioner. For three years he was a travelling instructor of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, and at this time did much to spread improved methods of cheese and butter-making among the farmers of Eastern Ontario. When Queen's University established its dairy school in 1894, he was made superintendent and remained in charge of the fortunes of this institution until four years later, the school in the meantime having been taken over by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

It looks very much as if we would have to lay some of the blame for the competition which our cheese is now meeting from New Zealand on the shoulders of Mr. Ruddick. When he severed his connection with the Kingston Dairy School in 1898, it was for the purpose of entering the service of New Zealand, where he remained for three years and did much to lay the foundations of the cheese industry in that colony. Mr. Ruddick, by the way, is only one of a number of Canadians who have been engaged as experts to build up the dairying interests of other countries. New Zealand has taken for a time no less than three other Canadians for this purpose, while even Great Britain and the United States have drawn upon our cheese and buttermakers to assist them in improving their methods.

Mr. Ruddick's life has in a remarkable manner paralleled the period of growth of dairying in Canada. This is particularly true of cheese-making, with which he has been most closely associated. When he was born, about fifty million pounds of butter was being made in Canada, but the cheese product amounted to only about four million pounds. This, of course, was chiefly for home consumption, the export of dairy produce on a considerable scale not arising till five or six years later. The total amount of butter made in Canada at the time of the last census has not been figured out; but ten years earlier it was one hundred and fifty million pounds

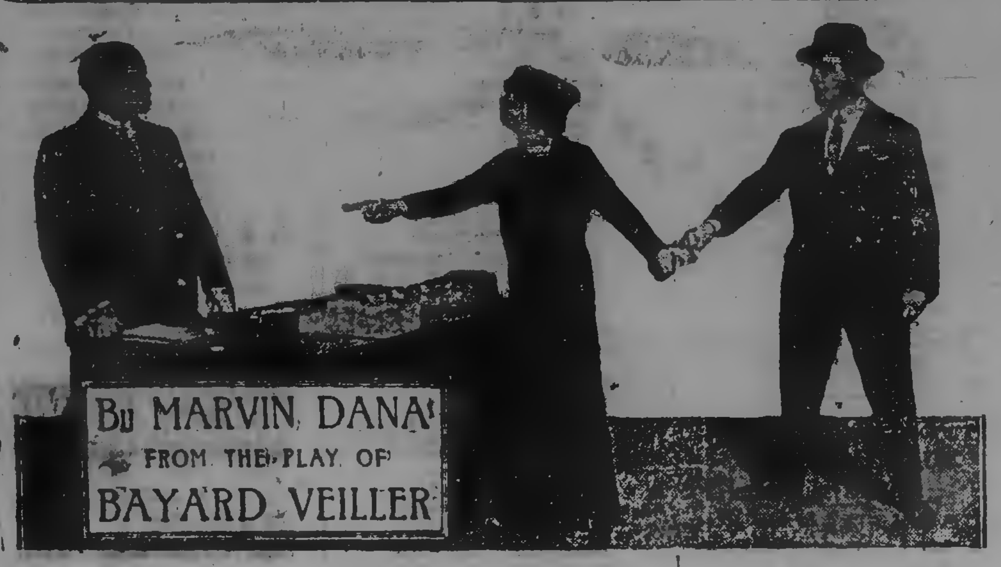
WITHIN THE LAW.



By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Joe Garson, the notorious forger, led the dripping girl eastward through the squalid streets until at last they came to an adequately lighted avenue, and there a taxicab was found. It carried them farther north, and to the east to an apartment house that was rather imposing, set in a street of humbler dwellings.

Here Garson paid the fare and then helped the girl to alight and on into the hallway. Mary went with him quite unafraid, though now with a growing curiosity.

The two entered and went slowly up three flights of stairs. On the landing beyond the third flight the door of a rear flat stood open, and in the doorway appeared the figure of a woman.

"Well, Joe, who's the skirt?" this person demanded as the man and his charge halted before her. Then, abruptly, the round, baby-like face of the woman puckered in amazement. Her voice rose shrill. "Well, if it ain't Mary Turner!"

Mary Wore Fine Clothes.

"Aggie!" was the reply.

In the time that followed Mary lived in the flat which Aggie Lynch occupied with her brother, Jim, a pickpocket much esteemed among his fellow craftsmen. The period wrought transformations of a radical and bewildering sort in both the appearance and the character of the girl.

Joe Garson, the forger, had long been acquainted with Aggie and her brother, though he considered them far beneath him in the social scale, since their criminal work was not of that high kind on which he prided himself. But as he cast about for some woman to whom he might take the hapless girl he had rescued his thoughts fell on Aggie. He was relieved rather than otherwise to learn that there was already an acquaintance between the two women, and the fact that his charge had served time in prison did not influence him one jot against her.

Mary let herself drift. It seemed to her that she had abandoned herself to fate in that hour when she threw herself into the river. Afterward, without any volition on her part, she had been restored to life and set within an environment new and strange to her, in which soon, to her surprise, she discovered a vivid pleasure. So she fought no more, but left destiny to work its will, unhampered by her futile strivings.

For the first time in her life, thanks to the hospitality of Aggie Lynch, secretly re-enforced from the funds of Joe Garson, Mary found herself living in luxurious idleness, while her every wish could be gratified by the merest mention of it. She was fed on the daintiest of fare, she was clothed with the most delicate richness for the first time as to those more mysterious garments which women love. In addition, there were as many of books and magazines as she could wish.

Her mind, long starved like her body, seized avidly on the nourishment thus afforded. In this interest Aggie had no share—was perhaps a little envious over Mary's absorption in printed pages. Aggie took a vast pride in her guest, with the unmistakable air of elegance, and she dared to dream of great triumphs to come, though as yet she carefully avoided any suggestion to Mary of wrongdoing.

In the end the suggestion came from Mary Turner herself, to the great surprise of Aggie, and, truth to tell, of herself.

There were two factors that chiefly influenced her decision. The first was due to the feeling that, since the world had rejected her, she need no longer concern herself with the world's opinion or retain any scruples over it. Back of this lay her bitter sentiment toward the man who had been the direct cause of her imprisonment, Edward Gilder.

The factor that was the immediate cause of her decision on an irregular mode of life was an editorial in one of the daily newspapers. This was a scathing arraignment of a master in high finance. The point of the writer's attack was the grim sarcasm for such methods of thievery as are kept within the law. That phrase held the girl's fancy, and she read the article again with a quickened interest. Then she began to meditate.

It was the law that had worked the ruin of her life, which she had striven to make wholesome. In consequence she felt for the law no genuine respect, only detestation as for the epitome of injustice. Yet, she gave it a superficial respect, born of those three years of suffering which had been the result of the penalty inflicted on her. Now, in the paragraph she had just read she found a clew to suggestive thought, a hint as to a means by which she might satisfy her rancor against the law that had outraged her, and this in safety since she would attempt nought save that within the law.

CHAPTER V.

Keeping Within the Law.

MARY'S heart leaped at the possibility back of those three words, "within the law." She might do anything, seek any revenge, work any evil, enjoy any mastery as long as she should keep within the law. There could be no punishment then. That was the lesson taught by the captain in high finance. He was at pains always in his stupendous robberies to keep within the law. To that end he employed lawyers of mighty cunning and learning to guide his steps aright in such tortuous paths.

There, then, was the secret. Why should she not use the like means? Why, indeed? She had brains enough to devise, surely. Beyond that she needed only to keep her course most carefully within those limits of wrongdoing permitted by the statutes. The sole requirement would be a lawyer equally unscrupulous and astute.

She took Joe Garson into her confidence. He was vastly astonished at the outset and not quite pleased. To his view this plan offered merely a fashion of setting difficulties in the way of achievement.

Presently, however, the sincerity and persistence of the girl won him over. The task of convincing him would have been easier had he himself ever known the torment of serving a term in prison. Thus far, however, the forger had always escaped the penalty for his crimes, though often close to conviction. But Mary's arguments were of a compelling sort as she set them forth in detail, and Garson agreed that the experiment should be made.

An agreement was made by which Joe Garson and certain of his more trusted intimates in the underworld were to put themselves under the orders of Mary concerning the sphere of their activities. Furthermore, they bound themselves not to engage in any devious business without her consent. Aggie, too, was one of the company thus constituted, but she figured little in the preliminary discussions, since neither Mary nor the forger had much respect for the intellectual capabilities of the adventuress, though they appreciated to the full her remarkable powers of influencing men to her will.

It was not difficult to find a lawyer suited to the necessities of the undertaking. Mary selected Sigismund Harris, an attorney, just in the prime of his mental vigors, who possessed a knowledge of the law only to be equaled by his disrespect for it.

Forthwith the scheme was set in operation. As a first step Mary Turner became a young lady of independent fortune, who had living with her a cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch. The flat was abandoned. In its stead was an apartment in the Nineties on Riverside drive, in which the ladies lived alone with two maids to serve them.

Aggie's Winsome Innocence.

Garson had rooms in the neighborhood, but Jim Lynch, who persistently refused the conditions of such an alliance, betook himself afar, to continue his reckless gathering of other folk's money in such wise as to make him amenable to the law the very first time he should be caught at it.

A few tentative ventures resulted in profits so large that the company grew mightily enthusiastic over the novel manner of working. In each instance Harris was consulted and made his confidential statement as to the legality of the thing proposed. After a few perfectly legal breach of promise suits, due to Aggie's winsome innocence of demeanor, had been settled advantageously out of court Mary devised a scheme of greater elaborateness, with the legal acumen of the lawyer to indorse it in the matter of safety. It was planned as the swindling of a swindler, which, in fact, had now become the secret principle in Mary's morality.

A gentleman possessed of some means, none too scrupulous himself, but with high financial aspirations, advertised for a partner to invest capital in a business sure to bring large returns. This advertisement caught the eye of Mary Turner, and she answered it. An introductory correspondence encouraged her to hope for the victory in a game of cunning against cunning. She consulted with Harris and especially sought from him detailed information as to partnership law. His statements gave her such confidence that presently she entered into a partnership with the advertiser. By the terms of their agreement each deposited $30,000 to the partnership account.

This sum of $60,000 was ostensibly to be devoted to the purchase of a tract of land, which should afterward be divided into lots and resold to the public at enormous profit. As a matter of fact, the advertiser planned to make a spurious purchase of the tract in question by means of forged deeds granted by an accomplice, thus making through fraud a neat profit of $30,000.

No sooner was the $60,000 on deposit in the bank than Mary Turner drew out the whole amount, as she had a perfect right to do legally. When the advertiser learned of this he was, naturally enough, full to overflowing with wrath. But after an interview with Harris he swallowed his wrath as best he might. He found he could not go into court with clean hands, which is a prime stipulation of the law, though often honored in the breach. So he let himself be mulcted in raging silence.

The event established Mary as the arbiter in her own coterie. She next decided that a certain General Hastings would make an excellent sacrifice on the altar of justice—and to her own financial profit. The old man was a notorious roue, of most unsavory reputation as a destroyer of innocence. It was probable that he would easily fall a victim to the ingenuous charms of Aggie. As for that precocious damsel, she would run no least risk of destruction by the satyr.

General Hastings met Aggie in the most casual way. He was captivated by her freshness and beauty, her demureness, her ignorance of all things vicious. Straightway he set snares. He showered every gallant attention on the naive, bread and butter miss and succeeded gratifyingly soon in winning her heart—to all appearance. But he gained nothing more, for the coy creature abruptly developed most effective powers of resistance to every blandishment that went beyond strictest propriety. His ardor cooled suddenly when Harris served a summons in a suit for $10,000 damages for breach of promise.

Even while this affair was still in the course of execution Mary found herself engaged in a direction that offered at least the hope of attaining her great desire—revenge against Edward Gilder. This opportunity came in the person of his son, Dick. After much contriving, she got an introduction to that young man. Forthwith she showed herself so deliciously womanly, so intelligent, so daintily feminine, so singularly beautiful that the young man was enamored almost at once. The fact thrilled Mary to the depths of her heart, for in this son of the man whom she hated she saw the instrument of vengeance for which she had so longed. Yet this one thing was so vital to her that she said nothing of her purposes, not even to Aggie, though that observant person may have possessed suspicions more or less near the truth.

It was some such suspicion that lay behind her speech as, in negligee, she sat smoking a cigarette, while watching Mary, who was adjusting her hat before the mirror of her dressing table one pleasant spring morning.

"Dollin' up a whole lot, ain't you?" Aggie remarked affably, with that laxity of language which characterized her natural moods.

"I have a very important engagement with Dick Gilder," Mary replied tranquilly.

"Nice boy, ain't he?" Aggie ventured insinuatingly.

"Oh, I suppose so," came the indifferent answer from Mary as she tilted the picture hat to an angle a trifle more jaunty.

"I don't get you, Mary. You never used to look at the men. The way you acted when you first run round with me, I thought you sure was a suffragette. And then you met this young Gilder—and—good night, nurse!"

"Well?"

"His old man sends you up for a stretch for something you didn't do, and you take up with his son like"—

"And yet you don't understand!" There was scorn for such gross stupidity in the musical voice.

Aggie choked a little from the cigarette smoke as she gave a gasp when suspicion of the truth suddenly dawned on her slow intelligence.

"Hully gee!" Her voice came in a treble shriek of apprehension. "I'm wise!"

"But you must understand this," Mary went on, with an authoritative note in her voice. "Whatever may be between young Gilder and me is to be strictly my own affair. It has absolutely nothing to do with the rest of you or with our schemes for money making. And, what is more, Agnes, I want to know what you meant by talking in the public street yesterday with a common pickpocket."

The best thing a girl gets out of it who marries for a home is a chance to cook for boarders.

In packing away summer clothes be sure to let them be put away rough dry. If they are starched there will be great danger of their cracking when next brought out to use.

ROSE TO THE OCCASION.

Novel Method of a Hustling Land Agent to Force a Sale.

America is known as the home of the enterprising land agent, and probably no feat performed elsewhere in the line of selling lots has been equaled by the exploit of one Los Angeles man. He had almost convinced a customer of the merits of a certain suburban lot, but the prospective client demurred at signing a contract without seeing the property for which he was expected to pay out his good money.

It was a little too late in the afternoon to go out, and, besides, the agent's motorcar was in use, but it would never do to let the customer get away, as he might change his mind or see some other agent.

The salesman had an idea. A showman's captive balloon makes frequent ascents just a few streets away from his office, rising to the end of a 1,000 foot cable and carrying passengers at $1 a trip.

With a little urging the customer was induced to make the aerial journey, and from that altitude the agent pointed out the suburban lot, showing its exact location and the character of the surrounding property quite as clearly as if they were actually on the ground. Before they descended the man had agreed to buy the lot.—Los Angeles Times.

Patching Up St. Paul's.

Fluid concrete is being pumped into the hearts of the monster piers that support the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, in London, to avoid the work of rebuilding the piers. Down in the crypt of the cathedral these piers are 45 by 20 feet each, apparently of solid stone. Recent investigation disclosed the fact that there was an outer skin of dressed stone on each, varying from six to eighteen inches in thickness, and that the interior had originally been filled with rubble, including remains of the previous cathedral, mixed with mortar. The mortar dried and left the interior like Swiss cheese, so that all the weight was carried by the outer skin. Pumping in concrete will make them solid again.—Saturday Evening Post.

A man is as popular as the make of his motor car.

The Straight Line in Creating Demand

"A Straight Line is the Shortest Distance between Two Points"

Whatever troubles old Euclid gave us in our schooldays his axioms were simple enough. In our business life to-day we show a lively appreciation of the truth of this axiom in cutting out superfluous efforts—in the saving of time and labor.

In making goods the straight line is "efficiency." It is the shortest distance between raw material and finished product.

In Selling Goods, the straight line is Newspaper Advertising.

It is the shortest distance between the seller and the buyer. Some manufacturers are applying the straight line in the making of their goods, but neglecting it in the selling of them. Some have no line of communication with the consumer at all—many let their message meander along bypaths of "chance acquaintanceship" instead of telegraphing it along the straight line of Newspaper Advertising.

Newspaper Advertising is the Shortest Distance between the two points of "Supply" and "Demand."

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this Newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

GREAT BANQUET OF LAYMEN MOST INSPIRING SPECTACLE

LAYMEN THE MISSIONARIES

We Are the Representatives Says Dr. Fergusson of Formosa—Nearly One Thousand Men Present.

It is a long time since so large a congregation of men were at a banquet in Peterboro upon any occasion, civic or national, as that which filled the market hall last evening. It is certain that never in the history of the city have so many men gathered to a banquet under the auspices of any Christian organization. The great market hall was lined from end to end with tables, and the sight will never be forgotten in the history of the churches of Peterboro.

If there were any in that great crowd of hard-headed men who would justify the sneer of the critic that they went for "the loaves and fishes," they would not go away disappointed in that respect, for the provision was ample and of the choicest, and everyone had enough and to spare. But there was more than food for the body handed out at this banquet, and those who assembled had food for deep and earnest thought served up and even forced upon them by the speakers.

Dr. Ferguson gave the men a graphic insight into his work in Formosa; Justice Hodgins urged the claims of Canada. Rev J. H. Arnup sounded a clarion call for manly devotion and service to missionary work by laymen in providing the means of carrying on the evangelization of the world.

Judge Huycke presided. The Temple Band played selections of music and Mr. William Mulligan led the singing and sang a solo.

JUDGE HUYCKE

Judge Huycke makes an excellent chairman. Being a judge his word carries weight in court. And as a chairman, he not only has a commanding presence but has a way of commanding an audience, and getting his commands obeyed.

He said the spectacle which presented itself to him in the great sea of faces which looked up at him was the most inspiring one he had ever seen. There were men gathered together, not to discuss politics, but to show their regard for Christian missions.

He read a telegram received from Canon Davidson's brother, in which that gentleman said Ontario rightly expects to hear great things as the result of your conference to-day.

FROM FORMOSA

The chairman then called upon Dr. J. Y. Fergusson, Medical missionary from Formosa. Dr. Fergusson said: During the past eight years I have traveled a good deal, but never in all my experience have I seen so grand a sight as I see before me to-night. Never was I more proud of being a Canadian.

"It is wonderful to me, after so long an absence, to find so great a change in the attitude toward foreign missions." I have been with the laymen of this section during the last few days, and I have found that the laymen of Canada are the real missionaries and that we are merely their representatives. The duty of the representative is to understand the people to whom he is sent. The whole story of mission is this—to become acquainted with our fellow-men all over the world.

After spending some years in the east, he said he felt unable to express all that was on his heart.

Formosa is an island off the east coast of China. It has had a chequered history. At the beginning of the 17th Century. It belongning of the 17th Century it belong- 58 years. Missionaries were sent out at that time. It is now under the Japanese Government, and has a population of three millions. Of these 120,000 are savages of the hills, the "head-hunters": they are still to-day as fierce as of old. The Japs are trying to subdue these people, but very little progress has been made so far no mission work has been done among these savages, because the Japs have not given them permission to go into their territory. If we had the men we would have no difficulty in getting the permission.

The work is divided into different departments—evangelistic, educational and the medical. Much of the civilization of the West has been introduced such as paved streets, motor-car service, electric light and waterworks are in the city in which he lives. Sitting on my verandah I can see the savage hills, and within a few hours could be beyond the savage broder, which it is unsafe to cross.

Despite the low morals and the unsanitary condition of the people, underneath it all there beats the human heart. The need of the human heart is more than skin deep.

They built a hospital, costing $25-000 with a complete staff of nurses and 70 beds, with an average of 200 patients per day. Worship is conducted in the wards every evening. It has been estimated that over 60 per cent of the converts come in through the hospital.

JUSTICE HODGINS.

Hon. Justice Hodgins, Judge of the Court of Appeals, Toronto, next spoke. He said, Peterborough is to be congratulated on possessing a Judge like Judge Huycke, who proves himself so happy on all occasions.

In speaking of the work of the Laymen's movement in the national life, he said he had watched it with a great deal of interest. There were many croakers at first who said it would not last, but that meeting proved that it had not spent its force.

The spirit and the outlook of Canada has changed wonderfully. Things have moved very rapidly; three years ago the population of Winnipeg was 490,000, now there are three hundred thousand more. When we realize that this is 275 a day, it makes one wonder what we are going to do. But we are assimilating them. The responsibility to-day upon the churches in Canada is very great, to supply what the government cannot supply. We want to see Canada advance from an ethical and religious point of view.

The time is past when the missionary's was an exciting life. The missionary goes out as part of a highly organized service.

The laymen's movement has two sides to its work, it has the objective side. To interest the business men, and this has raised up a body of men who have made themselves active participants in missionary work. It has in itself a tremendous power. Nine-tenths of the men of the church are willing to work if they are given something to do. Most men have good points and they only need a little encouragement. If you go to a man and touch him on that point upon which he fancies himself, you will find that you have a friend and a worker at once. The movement gets the best out of men; so long as God works through human agents this movement is bound to be useful in the world.

The missionary problem is vitally bound up with our national life, both at home and in the foreign field. We are in happy times when a movement like this is so prosperous. Let us live up to our privileges, and to the golden rule, "Love, God, honor the King and love the brotherhood."

J. H. ARNUP.

Rev. J. H. Arnup, of Toronto, in rising, said: "Before I became a sky-pilot I was a school master." He wanted to lay before them five propositions. First, if the world means anything at all it means something good. The goal of history is for the redemption of the world. [illegible] snatching of men from hell-fire—but the transformation of a life from [illegible] that this task [illegible] of the Divine power which comes into our life by contact with the Lord Jesus Christ. We do not believe that the religion of heathens is the invention of the devil; we believe that these people have been groping up the altar stairs to God, but that they have been groping in the twilight. Upon every man that shares the privileges of Christianity there lies the eternal obligation to give every other man his rightful chance to the religion of Jesus Christ. Home missions in Canada are as much a world task as that of foreign missions. Any view of home missions that does not take in the world task lacks vision, and the view of foreign missions that does not take in home missions, lacks sense.

We have come to the time when the opportunities are open to us all the world over. The Edinborough conference three years ago said that the next ten years would be a decade of destiny, and things have happened in the last three years that the Edinborough Conference could not have had a preview.

Mr. Arnup rose to great heights of eloquence as he went into detail to show the transformation that has taken place in many heathen countries.

"One other proposition comes more and more home to me, and that is that 'We are the Men' to do this work. To us has been given the opportunity as laymen."

What is the difference between a layman and a minister? He had heard it defined that "ministers are paid to be good, and laymen are good for nothing."

The end of the convention is the beginning of the campaign. This is where we generate the steam, but not merely to blow it off. Steam is no good without the locomotive, and some of us have just to stand on the locomotive and toot the whistle. We want men who will do the lesser work. To live the life of a missionary is as much your business as it is of Dr. Ferguson's. It may be but shovelling gravel and driving spikes. We want not merely a few leaders, but a great mass of men whose hearts are constrained by the love of Christ.

Mr. Arnup's speech was punctuated by cheers and this earnestness and eloquence made a deep impression.

A resolution was then submitted and passed by the meeting.

After Judge Huycke had thanked the speakers and all who had taken part, the great gathering dispersed by singing "All Hail the Power," and "God Save the King."

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY LAYMEN

The men gathered in this County Conference, representing a large number of the Churches of this County of all Communions, do hereby agree :

1st—That the Every-Member Canvass, helpful in many ways, offers the very best solution of the financial difficulties of our congregations, both for missions and current expenses.

NO MONEY MADE AT THE BANQUET

Object Was to Inspire Interest in Missions

"The banquet was not a money-making affair," said Mr. R. F. Downey, chairman of the banquet committee, when asked this morning regarding the financial situation resulting from the banquet for the laymen.

Mr. Downey explained that the meal was served at cost. The object was not to make money but rather to inspire interest and enthusiasm in missions.

The committee were very much gratified at the splendid manner in which the catering was accomplished by Coleman Bros. and they wish to thank the ladies from the various churches, for services rendered. Nearly eight hundred men sat down at the tables.

Accused of "Quacking."

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—Accused as "get-rich-quick" quacks, Dr. John F. Hackett, graduate of Yale and McGill, and Victor Broad, an Italian, are held in default of $5,000 bail here to-day, after a police raid on their elaborate offices. Their circulars advertised Hackett as a man who could cure anything, and they reaped a harvest from foreigners. Broad admits trouble of the same sort in Boston, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

PUBLICATIONS ON FILE AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

No Trouble Such as is Said to Exist at Berlin

Quite a stir has been created at Berlin because of the refusal of the Library Board to permit the Orange Sentinel on the files of the Library.

The ground given for such action was that the paper "is a publication of a controversial religious nature, and is also the organ of a recognized secret society, and is thus a publication which our laws prohibit."

It is stated that the Catholic Record had found its way to the files. The chairman is a Roman Catholic, but Protestant members voted as he did for the exclusion of the Orange Sentinel. In the face of the by-law it does not seem reasonable that the Catholic Record would be permitted in the Library and the Orange Sentinel barred.

BOTH ON FILE HERE.

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, Librarian at the local Library, informed the Review that both the Orange Sentinel and the Catholic Record are on file at the Library.

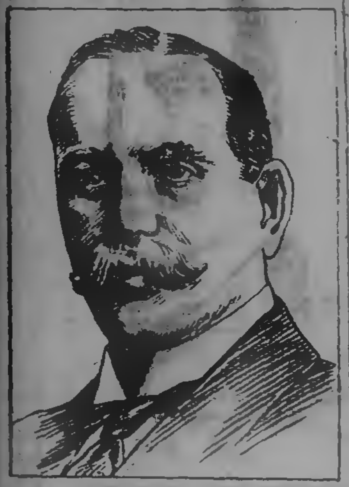
TO BEAUTIFY OTTAWA

H. S. HOLT IS PROBABLE CHAIRMAN OF NEW COMMISSION.

Montreal Man Who Has Had Much to Do With Light, Heat and Power Supply of That City Heads Federal Board—Home Smith and Frank Darling of Toronto Are Eminent Specialists.

The new commission for the beautification of Ottawa is a most important body, because it has a great work to do and contains some very capable men. One is from Montreal—H. S. Holt—and two are from Toronto—Home Smith and Frank Darling.

No one doubts that as an engineer Mr. Holt is very eminent. He has more to do with keeping Montreal supplied with light, heat and power than all others put together. He is a specialist on how to make a given set of machineries do a certain work economically and well. He believes in burying wires and dispensing with poles. He knows how to beautify a street by removing ugly things. And he is both public-spirited and aesthetic.



MR. H. S. HOLT.

Home Smith, about the same physical size as Mr. Holt, but a much younger man, has come to the front as a maker of urban landscapes since he left the offices of the National Trust Co. He has done more than any other man in Toronto to set on foot a great scheme for converting a fine natural valley into desirable city property. He has rediscovered the Humber Valley and has added it to Toronto. Under his direction there is now going on a set of improvements that means much to the making of a city beautiful. In his many walks to and from the Lambton Golf Club, of which he is a member, he saw the possibilities of turning a vast area of lovely farm lands into valuable city properties, by making of roads, creating transportation facilities and getting people on the land without traveling half a day to reach it. To reclaim the Humber Valley as part of the great waterfront and boulevard scheme of the Harbor Commission, of which he is a member, meant the raising of a lot money and the expenditure of much talent and time. Home Smith found his work and he did it. He is still a young man and has already made a reputation for creative ability. Besides, he is pretty well acquainted with Ottawa, and he has the kind of big-hearted geniality that makes him popular.

[illegible] He Was Dramatic.

Here is a story told by Sir Herbert Tree in "Thoughts and After-thoughts" in reference to the many curious applications for employment he receives: "I received a letter informing me that the writer was a house decorator by trade, but that, as circumstances over which he had no control had recently subjected him to epileptic fits, he would be glad to take a part in my next production. He added that he had a strong taste for the literary drama, of which indeed he had several samples on hand. The letter concluded thus: 'To prove to you that I am not lacking in dramatic instinct I inclose a newspaper clipping, which please return.' Underlined in red ink I read these words: 'The prisoner, who denied the assault, conducted his own case and defended himself in a somewhat dramatic manner!' "

It Sounded Reasonable.

The famous English comedian, Mr. Arthur Roberts, once averted a panic in a theatre by a timely joke. Some scenery had caught fire, and the smell of burning alarmed the audience so much that a panic seemed imminent. At this moment Mr. Roberts appeared at the footlights and addressed the spectators, assuring them that there was no danger. "I give you my word of honor there is no danger," he said. Still the audience did not seem at all convinced, which led the actor to exclaim, "Ladies and gentlemen, confound it all, do you imagine if there was any danger I'd be here?"

Sapphires Are Increasing.

Queensland's sapphire production for 1912 was of considerable consequence, according to the annual report of the Under Secretary for Mines. In the Anakie field the men have been doing remarkably well. A careful estimate of the year's production of gem stones gives it a value of about $161,000, increased by industrial corundum production to about $200,000. This is approximately a 40 per cent. increase over the production of the previous year.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Suffragists In India.

LONDON'S HEAVY TRAFFIC.

It Keeps the City and Greenwich Observatory In a Tremble.

The heavy motorbus traffic near St. Paul's, London, has shaken and cracked the columns of the cathedral so seriously that the government is considering how the vibration can be lessened.

All large cities, however, are in a constant state of vibration. In places like London, Manchester and Birmingham there is not a square inch of soil that is perfectly still. In some large towns it has been found necessary to insist on iron drainage pipes being used instead of earthenware ones. Though embedded in concrete, the average earthenware drainage pipe lasts only a few weeks uncracked.

Last autumn Professor Ingleton experimented in different parts of London with a seismometer—the instrument used for measuring earthquakes. He found that, though the trembling of the earth was naturally less in the suburbs than in the city and between 1 a. m. and 5 a. m. than at other parts of the day, the constant vibration was such as to make a seismometer in London useless for its real purpose of registering far distant earthquake shocks.

Of recent years there has been some talk of finding a fresh site for Greenwich observatory, owing to the vibrations set up by the London traffic.—London Answers.

Pasteurized Milk a Guarantee Against Disease

"There are two things the sanitarian and public health officer must demand of milk producers and milk dealers: That milk should be clean and that milk should be safe. In other words, milk should not contain dirt, and it should not contain disease.

"The modern methods of clarifying and pasteurizing milk gives us a sure guarantee that no harm can come from such milk, and when the public realize this fact there will be a greater demand for this milk, and a decrease in sickness, especially amongst children."

Extract of an address by Dr. North before the N.Y. Milk Committee.

"GHOST OF THE WOODS" BAGGED WITH ONE SHOT

Hunter Has Unique Experience of Shooting a White Moose

Shooting moose, according to those who have indulged in the pastime, is a kingly sport, but to shoot a white moose is the dream of men who go into the woods for big game. Such was the experience of a party of enthusiastic hunters who have just come out of the woods near Martin's Lake in the Cobalt region. The party went to Kinney's Siding on the C.P.R., and to their camp on the lake by motor boat.

CANADIAN'S FORTUNATE SHOT.

Mr. William Tudhope, of Orillia, Ontario, was the fortunate member of the party to get a shot at the "ghost of the woods." Mr. Tudhope confesses that the sight of the animal was enough to give him "buck fever." However, his aim proved true, the bullet reaching a vital spot.

The party had been told, on reaching the camp, wonderful stories of the snow-white moose haunting the district, but discredited all they heard, and went their way looking for a common, every-day brown moose.

ONE SHOT SUFFICIENT.

When they arrived at a point twenty-five miles back of the camp an Indian guide pointed out the beautiful animal posed on the crest of a hill. The one deadly shot was fired, and now the "ghost of the woods" is being carefully prepared for a place of honor in the Toronto museum.

IN A BEAR TRAP.

Zeb White Has Nothing to Say on Getting Out.

~~FELT~~ "POWERFUL MEAN."

When His Wife Threatens to Leave Home He Doesn't Try to Detain Her. Afterward He Meets With Serious Catastrophe.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

ONE evening when Zeb White, the "possum hunter of Tennessee," and I were out on the mountain watching a bear's den he told me this story:

"One mawnin' I riz outer bed feelin' powerful mean and low down. I reckon sich times cum to everybody now and then. It might hev worked off with me arter a while but for the old woman. 'Peared like she wasn't feelin' very peart either, and when we got sot down to breakfast she sez to me, sez she:

"'Zeb White, I'm wantin' snuff and shoes and a new kaliker dress, and you'd better turn to and git 'em or thar'll be a row. I ain't gwine to stand this fussin' around no mo'!'

"'Who's a-fussin'?' sez I.

"'Yo' be. Yo' hain't done a hard day's work in two yars. It's jest huntin' arter possums till we's almost in the porehouse.'

"'Hain't I sellin' possum pelts fur 50 cents apiece?'

"'Oh, co'se, but you's chawin' up the money in terbacker jest the same or spendin' it fur co'n juice down at the Co'ners. Things has got to change around yere or I don't stay!'

"'Yo' hain't tied to this cabin by no rope,' sez I.

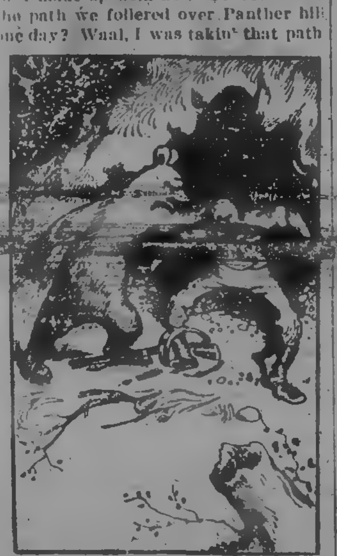
"'Mebbe yo' dare me to go!' sez she.

"'I hain't coaxin' yo' to stay agin yo'r feelin's.'

"'Then I'll go.'

She Goes Her Way.

"I didn't think she'd do it," said the old man after a quiet laugh, "but she riz up from the table with her cheeks as red as fire and put on her sun bunnit and started off up the road. I was sorry, but it wasn't fur me to call her back. I had to let on that I didn't keer, yo' know, and when I had finished my meal I started for the woods. I was arter possums ag'in. Things didn't go right 'tall. Instead of bein' glad and ready to go with me, my ole dawg sneaked off and hid hisself. Then I found I was out of powder and lead, and when I went out to feed the mewl I diskevered that he had got out and wandered away. When I did make a start I felt that mean that I was minded to sot the cabin afire to spite sumbody. I went through the woods cussin' and kickin', and I jest made up my mind that the ole woman might stay away all the rest of her life befo' I made up with her. Yo' remember the path we follered over Panther hill one day? Waal, I was takin' that path



"I COULDN'T DO NOTHIN' BUT TAKE IT."

Thar was plenty o' bars around yere then, and only three days befo' the fuss I'd set a big trap on that path. I orter hev recollected about it as I went along, but that fuss with the ole woman driv it clean outer my head. Yes, sah, I walked plumb into that trap befo' I knowed it, and, what was wuss, I was kotched with both legs jest below the knees. I was carryin' my rifle long down beside me, and it was kotched too. If it hadn't been the teeth would hev gone right to the bone."

His Arms Were Free.

"But you had your arms free and could get yourself out," I said.

"I'd like to hev you try it once!" he grimly replied. "The heft of that trap was all a man could lift, and I had to use a lever to spring the jaws open when I sot it. I had the chain fast to a tree and had cleared the ground around it, and thar wasn't so much as a stick to help myself with. Deed, sah, but I jest fell right over and howled with the pain of it. 'Peared like my legs was bein' sawed off with a dull saw, and I never cum nigher to faintin' away. Arter about ten minutes my legs got numb, and the pain wasn't so bad, but I sweat till I hadn't a dry thread on me. That spot is two miles from any house, and how I was gwine to git outer that scrape I couldn't tell. I hooted and whooped till I could hoot no mo', but nobody cum. That is, no human bein' cum. What did show up was a b'ar. Reckon he'd been sleepin' in a thicket nigh at hand, and my yellin' had disturbed him. Anyway, he was thar, and my rifle was kotched in sich a way that I couldn't use it. The blamed varmint knowed I was in a fix and took advantage of it. He jest walked right up to me and smelt me up and down. Then he hauled off and hit me a whack with his paw which rolled me twice over. Then he hit me again and rolled me back. I couldn't do nothin' but take it, and I reckon it was half an hour befo' he got tired of the fun and walked off. Thar was his chance to kill and eat a man, and a man as had killed over thirty of his kind, but he didn't take advantage of it."

"And what happened after the bear left you?"

Got the Chain Free.

"Waal, that was about noon. I rolled around and got the chain free and then tried to open the trap, but I couldn't fetch it. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when I'd made up my mind that I was a goner and was lyin on my back and weepin' like a baby, my ole woman hove in sight. She'd got sorry and gone back to the cabin but to this day she can't tell why she follered me into the woods. Reckon the finger of Providence pinted that way. She'd got over bein' mad, and she was powerful shocked to find me in that b'ar trap, but you know how women are. They don't want to 'pear to give up too quick. She seed me a good ways off, but she didn't hurry. When she cums along up she gives a sudden start of surprise and then sez to me, sez she:

"'Mebbe I'm mistooken, but hain't yo'r name Mistah White?'

"'It ar', ma'am.'

"'Zeb White?'

"'That's it.'

"'Live down yan by the branch and call yo'self the possum hunter of Tennessee?'

"'The same.'

"'Glad to meet yo', Mistah [illegible]. Ar' that strange thing on yo'r legs a patent masheen fur diggin' roots?'

"'Not 'zactly, ma'am. It's mo' what they calls a ba'r trap.'

"'Oh, I see. It's to cotch b'ars in, if they ar' fules 'nuff to cum loafin round?'

"'Yes.'

"'And if a mighty hunter cums wanderin' along with his eyes on the tree tops and his mouth open he's as apt to step into the trap as on a toadstool?'

"'Reckon that's it.'

Reasons For Pride.

"'Mrs. White orter be powerful proud of sich a husband. Don't reckon you kin find many of 'em on these yere mountings.'

"Waal," said Zez, "we talked that way to each other fur about ten minutes. Neither of us wanted to be the first to give in, yo' know, but bimeby the pain was so great that I had to crawfish. It took her half an hour to git me loose, and then she had to carry me home on her back. That ended my huntin' fur about three months, but as soon as I could drag around I went out and knocked over the b'ar which had played with me."

"But Mrs. White came out ahead," I laughed.

"Waal, I hain't gwine fur to deny that she didn't," replied Zeb. "That's the wust thing 'bout these yere family riots—the ole woman allus comes out a leetle ahead—jest 'nuff to brag on. It was nigh two months befo' she said a word to me on the subjick. Then, as I was sort o' feelin' sassy one day, she turns on me with:

"'Say, be yo' that yere Zeb White as was wearin' a b'ar trap fur breeches over thar in the woods one day?'

"And then I hadn't nuthin' to say—nuthin' 'tall."

In Paris, where horse steaks are still served occasionally, a customer in a restaurant, who had ordered beefsteak, complained bitterly of the thinness and toughness of the meat.

"I think this steak must be off a cart horse," he said to the waiter.

The waiter shook his head impressively.

"Then it must be off a race horse!"

Again the waiter shook his head.

"Worse than that, eh? Then tell me the truth—what is it off?"

"Off a bicycle, sir!" said the waiter, more impassively than before.

AFTERNOON SESSION OF LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE

Every Church Should Organize a Missionary Committee — First Essential is Faith in Missions

At the Laymen's Conference yesterday afternoon Ald. Gillespie presided, and called upon the Rev. H. K. Keith to open the session with prayer. J. H. Arnup, Assistant Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Methodist Church, gave an address on "The Missionary Committee—its organization, preparation and duties." He Christian Church is banded together for the communication of the life of Jesus, universally as well as locally. This life must be organized. We cannot do the work of the local church without organization. Both local work and universal work must move together. If one lags it does so at the expense of the other.

The beginning of the Missionary Committee is in this conference. Every church should organize a Missionary Committee if it is to do its work efficiently. Always remember you have got to get the work done and not merely to set up the machine. Mr. Arnup has the teacher's style, and he put the case for organization of missionary Committee, and set out his arguments on the black-board.

The first essential is to have faith in Missions, and we should add to our faith knowledge of the field that is covered by his own church. We must have a knowledge of the local church, what they have given to missions and what are their possibilities of giving. The duties of the committee is much more than a money making affair, it is responsible for the giving of light on and enthusiasm in Missions; it should create the "Missionary atmosphere."

The pulpit should give a lead in this matter by preaching missionary sermons frequently. A pastor's interest in missions is indicated by his prayers. He said he wished there were a globe on every pulpit in Christendom so as to remind them of the greatness of mission work. He concluded a very interesting and instructive address by saying that the result of this conference will depend upon how much we endeavor to work out on these lines.

An address was given by H. C. Priest, General Secretary for Canada of Missionary Educational Movement, on "Missionary Literature for Men." He said that missionary intelligence is going to conquor the opposition which the churches have to face. We need missionary education in our Sunday Schools and specially recommended for this purpose is a book by G. H. Trull, "Missionary Methods for Sunday School Workers." There were many books being published which made the subject most interesting to boys and girls There was a wide range of literature specially prepared to appeal to all kinds of people, and he called attention to the various books dealing with the missionary enterprise. You can't be intelligent on the missionary question if you do not take the denominational magazine of missions.

[illegible] ance Board [illegible] then gave an address on "The Every Member Canvass." He said that this had passed the experimental stage, and men of the church are beginning to realize the importance of this work. The envelope system has been proved to be the most fruitful method. The idealist is apt to dislike organization, and is afraid that the church is to become a mere machine. The time has come when man should know that organization gets men together into great confedracies of enterprize. Man is more than a machine, and the work depends upon the quality of the men that work the machine.

The individual canvass has resulted in a great interest in missions and an increase in givings. It promotes knowledge of the great missionary enterprise. The chief obstacle is ignorance. Ignorance is the mother of misconception which often leads to antagonism. You can only get the best out of your men by putting large issues before them.

There is the big problem of the unemployed in our churches to-day. It is the duty of leaders to develop the moral and spirtiual life of church people by laying upon them some great responsibility. What we want to do is to distribute the burden by asking each man to do his share.

The canvass confronts each individual with his personal responsibility, the individual is the final unit, each man should be brought face to face with his responsibiltiy, The The individual man touched with this opportunity should be aroused to a loyalty to God and be true to himself.

Dr. J. Y. Ferguson of Formosa, spoke on "Some Missionary Experiences."

We are met to discuss a series of important questions. My work in Formosa is pretty much of the type of the layman; he said he has to interpret in a practical way the truth of the gospel. If he preaches love, he has to carry that in his work as a physician He said he had no thrilling experiences for he had not endured any great hardships in Formosa. He wanted to relate a few incidents in relation to his work among the patients in the course of his work. When he first went to Formosa he opened a small dispensary. A certain woman came for treatment; she had a rather good face unlike most heathen. She became a Christian, and soon after she took a plague and died. Her family thought this was the result of her becoming a Christian.

The women come into the church more readily than the men. He told many stories of the superstition of the people. The work that he has do requires great patience and perseverance.

Mr. D. M. Rose, of Toronto, spoke of the "Every member canvass—How conducted." He said, the money getting is the least part of this every member canvass. We want to get the majority of our people with us. A good many canvasses are doomed to failure before they start. The congregations should be thoroughly prepared to receive the men who carry out the canvass. Special services should be conducted with that end in view. The missionary enterprize does not hang on a few texts, it depends upon the whole Bible. The problem of getting men to work is not so much a matter of Christian faith but rather of faith in the men themselves; it is a question not of religion but of psychology.

The conference then went into discussion.

Rev. Walter Daniel of Toronto spoke on "security best results from this conference." He said we have had a vision this afternoon of the work that has to be done and what may be brought to pass in our local congregations. Let us boldly and manfully give ourselves to this work. It is the Lord's work, and we are the Lord's people. When we take up this work we are doing real missionary work. We are not moving in the foreign field but don't be afraid of it because it is a new thing. Most of us are not Conservative in politics but we are in most other things

Mr Daniel closed the afternoon open session with prayer.

At 5.30 denominational conferences were held in the class rooms, led [illegible] Daniel Davidson [illegible] G. Peever, after which the delegates marched in a body to the market hall where a banquet was provided.

The following resolution was passed by the Methodist local conference after some discussion upon the methods of canvassing:

We the Methodists of Peterboro assembled at this conference, do hereby resolve that so far as we can a Missionary Committee shall be appointed in connection with all our churches, and that every man, member or adherent shall be canvassed not only for current expenses but also for Missions. Moved by Rev. C. E. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Halley

The following extract is from the Ottawa Citizen:

"Mrs. Wells is no academic speaker and speaks from a fund of knowledge acquired through actual experience, and she is so earnest and of such a sweet and attractive personality as she presents her message concerning several grave problems, and why there should be police women, that sooner or later the civilized world must answer. Just hear her once, and the average person will be converted to the philosophy of her arguments."

FATALITY LIST IS PLACED AT 256 LOSS $5,000,000

Death Reports Cease--No Further Tragedies Reported in Lake Disasters--Federal Government Will Send Out Patrol.

CREW OF MAJOR SAFE IN PORT

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 15.—For the first time since Sunday, a day has passed without revealing more lives lost in the storm which passed over the great lakes in the early part of the week. Only one additional boat disaster developed yesterday and that was the wrecking of the steamer Major of Cleveland, off Whitefish Point in Lake Superior. She was abandoned by her crew Thursday night after a futile effort had been made to weather the second storm of the week. The crew was picked up by the steamer Byers. The ship was in a sinking condition when the crew left her, the funnel gone and the after works washed away.

Last night the life loss among sailors is estimated at approximately 256 and the property loss is figured at more than $5,000,000. The property loss includes the score or more of vessels driven on the rocks or shore and partially or totally destroyed. One hundred and ninety-five lives were taken on Lake Huron, if the approximate figures are correct; 48 lives were lost in Lake Superior, seven in Lake Michigan and six on Lake Erie.

The list of wrecked vessels that resulted in death and the lives lost compiled yesterday follows:

Lake Huron wrecks—John A. McGean, crew of 28; Charles S. Price, 28; James Carruthers, 25; Regina, 20; Wexford, 20; Argus, 23; Hydrus, 23; Scott, 28.

Lake Superior—Leafield, 15; William Nottingham, 3; Henry B. Smith, 30.

Lake Michigan—Plymouth, 7.

Lake Erie—Lightship, No. 82, 6.

A total of 256.

Besides the foregoing list there are more than a score of vessels which were either totally or partially destroyed without loss of life.

Peril To Other Ships.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 15.—The steamer Barnum, upbound, picked up the derelict steamer Major, which had been abandoned by its crew Thursday night on Lake Superior. It was feared she would be a menace to navigation and efforts were made to get the Tuscarora to look after her. Before communication could be had with the Tuscarora, however, the Barnum brought the vessel behind Whitefish, where she now lies. The smokestacks and after cabins are gone. Great difficulty is experienced in wreck operations on the Hartwell and Nottingham. It was expected that the Hartwell would be released to-day, but no news of her release has yet reached the Soo.

The Tuscarora is standing by the Nottingham. The weather has been fair, with a fresh northeast wind and occasional snow flurries.

To Patrol Shore.

GODERICH, Nov. 15. — Owing to the inadequate system of patrolling the shores of Lake Huron Mayor Reid has been in communication with the Government at Ottawa asking that assistance be given in the work As a result he received official notice that the Government boat Lambton will leave Windsor at once and will patrol the shore from Grand Bend as far north as is deemed necessary.

Capt. McDonald of the life-saving crew also received notice to patrol the shores.

Relics of "Henry B. Smith."

MARQUETTE, Mich., Nov. 15.—Four oars and a pikepole marked "Henry B. Smith" were picked up on the shore east of Marquette in the height of the storm Sunday night, and the finding of the oars and other small wreckage tends to confirm the fears of the last two days. It is thought that the boat gave up the attempt to make the Soo and sought to battle her way to shelter east of Keeweenah.

Relief Steamer Starts.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 15. — The steamer John W. Gates, one of the largest vessels in the Pittsburg Steamship Co.'s fleet, left Thursday on a relief expedition up the lakes to aid the score or more of vessels reported stranded. The Gates was fitted with supplies of all kinds.

THREW CAT AT SPEAKER

[illegible] Birrell is Object of Suffragette Assault

[illegible] dane, the Lord High Chancellor speaking at Edinburgh, and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, addressing an audience at Bristol, were subjected to suffragette disturbances last night. A dead cat thrown at Mr. Birrell set the meeting in an uproar, and when the offenders were ejected a general fight ensued

In his speech Mr. Birrell said it was hoped a settlement of the strike in Dublin would be speedily arranged He said the Government was placing all legitimate pressure upon the employers with that object in view.

Threw Flour on Redmond.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Nov. 15.—John Redmond, the Irish leader, and his wife, were attacked by a suffragette yesterday while on board a train at Durham. The suffragette entered the compartment where Mr. and Mrs Redmond were seated, and, after declaring that the Irish leader had not done enough for the women of Ireland, struck him on the head and Mrs. Redmond on the back. She then scattered the contents of a bag of flour over Mr. and Mrs. Redmond A train attendant forcibly ejected the woman from the train and handed her over to the police.

Mr. Redmond in a speech delivered in the town hall here last evening said that there was no demand, however extravagant or unreasonable that might be put forth on behalf of the Ulster Unionists which the Nationalists would not be ready to consider, so long as it was consistent with the principle of national self-government for Ireland.

Trapper Shot With Own Gun.

NORTH BAY, Nov. 15. — Archie Stevens, an Indian trapper, was accidentally shot and killed by a bullet from his own rifle Wednesday while hunting on the Upper Sturgeon river. Evidently the rifle had jammed, and in making the adjustment the firearm had been accidentally discharged, bringing instant death.

Escapes From Lockup.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 15—A 12-year-old boy, arrested at Thorold yesterday morning, charged with breaking into and robbing McMannis store in that town, escaped from the town lockup through a 16-inch hole in the wall yesterday afternoon before the time for his hearing, and has not yet been captured.

For Compulsory Education.

QUEBEC, Nov. 15.—There is every probability of the introduction at the present session of the Legislature of a bill providing for compulsory education in the province of both Protestant and Catholic children. Last session it will be recalled Dr. Finnie's bill making education compulsory for [illegible] Catholic children was rejected [illegible] ing by 63 votes to 6.

Conspirators Sentenced.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—A despatch from Saigon, French Indo-China, says that 150 persons convicted in connection with the bomb outrage which occurred at Hanoi last April received sentences of from five to twenty years' penal servitude. The boy leader of the conspirators, aged seventeen, and two others, were sentenced to life imprisonment.

SON SLAYS FATHER

Shooting of Mother Causes Boy to Retaliate on Parent.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 15.—Lewis Van Luven, aged 68, a farmer living at Harpersfield, near Geneva, Ohio, shot and instantly killed his wife late yesterday and then was killed by his son, Matthew, aged 17, in self-defence. Young Van Luven surrendered to the police.

According to the story told the police by the boy and his 19-year-old sister, their mother was killed while sitting in the kitchen. The elder Van Luven fired almost point blank at her and then attempted to kill the boy and his sister. The boy succeeded in tearing the shotgun away from his father and then brought down the heavy stock of the weapon on his father's head, fracturing his skull.

Young Van Luven said his father had threatened several times to kill the whole family and always slept with a shotgun by his side.

Lioness Loose In School.

KOESLIN, Pomerania, Germany, Nov. 14.—A young lioness, while on exhibition before the boys of a local classical school here yesterday, escaped and seriously injured a seven-year-old school boy and caused a panic among the other pupils. The keeper was leading the lioness through the ranks of the boys, some of whom took fright and ran. The lioness broke from its keeper's hold and pursued the boys, felling one of them with a blow on the head. Some workmen in the grounds drove the animal away from the lad and it dashed into the school, where it was captured after an exciting chase.

"SNOW BABY" NOT ENGAGED TO MARRY, SHE SAYS

MISS MARIE A. PEARY

Miss Marie Peary, daughter of Robert E. Peary, civil engineer, U. S. N., retired, and known the world over as the "Snow Baby," is in New York after spending the summer and early autumn in a school at Geneva.

Miss Peary received the sobriquet of "Snow Baby" due to her birth in the winter quarters of the Arctic expedition on one of its long trips north. Mrs. Peary bravely accompanied her husband to the base of his expedition, and it was there the "Snow Baby" was born.

Immediately on the arrival of Mrs. Peary and her daughter an absolute denial was made of the engagement of the "Snow Baby" to Mr. McMillan, who is now in Crocker Land and who was with Mr. Peary on his expedition to the North Pole.

LAKE CONTINUES TO WASH UP DEAD AT GODERICH

Everything Being Done to have Bodies Looked After and Identified.

GODERICH, Nov. 15.—Lake Huron still continues to give up its dead, when yesterday morning eleven bodies were found by searchers, one being at Naftel's Point, five miles south of here, another probably from the steamer McGean. Ten bodies were later discovered between Amberly and Kintail, about 22 miles north of here, all having life-preservers on bearing the name Carruthers.

The discovery of the bodies so far north must show that the boat was wrecked north of this point, and not south, as first reported.

The bodies will be brought here pending an inquest.

Captain [illegible] of the Wexford, is here and [illegible] everything in his power to get all bodies looked [illegible]

He is at variance with the [illegible] quiring an inquest over the bodies at all the different points where they are found.

He is trying to have all the coroners come here to this point, with all the bodies, and to have the inquest as one. He speaks of taking the matter to the Attorney-General to allow this.

The report from Bayfield, that a boat containing thirteen men had drifted ashore, upon investigation is unfounded, although a 25-foot boat has been found about eight miles down the shore.

Cause of Ferry Upset.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15. — Evidence yesterday morning submitted at the inquest into the deaths by drowning of the nine victims of the Lachine Canal ferry disaster Wednesday evening, showed that George Mahorker who had charge of the craft, had practically no experience of rowing.

It was also shown that the passengers in the boat, which was overloaded, were standing up because the seats were wet. The accident occurred at the time the men were hurrying up from work.

A verdict of accidental death was brought in.

UNCONFIRMED STORY OF DISASTER

Canadian Press Despatch.

CAPE RACE, NFLD., NOV. 15—The Cunard Steamer Pannonia on a voyage from New York to the Mediterranean, signals by wireless that she has taken off the passengers from the Spanish Steamer Balmes which is on fire and is conveying the burning steamer to Bermuda. The position of the Pannonia is not given but if the message is genuine she must be one thousand miles from here and the communication must be regarded as freak news, not confirmed.

Thaw Chauffeur Surrenders.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. — Thomas Flood, the sixth one of the seven men indicted in this county for conspiracy in bringing about the escape of Harry Thaw, from Matteawan Asylum, surrendered yesterday and was held in $1,000 bail. Flood was a chauffeur.

Four Firemen Killed.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 15.—At least four firemen, and probably six were buried under a falling wall at Pine and Twentieth streets yesterday, when they were fighting the flames in the warehouse of a big grain company.

SIGNAL SILENT

Capt. Bassett Believes Wexford Signalled all Afternoon for Help.

GODERICH, [illegible] vestigating, I am satisfied that the steamer Wexford, off the port, had been blowing her signals from two o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday until eight o'clock at night. During all that time the fog horn at Goderich had never sounded once." So said Captain W. J. Bassett, manager of the Western Steamship Co. of Toronto.

"If the fog whistle had blown during that time, my steamer, in all probability, would have been lost, but the poor boys might have been saved. I am not complaining of the loss of the boat, but of the loss of the crew."

Captain Bassett had intended going to Grand Bend yesterday on the tug Horton to see if others of the Wexford unfortunates had been washed ashore, but the sea was too turbulent. The tug could not go out.

PLANTERS HARD HIT.

Heavy Loss Confronts Them If Strike on S. P. Continues.

NEW ORLEANS, Va., Nov. 15.—Except for two transcontinental passenger trains, one arriving and one leaving here yesterday, traffic on the Southern Pacific Railway in Louisiana is tied up by the strike of enginemen and trainmen. An embargo has been placed on freight and the road will not attempt to operate freight trains. All passenger trains but the two through trains have been annulled indefinitely.

With the loss of millions of dollars staring sugar and rice producers of Louisiana in the face because of the strike, business men here yesterday, through a committee, sent a long message to President Wilson appealing to him personally to intervene to help settle the strike. Cane producers are in the midst of harvesting a large crop.

Sentence Was Suspended.

GUELPH, Nov. 15.—Malcolm Ray, the young man from Harriston accused of two thefts frm the William Davies Co., Ltd., of Toronto, one of $107, the other of $644, was brought before Judge Chadwick yesterday and pleaded guilty. After a strong plea for mercy on the part of his counsel, Ray was let off on suspended sentence. Restitution of all the monies has been made and a bond for his future good behavior entered into. Ray's father will take him west.

MYSTERY SHIP IN LAKE HURON HAS BEEN DEFINITELY IDENTIFIED AS CHAS. S. PRICE

500,000 YEARS OLD

Scientists Says the Ape is an Offshoot of Human Race.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Dr. J. Leon Williams of London, an eminent authority on anthropology and geology, arrived in New York yesterday from Liverpool with 15 skulls of prehistoric man, one of which he estimated to be 500,000 years old. This skull was found by workmen near Folkestone, Eng., in strata that dated back prior to the Pleistocene era, and its existence and discovery have confirmed Dr. Williams in the belief that mankind is at least half a million years old.

Dr. Williams said the finding of these ancient skulls and other human bones did not disprove, in his opinion, the Darwinian theory, but altered it in some degrees. Instead of man being a descendant of the ape, Dr. Williams said, these skulls tend to confirm the belief that the anthropoid ape was an offshoot of primitive man. One of the chief distinctions between these skulls and those of apes, he said, was to be found in the teeth.

Politician Sentenced.

BOSTON, Nov. 15—Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston was found guilty of assault and sentenced to two months in the house of correction yesterday. The court finding resulted from an alleged attack by Giblin on the day after election upon James E. Maguire, editor of an East Boston weekly newspaper, which had opposed his candidacy for re-election. Giblin's wife fainted when sentence was pronounced. The legislator furnished $5,000 bonds after appealing.

Boys To Be Enlisted.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Militia orders announce that a limited number of boys will be included in the establishment of the Canadian Ordnance Corps, mainly for the purpose of being trained as clerks or armorers.

Boys may be granted the fifth rate of corps pay when 15 years of age, if considered by their commanding officers to be qualified to do the duty of a fifth grade clerk or fourth class artificer.

Ferdinand To Abdicate?

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Daily Telegraph asserts that, despite official denials, King Ferdinand of Bulgaria will abdicate within a few months perhaps a few weeks. It says his downfall is due to the King having offended Russia by seeking Austria's assistance against Servia.

WALLS COLLAPSED

Two Workmen Are Buried in Wreck of Concrete Structure

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Nov. 15.—The rear of a seven-storey concrete building nearing completion yesterday collapsed, carrying with it fourteen men who were working on the [illegible] Four were taken from the ruins [illegible] injured, and the others are believed to be buried be- [illegible] of concrete and steel used in the reinforcement. Hundreds of men were working last night with axes and shovels, and with the aid of a big steam derrick, removing the debris in a search for the bodies.

The four men taken from the ruins were located soon after the building fell. They were pinned fast, but not buried, and their cries directed the rescuers.

MAN A MYSTERY

Victim of Accident Carried Burglar's Handy Aids.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 15.—Quite a mystery is surrounding the man killed on the Niagara and St. Catharines Railway at Thorold Wednesday night, whose name has been given as John Yeagley of Berlin. The police of that city can find no trace of any relatives or any person who ever heard of him. The man was apparently about 44 years of age. To a tent mate while working on the Welland ship canal work the man had talked as if he had not a living relative, but had visited various parts of the world, having been a cowboy in Mexico when 16 years of age. The finding of a small steel saw in his pocket, along with entries in a memorandum book regarding the safety of doors in the neighborhood, is regarded with suspicion by the police of Merritton and Thorold, where robberies have been frequent of late.

TOWN IS CAPTURED BY REBELS

Three Americans Are Killed in Fighting at Juarez

Canadian Press Despatch.

ELPASO TEXAS, NOV. 15:—Rebels this morning surprised and captured the Mexican town of Juarez across the river. Three Americans were killed during the fighting.

Would Suppress Militant Organ.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Suppression of the sale in Boston of an English publication, the organ of the militant suffragists, was asked of Police Commissioner O'Meara yesterday by Miss Eleanor W. Allen, Mrs. Charles H. Fiske, jr., and Mrs. Eliza Thayer, prominent anti-suffragists. Their petition was taken under consideration by the commissioner. They had previously conferred with Mayor Fitzgerald and Corporation Counsel J. G. Corbett, who directed them to police headquarters.

Salvador Bank Failed.

LA LIBERTAD, Salvador, Nov. 15.—The Banco Nacional yesterday suspended payments. It is not connected with the Government in any way. The remaining banks have satisfied the Government regarding their stability and are absolved from the obligations to change their notes to silver during the next six months.

The economic situation of the country is excellent. The coffee crop will be heavy. No disturbances have taken place.

HUERTA IS UNCERTAIN

Seems Half Convinced That He Had Better Get Out.

CONGRESS OPENS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15. — President Huerta's attitude towards the demands of the United States, that he make way for a new government, is that of being only half convinced notwithstanding the fact that a few of his closest friends and political advisers are urging, although with due caution, that he accede.

The representatives of this element in the Cabinet conferred yesterday with Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affaires, but were given no assurances that President Wilson has unbent sufficiently to warrant hope that the negotiations will be reopened. In spite of this, however those friends of Huerta who now are convinced that the United States Government is not bluffing, believe they will be able yet to bring about the desired changes in time to prevent a complete rupture of diplomatic relations. This conviction is based upon the fact that Washington as yet has not put into effect its implied threat to remove the embassy or announced any new course of action.

Huerta is said to-day to be considering his own elimination although this is always denied whenever the direct question is put to anyone connected with the Government.

To-day is the date fixed for the preliminary meeting of Congress, and this morning there appears to be no reason to believe th[illegible] will not convene, notwithstanding the unequivocal demand of the United States that [illegible] not do so.

[illegible] has been represented to Huerta that the United States doubtless will regard this preliminary meeting as seriously as it would were it the formal day of opening, since it will indicate the intention of the Mexican Government to defy Washington in this regard.

Washington Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Instructions were sent to Charge O'Shaughnessy last night, indicating to him the extent to which the United States Government will go in reopening the negotiations with those counsellors of Provisional President Huerta, who earlier in the day sought to renew the parleys.

The anxiety shown by these officials close to Gen. Huerta was regarded as a favorable sign by high officials here.

The position of the American Government, however, is that unless something is definitely promised by the Huerta officials the resumption of the negotiations would be fruitless.

Americans Advised To Leave.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—The proprietors of business houses here are ordering their employes to leave the capital and proceed to Vera Cruz.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affaires, refused last night to give information of any character concerning the situation between the United States and Mexico.

Recognized by Two More.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—Portugal and Bulgaria have been added to the list of countries whose Governments have given recognition to the Provisional Government of Gen. Huerta. Querido Moheno, the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, yesterday announced that autograph letters from President Arriaga of Portugal and King Ferdinand of Bulgaria had been presented to President Huerta.

Gen. Huerta's counsellors, who have expressed themselves as being anxious to reopen negotiations between the Mexican Government and Washington, had received no intimation up till one o'clock yesterday afternoon of President Wilson's willingness. They still hope, however, that Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy will be instructed to resume the conferences. Up to the hour mentioned, the counsellors of the Provisional President had received nothing definite from Gen. Huerta in the way of promises.

Second Upturned Ship Has Been Sighted—May be James Carruthers.

FIVE STEAMERS

Believed to be Lost Within a Few Miles of Sarnia.

Canadian Press Despatch.

PORT HURON, NOV. 15:—The over turned vessel lying in Lake Huron a few miles north east of here since Sundays storm was today definitely identified as the Charles S. Price. A diver is said to have learned her name.

SARNIA, Nov. 15.—The terrible toll of the blizzard which swept over the Great Lakes on Sunday and Monday continues to increase as the fleeting hours bring in reports of new wrecks scattered along the thousands of miles of coast line on the Great Lakes. Yesterday morning, at the Reid Wrecking office here, two messages arrived telling that Lake Huron holds another mystery ship floating on the surface of the lake near Point aux Barques. This boat has a red hull and is supposed to be the Carruthers, which has already been given up for lost, with her entire crew of twenty-five men. The first report of the vessel was received from Duluth, where the master of the steamer W. H. Gratwick reported on his arrival that he had sighted an overturned hulk on his trip up. Reports here declare that the description answers the Carruthers very closely. Several down-bound boats yesterday morning were hailed as they passed down the river, but nothing could be found out from the captains, as they reported that they had not seen the overturned boat. This is very easily accounted for, as the freighters may have been well out from the shore when passing Point aux Barques. With this last report in, it is thought here that the main features of the big Sunday storm have been brought to light and that there will not be any large additions to the total of the dead, except as they come from the list of the missing.

At present it is believed that within 90 miles of Sarnia 128 men are surely lost with the Carruthers, McGean, Regina, Price and Wexford, with no hope of any of them being alive.

No Clue Yet.

SARNIA, Nov. 15.—The tug Fisher of the Reid Line was chartered yesterday for another trip to the steamer which is capsized in the lake a few miles from the mouth of the river. When the boat got within a few feet of the front of the capsized hulk a sounding of the depth of water was taken, and was found to be exactly 60 feet. The tug was then taken directly astern of the boat and back about 400 feet, where a sounding showed that the depth was 40 [illegible] This evidently was taken on top of the bottom of the boat, as a few feet farther back the water dropped away to 60 feet.

It is the opinion of local marine men and representatives of the different lines of boats that the boat must be at least 400 feet long. It is pointed out, however, that the sounding may have been taken over another boat directly behind that which is overturned.

Several Steamers Safe.

SARNIA, Nov. 15.—The steamer D. O. Mills, Nanola, Northern King, appearing in various lists as lost or missing, are all reported safe by Detroit. The large Butters is believed to be at Fort William. The steamer Holmes is reported safe at Marquette, Mich.

CARRIED TWO GUNS

But Toronto "Desperado" Held up Two Bars Too Many.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Jail doctors will examine Harry Cruickshanks to find out whether there is something wrong with his head.

Armed with two revolvers, one 32 and the other 38 calibre, both loaded in every chamber, Cruickshanks went to the Woodbine Hotel last night and demanded a drink. As he was under the influence he was refused, and thereupon he drew his heavy artillery.

This got him the drink all right, and he left that hotel and went to the Palmer House. Here again he tried for a drink, and after a display of arms, got it. Then the police got him.

Burned By Upsetting Lamp.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 15. — John Moore of Newboro, who lived alone, was badly burned by the upsetting of a lamp. His limbs from the feet to the knees were severely injured. Neighbors saved him from being burned to death and also prevented the destruction of the house.

Slain Rabbit Had Revenge.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—Surgeons of the Harrisburg hospital removed from the appendix of Mrs. Reuben Ulrich, of Selina Grove, Pa., two grains of the shot with which her husband killed a rabbit last week. Mrs. Ulrich ate a part of the rabbit containing the shot.

EXTREMES MEET

The Berlin Library Board have given the proprietors of the Sentinel a gratuitous advertisement by excluding their paper from the files of the Public Library of that city. If the desire for the removal of the Sentinel emanated from the Roman Catholic section, and this seems to be the fact, they have surely defeated their own ends; for this persecution will mean that the circulation of the Orange Sentinel will go up with a bound.

Nothing would serve the purpose of the Review better, so far as circulation is concerned, if our evening contemporary were to start a campaign for our extermination, for we certainly would not take it "lying down." We would make a determined kick for our existence, and doubt not but we would come out of the struggle very much alive and with a better circulation, for there is nothing like exercise for the "circulation."

There is a vital principle involved in this attempt to expel one paper, because it contains controversial matter on one side of a question, and retain another which publishes equally controversial matter upon the other side. Controversy is not necessarily a bad thing. The Review expresses, every day, opinions which a great many people disagree with; yet these people read these views without the least desire for the editor's blood or the discontinuance of the paper.

One of the objections that were [illegible] the Library Board is that the Sentinel is the organ of a "recognized secret society," and that such publications are prohibited by the by-laws of the Board. This is quite reasonable. The Orange Order is said to be a secret society. What secrets they have we suppose are very minor ones. They certainly make no secret of their views in religious and political matters. But if this secret society by-law is to be applied fairly, it would surely apply equally to the Catholic papers, for there is no more obviously and admittedly secret society than the great Roman Catholic Church. The Society of Jesus is without doubt the most highly organized secret service in the world. This fact is not stated out of any ill-will or bigotry, for although we are opposed to that organization in so far as it affects political and religious liberty, yet we are not blind to the many noble, unselfish and deeply spiritual men who call themselves Catholics.

If the Sentinel is extreme in its views and its antagonism to Roman Catholicism, it is merely the natural co-relative to the other extreme, and this Berlin squabble is an illustration of where extremes meet. There is nothing to be lost by liberty and tolerance. There is no surer way to excite antagonism and increase bitterness than by trying to stifle conviction. You may tie down the lid of a boiling kettle and plug up the spout, but you had better keep out of its vicinity.

SHOULD PREACHERS SMOKE?

The Christian Guardian does not smoke, and it does not like smoking preachers. The editor is a little tolerant of lay smokers, but says that "most smokers in this country feel in their hearts that they would much rather their preachers did not smoke." If this be true of most smokers, then they are a miserably selfish lot, to enjoy the fragrant weed themselves and yet deny the solace of its fumes to their pastor, who has to bear their sorrows and go short in his salary in order that they may indulge in tobacco.

It is to be feared in these days that preaching has become reversed. The pulpit is no longer the fountain of expostulation, the pew has now taken up the dictatorship and is guilty of the hypocracy with which it sometimes charged the pulpit—"do as I say, not as I do." It is rather surprising that the editor of the Guardian, who was once a preacher himself, should countenance this arrogant hypocracy of the pew.

To stigmatize a preacher because he smokes is to make either a hypocrite or a coward of him. It is no greater sin for a preacher to smoke than for any other man. The Guardian concludes by saying: "It does seem hard to understand how the body, which is a temple of the Holy Ghost, can be at the same time the willing servant of the tobacco habit." The body of a preacher is of the same clay as that of his people, and if the Spirit has an abhorance of tobacco fumes in a preacher, the same condition applies to the people in the pew. If one were to carry out the "Temple" simili, it might be inferred that smoking was almost a necessary function, a sort of ceremony, a burning of incense to drive away evil spirits. Jerome K. Jerome once said that "no man can think evil thoughts over a pipe."

There is one argument which has always prevailed with us in comparing smoking with drinking, and that is that while we have known many men to beat their wives after drinking, we have never known one to use violence as the result of smoking. Doubtless many would claim that the pipe has often soothed their savage breast and enabled them to look upon the world philosophically through the thin veil of my lady Nicotine.

Smoking is a habit that on sanitary lines cannot be defended, except as a disinfectant in an unhealthy and putrid atmosphere. It is not good for the eye-sight and its effect upon the nervous system is not always beneficial [illegible] by weakening. Altogether it is not a clean habit. But there are many far worse which smoking sometimes allays, and this narrow and partial spirit displayed by our friend the Guardian will only result in the lay smoker filling his pipe once more in hypocritical complacency to contemplate the virtues of abstinence in his pastor through the aromatic halo of tobacco smoke.

NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. From places where the first class fare is less than $2.50, a return ticket will be issued for single fare plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the province, except the territory west of Azilda on the C.P.R. round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held in Canada. Poultry entries number over 3,500, with pigeons canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breading and increased production.

THE NEW PHILOSOPHY LABOR AND PROPERTY

Mr. Burnham Explains the New Labor Movement in Dublin

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Since publishing my article upon Progressiveism, several have asked me to state shortly the meaning of the new movement that has produced such passionate disturbance in Dublin. It has gained five million votes in one year in the U. S. So far as I understand it, and I have been studying it diligently for some time, the new modern movement bases itself not on the rights of property but on the rights of persons. In a word, Civil law originally applied to property (first of land then of trade). The Criminal law was the law that applied to persons. Then came Free Competition or Free Trade, when the civil law protected goods and not people and left the wage-earner at the mercy of the money-owning class. "This must be corrected" says labour, "The laws are all in favour of money and property. We are getting a few laws like the Compensation Act passed for the protection of Labour but there are many well-recognized and very far-reaching unequalties yet to be redressed".

This is the present attitude of Labour. It is not State Socialism. It does not aim to put the State in the place of the Capitalist or of his predecessor the Free Trade and Free Competition fiend who got the laws all his own way and wanted them left that way. The latter call that FREE Trade. Labour however proposes to put all people on a fair footing before all laws with no special privileges which Freedom of Trade necessarily gives. The State will not take charge of the new order, otherwise it would be merely a case of the politicians in parliament taking the place of the capitalists. The State will be merely Commissioners to do what the people say by the Referendum that they shall do. Labour will not then obey laws made by people nominally representative but really hostile. It will make the law itself and cannot be betrayed. To understand the impending change it is necessary to read the history of Labour and property from the 4th century. Since Labour is not supposed to have property it is necessary to have laws that protect the person instead of those only that protect property. This is the New Philosophy.

Yours Truly,

J. H. BURNHAM

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Aggie's childlike face changed swiftly its expression from a sly eagerness to sullenness.

"You know perfectly well, Mary Turner," she cried indignantly, "that I only said a few words in passin' to my brother Jim. And he ain't no common pickpocket. Hully gee! He's the best dip in the business."

"But you must not be seen speaking with him," Mary directed, with a certain air of command now become habitual to her among the members of her clique. "My cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch, must be very careful as to her associates."

"He just stopped me to say it's been the best year he ever had," she explained, with ostentatious vanity.

"How can that be when the dead [illegible] John street?"

"The [illegible]" Aggie [illegible]. "Why, Jim takes lunch every day in the Wall street Delmonico's. And only yesterday he went down to police headquarters just for a little excitement, 'cause Jim does sure hate a dull life. Say, he told me they've got a mat at the door with 'Welcome' on it in letters three feet high. Now, what do you think of that! And, oh, yes!" she continued happily, "Jim, he lifted a leather from a bull who was standing in the hallway there at headquarters! Jim sure does love excitement."

Mary lifted her dark eyebrows in half amused inquiry.

"It's no use, Agnes," she declared, though without entire sincerity; "I can't quite keep up with your thieves' argot—your slang, you know. Just what did this brother of your do?"

"Why, he copped the copper's kale," Aggie translated, glibly.

Mary threw out her hands in a gesture of dismay.

Thereupon the adventuress instantly assumed a most ladylike and mincing air which ill assorted with the cigarette that she held between her lips.

"He gently removed a leathern wallet," she said sedately, "containing a large sum of money from the coat pocket of a member of the detective force." The elegance of utterance was inimitably done. But in the next instant the ordinary vulgarity of enunciation was in full play again. "Oh, gee!" she cried gayly. "He says Inspector Burke's got a gold watch that weighs a ton, an' all set with diamon's, which was give to 'im by admirin' friends! We didn't contribute."

"I have an important engagement with Dick Gilder."

"Given to him," Mary corrected, with a tolerant smile.

"What difference does it make?" Aggie demanded scornfully. "He's got it, ain't he? Just as soon as I get time I'm goin' after that watch—believe me!"

"No, you are not. You are under my orders now. And as long as you are working with us you will break no laws."

"But I can't see"— Aggie began to argue with the petulance of a spoiled child.

"When you were working alone did you have a home like this?"

"No."

"Or such clothes? Most of all, did you have safety from the police?"

"No; but, just the same, I can't see"—

"Agnes, the richest men in this country have made their fortunes, not because of the law, but in spite of the law. They made up their minds what they wanted to do and then they engaged lawyers clever enough to show them how they could do it and still keep within the law. Any one with brains can get rich in this country if he will engage the right lawyer. Well, I have the brains, and Harris is showing me the law—the wonderful twisted law that was made for the rich. Since we keep inside the law we are safe.

"And now I must be off to a most important engagement with Mr. Dick Gilder."

CHAPTER VI.

A Tip From Headquarters.

AGGIE gave herself over to more cigarettes in an easy chair sprawled out in an attitude of comfort never taught in any finishing school for young ladies. Soon the coming of Joe Garson, who was usually in and out of the apartment a number of times daily, provided a welcome diversion. Aggie explained in response to his question that Mary had gone out to keep an engagement with Dick Gilder.

"Mary has been with him a good deal lately," he said, half questioningly.

"That's what," was the curt agreement.

"Think she's stuck on him?"

"Why not?" Aggie retorted. "Bet your life. I'd be if I had a chance. He's a swell boy, and his father's got the coin too."

At this the man moved impatiently, and his eyes wandered to the window. Again Aggie studied him with a swift glance of interrogation.

"Joe, if there's anything on your mind shoot it."

"It's Mary," Garson explained, with some embarrassment; "her and young Gilder."

"Well?" came the crisp question.

"Well, somehow," Garson went on, still somewhat confusedly, "I can't see any good of it for her."

"Why?" Aggie demanded, in surprise.

"Old man Gilder's got a big pull, and if he caught on to his boy's going with Mary he'd be likely to send the police after us—strong! Believe me, I ain't looking for any trip up the river."

"We ain't done nothin' they can touch us for. Mary says so."

"Whether we've done anything or whether we haven't don't matter," he objected. "Once the police set out after you they'll get you. Russia ain't in it with some of the things I have seen pulled off in this town."

"Oh, can that 'fraid talk!" Aggie exclaimed roughly. "I tell you they can't get us. We've got our fingers crossed."

A noise at the hall door interrupted her, and she looked up to see a man, while behind him appeared the maid, protesting angrily.

"Never mind that announcing thing with me," the newcomer rasped to the expostulating servant in a voice that suited well his thick set figure, with the bullet shaped head and the bull-like neck. He was Cassidy, who had had Mary Turner in his charge on the [illegible] Gilder's office four years before.

"Hello, Joe!" he cried familiarly. "Hello, Aggie!"

"Well?" Joe demanded.

"Just a little friendly call," Cassidy announced in his strident voice. "Where's the lady of the house?"

"Out." Aggie spoke very sharply.

"Well, Joe," Cassidy went on, "when she comes back just tell her it's up to her to make a getaway and to make it quick."

"Say," Aggie retorted viciously, "you can't throw any scare into us. You hain't got anything on us. See?"

"Nothing on you, eh? Well, well, let's see." Cassidy regarded Garson with a grin. "You are Joe Garson, forger." As he spoke the detective took a notebook from a pocket, found a page, and then read: "First arrested in 1891 for forging the name of Edwin Goodsell to a check for $10,000. Again arrested June 19, 1893, for forgery. Arrested in April, 1898, for forging the signature of Oscar Hemmenway to a series of bonds that were counterfeit. Arrested as the man back of the Reilly gang in 1903. Arrested in 1908 for forgery."

"Haven't any records of convictions, have you?"

"No, but we've got the right dope on you, all right, Joe Garson." He turned savagely on the girl.

"And you're little Aggie Lynch,"
Cassidy declared as he thrust the note book back into his pocket. "Just now you're posing as Mary Turner's cousin. You served two years in Burnsing for blackmail. You were arrested in Buffalo, convicted and served your stretch. Nothing on you? Well, well!"

"Is that all you've got about her?" Garson demanded.

Again there was triumph in the officer's chuckle. He went on speaking with obvious enjoyment of the extent [illegible]

"And the head of the gang is Mary Turner. Arrested four years ago for robbing the Emporium. Did her stretch of three years."

"Is that all you've got about her?" Garson demanded with such abruptness that Cassidy forgot his dignity sufficiently to answer with an unqualified yes.

"Nothing in your record of her about her coming out without a friend in the world and trying to go straight? You ain't got nothing in that pretty little book of your'n about your going to the millinery store where she finally got a job and tipping them off to where she come from?"

"Sure, they was tipped off. We got to protect the city."

"Got anything in that record of your'n," Garson went on venomously, "about her getting another job and your following her up again and having her thrown out? Got it there about the letter you had old Gilder write, so that his influence would get her canned?"

"Oh, we had her right the first time."

"You did not. She was railroaded for a job she never done. She went in honest, and she came out honest."

"And that's why she's here now with a gang of crooks," Cassidy retorted.

"Where else should she be?" Garson demanded violently. "You ain't got nothing in that record about my jumping into the river after her. That's where I found her—a girl that never done nobody any harm, starving because you police wouldn't give her a chance to work. In the river because she wouldn't take the only other way that was left her to make a living, because she was keeping straight! Have you got any of that in your book?"

"Anyway," the officer went on, with a new confidence, now that his eyes were free from the gaze that had burned into his soul, "you've got to clear out, the whole gang of you—and do it quick."

"We don't scare worth a cent," Aggie snapped, with the virulence of a [illegible]. "You can't do anything to us. We ain't broke the law." There came a sudden ripple of laughter, and the charming lips curved joyously as she added, "Though perhaps we have bent it a bit."

"MY ONLY MEDICINE"

Says Mrs. Corbett, Are "Fruit-a-tives"
"They Keep Me In Perfect Health"

MRS. ANNIE A. CORBETT

AVON, ONT., May 14th. 1913

"I have used "Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion and Constipation with most excellent results, and they continue to be my only medicine. I am highly pleased with "Fruit-a-tives" and am not ashamed to have the facts published to the world. When I first started, about six years ago, to use them, I took four for a dose, but I cured myself of the above troubles and gradually reduced the dose to one tablet at night.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives" I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the disease as from these treatments.

Finally, I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised with a letter in which someone recommended them very highly, so I tried them. The results were more than satisfactory and I have no hesitation in recommending them to any other person. They have done me a world of good. I get satisfaction from them, and that is quite a lot". ANNIE A. CORBETT.

BALLAD OF IFS AND BUTS.

I might have been a millionaire
And led an autocratic life,
With power and wealth beyond compare,
Had I not married me a wife.
(Also I might be doing time
For leading a career of crime.)

I might have been the president
And over all the land held sway,
Not a suburban resident
Who's got to labor every day.
In politics I might have risen.
(But, then, I might have gone to prison.)

In certain of the sciences
I might have shone had I not wed,
Invented new appliances
Or found microbes that make men dead
(I'm glad I didn't anyhow.
The world is much too sickly now.)

I might have been a dramatist
Or some such literary guy
Or would be epigrammatist,
Wearing a most outrageous tie.
But matrimony my light hid—
And I am rather glad it did.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Snoring.

Snoring during sleep is generally an evidence of some obstruction in the nasal passages. Possibly the person is suffering from adenoids or thickening of the nasal mucous membranes, and, if so, he should consult his family physician. If it is a mere habit and there is no sign of obstruction of any kind, then bandaging of the mouth will sometimes bring about a cure. Apply the bandage sufficiently snug to prevent the air from getting into the mouth. Bandage the same as you would for a broken jaw, taking pains to close the mouth.

Watered Milk.

"Farmers," said the fair city visitor, "are just as dishonest as the city milk man."

"How d'ye make that out?" asked the farmer's wife.

"This morning," said the girl, accusingly, "with my own eyes I saw your hired man water the cows just before he milked them."—Exchange.

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

The season for colds is at hand and unless the mother keeps a continual watch over her little ones cold will seize them and often more serious results follow. An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will prevent colds or if they do come on suddenly the Tablets will clear the stomach and bowels and instantly relieve the baby from cold. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Baby's Party.

Mothers who wish to celebrate the first anniversary of the baby's birthday should give a party after the following suggestions:

All the guests should be mothers, who can also bring their babies, and the invitations should be sent out to the infants themselves with a note to the effect that "you can bring your mother with you if you like."

Other guests may be invited, but it is understood that all are to be baby worshipers, as the party is not to be spoiled by the presence of cynics.

The tea table should be decorated with little cradles of gilded wicker work filled with the appropriate bloom [illegible] knot of satin ribbon [illegible] harmonize. In the center should be an arch of flowers towering above the baby's birthday cake, decorated with its one white candle, or, as some say, two, one to be the "life candle" and to be kept for the second birthday cake.

A postcard photograph of the baby with the date of its birth in silver letters beneath, should be given to each guest and a small knot of flowers presented to all the babies assembled. One of the features of the afternoon is the baby guessing competition, in which every mother takes part.

Across the doorway is hung a curtain with a hole large enough to contain a baby's hand. One at a time each baby thrusts its fingers through this hole, and the mothers are asked to identify the child.

A prize of a baby's bib or a dainty pillowcase may be given, and the mother who makes the most mistakes is awarded a foolscap.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

Worth Saving?

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said nature must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. BROWN, 809 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kan.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A SUCCESSFUL BOYCOTT

How Hamilton Dealt With the Threatened Advance in Price of Milk

How to meet what is called the increased cost of living is not to let it advance. A little work together, a general unity of action, will nearly always have an effect. If the individual submits, one by one, presently all will have submitted, and the advance is there. Head it off before it gets a foothold, when and where practible. The City of Hamilton has shown us how to act. The milk companies there decided to advance the price of milk from 8c. per quart to 9c and 10c. Not because it was necessary, but because they felt like it, and supposed the people would stand for it at any rate.

They did not. On the suggestion of the mayor it was agreed, informally, to refuse to buy milk if the advance was made. There would be the inconvenience, of course, but on the other hand there was the inconvenience of shelling out more money for no larger value. The boycott was made.

The first morning the milk dealers sent a vehicle down to the Harvester [illegible] fected the sale of [illegible]. At different points in the city they had the same experience. All the milk refused had to be shipped.

The Milk Company said that it was only a flash in the pan and would die out. The next day saw a repetition of refusals, and things looked serious. The sales of condensed milk by local stores ran away up into hundreds of cans. At the end of a week the milk dealers capitulated, reduced the price to 8c. per quart and promised to be good.

That is exactly the way to meet these advances. A little self-denial will work wonders if enough people act together. Eggs would drop in price if we ceased to be an egg-eating people. The cost of living can be controlled—but it must be done by the individual, not by government.

There are a few necessities that are outside the line, such as coal. The use of sugar, for instance, is largely a matter of habit. So is the use of tobacco, cigars, etc. But the irony of the whole thing is, that while people growl at the cost of living, more money is squandered in personal gratification, in pool rooms, bowling alleys, etc., or in frivolous indulgences as would practically meet expenses if devoted to such purpose.

FINEST ON THE CONTINENT

The Grand Trunk Railway are in receipt of a letter from a prominent New York business man who visited Ottawa recently, an abstract from which reads as follows: "Permit me to speak my sincere appreciation of the Chateau Laurier. I did not think that Canada would ever have an hotel of this class but I now feel as if you had not only the finest hotel in Canada, but almost on the Continent. We certainly have nothing, even in Washington, that can compare with it."

Writ Issued

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

GOD BURIED MOSES, HIS SERVANT.

—November 16.—Deuteronomy 34: 1-12.—

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."—Psalm 116:15.

MOSES is one of the grand characters on the pages of history. His nobility looms up as a great patriot, general, judge and ruler of his people; and still grander does he appear in his relationship toward God. He was the personification of obedience and loyalty as a servant of Jehovah. In this he typifies Messiah. As we read, "A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren like unto me." (Deuteronomy 18:15.)—I am a diminutive picture of that great Teacher, Leader and King whom Jehovah has anointed to be the real Deliverer of Israel and the world from the bondage of Satan, sin and death.

Anyone may perceive that it required great patriotism to forsake Pharaoh's courts to cast in his lot with the Jewish nation, and to become their leader out of bondage into the Land of Promise. Anyone can note Moses' patriotism when, as mediator for his people, he pleaded with God for the forgiveness of their trespasses, declining the proposal that the nation be cut off and that he and his family inherit the promises instead.

Anyone can see that great faith in God was necessary for the position occupied by Moses. But comparatively few see the real depths of Moses' character; for only a few realize the Divine call to Israel and Moses' work as their mediator.

Moses, the Servant of God.

Moses smote it the second time.

We cannot help feeling sympathetic toward this grand servant of God—"the meekest man in all the earth." After so many years of patience, long-suffering and loyalty to God, in an unguarded moment Israel's great mediator failed in meekness and loyalty. Directed by the Lord to speak to the rock, which on a previous occasion he had smitten, Moses petulantly smote it the second time.

The rock whence came the life-giving stream represented the Rock of Ages—Messiah, who was to be smitten once more. Compare Hebrews 6:4-6.

The fact that Moses was used as a type of the Second Death class in no sense implies that he experienced the Second Death or that he cut himself off from Divine favor. The punishment he received merely helped to complete the typical picture—he might not enter Canaan.

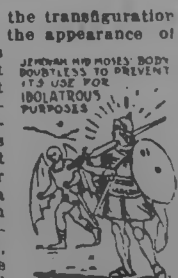
Canaan View From Mt. Pisgah.

Pisgah is one of the peaks of Mt. Nebo. From it Moses got a considerable view of the Promised Land, toward which his eye of faith had looked for eighty years and toward which he had laboriously guided Israel for forty years. This grand old servant of God, fully resigned to the Divine arrangement, was put to sleep by the Lord whom he served. The Jews have a saying that the Lord kissed him there.

Moses' place of sepulchre was hidden, doubtless to prevent anything [illegible] declares that Satan strove for possession of Moses' body, doubtless with a view to using it in some idolatrous way.

Moses Died and Was Buried.

We are not to overlook the fact that Moses died, and will not live again until the Divinely appointed time when, under Messiah's Kingdom, he will be resurrected. Meantime he has slept with his fathers, as the Bible generally records of all who died.



JEHOVAH HID MOSES' BODY DOUBTLESS TO PREVENT ITS USE FOR IDOLATROUS PURPOSES

Satan strove for Moses' body.

The account of the transfiguration of our Lord and the appearance of Moses and Elias with Him in that vision must not be made to contradict the statement that Moses died, and that the only hope for anybody is by a resurrection from the dead. (1 Corinthians 15:13, 14.) We have Jesus' own word for it that neither Moses nor Elijah went to Heaven. He declared, "No man hath ascended up to Heaven."—John 3:13.

Jesus explained that what the disciples saw on the mountain was not a reality, but a vision. "Tell the vision to no man." (Matthew 17:9.) Just so the trumpets, beasts, etc., of Revelation are not realities, but visions. St. Peter, who witnessed the vision, declares that it was a representation of Messiah's Kingdom. (2 Peter 1:16-18.) Moses represented one class and Elijah another, as participators with Jesus in His Messianic glory.

At the foundation of all God's dealings with both Natural and Spiritual Israel lies His great, oath-bound Promise to Abraham—"In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This was the first clear statement of God's purpose to remove the curse of death. From the very beginning He had premeditated sending the Lamb of God to redeem the world and to bring in a blessing instead of a curse.

In due time the Logos became Jesus, and laid down His life sacrificially. To Him were gathered the "Israelites indeed," to share in His sufferings and death and to be made partakers of His glory.

PETERBORO PAINTER IS IN HOSPITAL

Fred Dunnett, Sustained Serious Injuries in Fall at Toronto

Suffering from a broken hip and internal injuries, Fred Dunnett, a painter from Peterboro, is confined in the General Hospital at Toronto, as the result of an accident when he fell from the window of a school on Pape Avenue.

Dunnett was painting at the second storey window when he lost his balance and fell from the scaffolding.

His father, Wm. Dunnett, resides at the corner of McDonnel and Park streets, and he leaves on Sunday to visit his son at the hospital. The victim is said to be seriously injured.

A SUNDAY ON TUBERCULOSIS

Twice as Many Churches Wil Take Part in Movement

Preparations now in progress throughout Ontario for Tuberclosis Sunday in the churches, which is set for November 30, give promise of widespread observance of the day. The National Sanitarium Association under whose auspices the custom was insitituted just a year ago is in receipt of communications which indicate that the number of churches participating in the movement will be doubled this year and that in addition to the sermons of the various pastors a number of prominent laymen will take part in urging a more vigorous campaign against consumption.

The services are intended to be purely educational. No special collections will be taken. The sermons will deal with the work which has already been done to stamp out the plague, the efforts which are required to prevent its spread and the steps which have been projected for the future in Canada. Where the pulpits have not been entirely given up to laymen, it is expected that in many cases private citizens and officials who have been interested in the cause will be given an opportunity of speaking after the regular minister.

SERVICES AT KNOX CHURCH

The King's Business will be the special theme receiving attention in Knox church to-morrow and next week. Following the Laymen's Conference and looking forward to the every member canvass, the session of Knox church has made arrangements for a series of evangelistic services next week, commencing in the morning service to-morrow. [illegible] ford has been secured for the occasion. He is no stranger to Peterboro as he conducted a similar series in Knox Church two years ago with marked success.

During these services Miss Jessie McNab of Toronto will give valuable assistance with many solos.

BOOMING THE INTERCOLONIAL

With the ultimate view of the stimulation of industrial activity, the development of the tourist travel on a largely increased scale, and the general exploiting of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec, the Canadian Government Railways are making active plans for the year 1914.

The burden of advertising the attractions of Eastern Canada has largely been borne by the Intercolonial, and while encouraging results have justified the efforts in the past, it is felt that more can be accomplished by a systematic and better organized campaign, in which the Provinces and the people generally will be asked to co-operate.

A thorough and systematic canvass will be made of the territory by a representative of the Traffic department, in order to obtain such details as will assist the Railways in properly advertising the natural resources and attractions of the territory. It is expected that as a result of these enquiries there will be greater advertising activity on the part of the Railways during the coming year.

A. H. Lindsay, of the Traffic Department of the Canadian Government Railways, has already gone to Cape Breton to obtain data along the lines indicated above. A systematic enquiry has begun and will be continued until the entire territory has been covered.

MANY BOYS WERE PRESENT

When over 65 boys turn out to hear a vocation talk it is quite evident that they are very much interested. Boys to this number greeted Mr. H. B. Cowan, of the Farm and Dairy, last evening when he addressed the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A on "Newspaper Work." Mr. Cowan's outline of the work was of the most interesting nature, and the boys evinced great enthusiasm in the different lines of life connected in the work.

A musical program was also rendered by some of the members of the department.

Mr. Jas Connal has returned from the hunting grounds of the Shawanaga Club, in Parry Sound District and reports that the party, which is [illegible] deer on Thursday and expected to secure their complement before the chase was over. The other members will return on Monday.

BLIZZARD ON SUNDAY.

The Shawanaga camp is not far from Georgian Bay waters and on Sunday and Monday, the whistles of the steamers could be distinctly heard. After Monday the whistling ceased. On Sunday, the camp was visited by a blizzard of wind and snow. Many trees were uprooted and hurled about by the force of the wind and in numerous cases the upper parts of healthy pines were twisted off the trunk.

MOOSE TRACKS.

Apart from this blizzard, the weather was to the liking of the hunters. Moose tracks were discovered, but the big fellows had not been located when Mr. Connal left camp.

ANXIOUS TIMES FOR PARENTS

Children Often Seen Pining Away and Ordinary Medicine Does Not Help Them

The health of children between the ages of twelve and eighteen years, particularly in the case of girls, is a source of serious worry to nearly every mother. The growth and development takes so much of their strength that in many cases they actually seem to be going into a decline. The appetite is fickle, brightness gives way to depression; there are often serious headaches, fits of dizziness, or occasional fainting and a complaint of weariness at [illegible] blood has become thin and watery and the child must have something that will bring the blood back to its normal condtiion. At this stage no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their whole mission is to make new blood, which reaches every part of the body, bringing back health, strength and energy. Mrs. James Harris, Port Rowan, Ont., says: "At the age of thirteen my daughter began to look very pale and seemed listless and always tired. She did not take interest in her school work or in those amusements of girlhood. In fact she just seemed to drag herself about; complaining of always being tired; did not eat well, and did not sleep well at night. I took her to our doctor, who said she was anaemic, and advised me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." She took the Pills for nearly two months, when she was as well and lively as any girl could be, gained nicely in weight, and has since enjoyed perfect health. I am quite sure that what the Pills did for my daughter they will do for other pale weak girls. I have also used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills myself with the best results and can only speak of them in terms of greatest praise."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cenmts a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville Ont.

HAD GIVEN UP HOPE BUT MANAGED TO MAKE PORT

Brother of Mr. John Hill, Grocer, Fought Long and Hard Battle to Save His Ship and Crew.

Mr. John Hill, the George Street grocer, was greatly relieved last night to receive a message from his brother, Captain S. Hill, of the freighter Doric, which arrived in Fort Willian yesterday afternoon, after a battle of two days and two nights with the raging elements on the great lakes. When the boat slid into port, it was impossible to recognize her, owing to the heavy coating of ice and the damage as result of the battle with the stormy waters of Lake Superior. Captain Hill has sailed the great lakes for over forty years and in his message to his brother, said that never before had he seen such a storm and that on several occasions they had given up all hope of reaching port. All the men were sick leaving only the captain and the cook on the boat fit to do anything.

The Doric is a C. P. R. freighter plying between Fort William and other points.

MAIL ORDER HOUSE BUY NEWSPAPER

How the Big City Store is Getting Its Wares Before the Public

The value of the local paper to the local merchant lies in what it does for him, and very largely in what it does not do. The local paper can help to send trade out of its locality, and it may assist in keeping it there.

No papers in the province are as loyal to the local merchants as Peterboro papers. It is not that the papers have not been solicited to open their columns to the big city store, but that they decline, at a very considerable money loss to do so. This is outside the fact that a large number of merchants do not advertise at all, and they share equally in the papers' action with those who do.

The Dry Goods Review of Toronto prints the following in regard to the big stores and the city newspapers:

"The big departmental stores continue to extend their interests in or control of the daily newspapers in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg. A large interest in if not the control of another Toronto daily has just been acquired. This makes three dailies in Toronto in which these mail order houses are financially interested. In Montreal it came out in legal proceedings recently that one of the oldest daily papers there passed some months ago into the hands of the chief owner of a rising mail order house which aims to monopolize the trade in Eastern Canada. There are now nine dailies in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, which are known to be owned, or controlled by, the big store and financial interests, and while posing as the mediums of public opinion are the organs of these interests. The trade of these houses has grown enormously in these cities where these dailies circulate, but in the other cities and smaller places where there are good local newspapers, they have not made the same gains, because the local newspapers are well edited and are loyal to their local merchants and refuse to carry the advertising of the big city store. The only way in which the big dailies can make headway is by cutting their prices. They get $3 to $5 a year in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, but sell in other cities at 50c to $1 a year. This does not pay for the white paper on which the newspapers are printed, but the heavy deficits are made up by subsidies through big advertising contracts and in other ways, and by the low postal rates. The merchants and newspapers outside of these three big centres should get together and insist that no newspaper should have the privilege of the mails which has a lower subscription price outside than in the centre in which it is published or which sells at less than the cost of the paper used."

ONE WORD MORE ON THE CURFEW LAW BY ONLOOKER

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Allow me to correct an evident misunderstanding on the part of Mr. Rollins. I did not suggest, nor, so far as I know, did any-one request Mr. Rollins or any clergyman to undertake the prosecution of offenders or to have recourse at all to courts magistrate or crown attorney; nor did I pretend to have or expect Mr. Rollins to secure evidence for such a purpose.

The matter, so far as I personally know, at present does not seem to be one for the magistrate or the courts; but rather for parents and the clergy to consider.

The conditions, company and variety of entertainment at a place of amusement may all be quite lawful and yet wholly bad in their influence upon children who frequent it. Where such is the case the evidence necessary for a proper conclusion about it is quite open to ordinary observation, and in the case complained of, has already been placed before the Ministerial Association and later from time to time published. In my opinion the remedy is not necessarily detection of cases for punishment by the magistrate—at least not so far as a clergyman should be specially concerned.

To keep children and young people away from such a place by judicious advice to them and to their parents seems to me the proper and lawful course for a pastor to take; and the most effectual. This is, moreover, a duty concerning which no legal advice should be necessary. Have not clergymen always enjoyed the privilege of stating their objections to any practice, institution or resort they deem unwholesome, however lawful the same may be!—for example the liquor traffic, or public dance-halls, or resorts, about which the outward visible and audible signs are enough without detective work or specific charges of criminal practices. And further—had not the Ministerial Association before them more than a year ago the precedent of our important sect in this city whose clergy had already freely denounced the amusement resort in question without any danger of legal action against them!

Let me assure Mr. Rollins that neither this nor my former letter is intended to be unfriendly to him and I trust he will believe that I, a layman, set more value upon what I conceive to be his proper pastoral course of action than I do upon any efforts he can make in a legal way. If, nevertheless, he prefers to work in the direction of legal prosecution of offenders I wish success to his efforts. But he cannot fairly say that I expected him to take this course or to make a charge against any person or place without sufficient evidence, or to have recourse to the law court instead of the pulpit. Thanking you Mr. Editor and the Rev. Mr. Rollins for the opportunity to make these points clear, I am,

Truly Yours,
"ONLOOKER."

Enough has now been said on this subject. It is for the authorities to take the matter up. We are glad to see that action has already been taken towards a more strict enforcement of the present law, and that quiet work is to be carried on by men of the city interested in the moral welfare of our young people. This note does not exclude letters on the subject that are signed by the writers.—Editor Review.

An Apology

We wish to apologize to Mrs. Orlando Overlook. In our paper last week we had as a heading, "Mrs. Overlook's Big Feet." The word we had ought to have used is a French word pronounced the same way, but spelled fete. It means a celebration and is considered a tony word.—North Dakota Paper.

ERECTING STORE AT BROWNTON

Mr. A. Saunders to Have New and Up-to-date Quarters

The new store being erected by Mr. A. E. Saunders, the popular general merchant of Brownton, North Monaghan, should prove a big asset to this rapidly growing suburb. This past year Mr. Saunders' business has increased so much that his present quarters on Brown street are by far too small.

His new place of business is being erected on the corner of Brown street and Monaghan Road. The structure being brick, with dimensions 40 feet by 20 feet, will add greatly to the appearance of that section of the suburb, and should prove a good business location. The interior will be fittingly equipped with all the essentials of a modern general store. The building is being constructed by Mr. F. Finnie.

As Mr. Saunders is the postmaster for Brownton, this new store will also be the home of the post office. The operations will be completed about December 1st.

PETERBORO NOT ALONE

Mysterious Disappearance of Water at Hamilton

HAMILTON, Nov. 15.—In the unexplained loss of 1,300,000 gallons of water daily, the officials of the works department have a real mystery to solve.

An increase in the consumption of water to that amount was first noticed on Monday. Previous to that day, the average daily consumption was 9,000,000. When the meter registered Monday's consumption of water at 11,000,000 gallons, the officials attributed the increase to wash day and other causes over which they had no control. They confidently expected the consumption to decrease.

But Tuesday and Wednesday passed, and still the consumption hovered around the 11,000,000 gallon mark. Taking into consideration waste, etc., it meant that between 1,300,000 and 1,400,000 gallons of water were being used by the citizens over any day last week or for some time past.

The officials became alarmed. With cool, rainy weather the increase was unexplainable. Secretary Brennan dispatched a gang of men to look over the pipe line or any other point where there was likely to be a heavy leak. They came back and reported that the pipes were intact, and that no water was leaking.

Any person who can tell where 1,300,000 gallons of water can be concealed each day will confer a favor on the officials of the department. The milk strike is not believed to be the key to the mystery.

JEWELS, FURS AND HAIR ORNAMENTS FOR OPERA AND HORSE SHOW

THERE is no doubt but that the loveliest and most fashionably gowned women are seen at the opera and horse show, which open almost simultaneously the winter social season. As they are functions to which the general public are admitted, the fashions displayed influence the general trend of style in this country. Both events will be especially interesting this year because of the divergent modes—futurist, minaret and bustle puffs—wonderful materials and the curious undressed style of gowning. The opera is interesting in itself to music lovers, but all the world stares admiringly at pretty, elegantly gowned women. Between the acts one cannot complain of any lack of them, graceful, debonair, statuesque, grave or gay; all types are found in our cosmopolitan city, garbed in priceless silks, furs and jewels.

Jewels are always an interesting feature of opera gowning. Whether pearls are real or the set that has been copied to preserve the originals, it is often impossible to say. Diamonds so far have not the preference in America that is given to pearls, perhaps because nothing looks so lovely against the flesh as do their nacre tones. Diamonds are often worn in combination with pearls, for diamonds and lace are synonymous in fashionable elegance. Some of the latest designs in evening jewelry are shown here—a long and short pearl necklace worn in combination, and the flexible brooch to pin among the laces of the corsage, of pearl and diamonds, with little pendant ends that sway with every move of the wearer. There is also the new Empire dinner ring, that is something new and very attractive on the hand. The setting, very high and wide, holding a single pearl or uncut stone, is itself a raised beautiful filigree of brilliants forming an interlaced design. Rings with square settings have a large emerald or ruby flatly set, surrounded with small diamonds. Flexible bracelets, like the one pictured here, made of strings of pearls caught by a slide of diamonds, can be worn with the evening gown, with or without a glove. Besides the long and short ropes of pearls, sometimes a flexible pendant is worn in combination with a string of pearls.

Hair ornaments come in for no small share of attention this season. They are mostly transparent flexible bands, gold, silver, lace or net or embroidery, and are often made in designs that seem not unlike crownless millinery. Aigrettes and goura plumes are an addition to these lacy chaplets. A very varied assortment may be found in New York, from the rosebuds and gold satin ribbon snoods for the débutante to the Oriental and Russian head dresses of barbaric charm.

Two are shown here, one a lovely gold lace with brilliant lamé ribbonlike threads that is a sort of idealized barrette, preserving the beautiful curve of the back of the head and neck, the other, a shaped gold lace band decorated with goura feathers. This latter type of decoration seems destined to supplement some of the dresses of wonderful brocades that cost from $25 to $50 a yard, fabrics really fit for a princess.

Evening coats have lost none of their elaborateness of last year, but an odd thing has happened in their designing; they are often of fur on the outside, while the brocades so popular last year have been transfered to the inside for linings, giving the wrap of this season a really royal elegance. Indeed, some of them have been made so they can be worn either side out. These fur pelts are of unthinkable suppleness, and are trimmed with fur boas of longer hair pelts and decorated with fringes, tassels, gold and silver laces, as if to display the utmost possible elegance.

In spite of this they are not overtrimmed and because of the taste displayed an evening coat this winter was fitting companion to the gown. One of the wraps shown here is of ermine, [illegible] by tufts. It is lined with a [illegible] white and gold brocade, the [illegible] edge decorated with a large white [illegible] fur, the [illegible] edges by a deep [illegible] of white chenille with tasselled heads [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] and supple winter [illegible] we see [illegible] of

Josaine, in La Femme Chic à Paris, gives a few hints for the shooting costumes. "With the reopening of the hunting season," she writes, "the receptions at the châteaux are pretext to wear new gowns, and if huntresses are rare at present, there are many women of wealth that adopt this very seductive costume which does not lack a certain swagger. Such pretty suits are made of ribbed velvet in charming tints that really this costume is tempting, and besides, what a charm there is to the high boots, fine and supple, that lace just to the knee!"

Frivoline, in l'Art et la Mode, reviews the different furs that will be employed in this winter's garb. She writes:—"The skunk from Buenos Ayres, in three gradations of tones, will ornament many of our robes, because it is the most reasonable of good furs. Civet also will be used, but in preference is seen in little garnitures of collars and cuffs more than in large garments, for which one would choose the [illegible] and seal. The [illegible] will be finer than ever and draped like muslin, ornamented with [illegible] or civet, furs that were very much the fashion last year and will be more than ever this winter."

[illegible] lightweight silk, or of sheer and supple mousseline, cut out deeply to show the graceful line of neck and shoulders."

"Up till now we have had only tentative décolletés — guimpes and corsages were opened more or less in round and heart shapes. Now, here we are at a complete décolleté for afternoon. It is a square, starting from the shoulders and descending just to the middle of the chest. When the toilet is elaborate enough this décolleté is outlined by ruches of foamy tulle or beautiful wavy lace which softens and clouds it, while chains and pendants fall in the centre—it is both charming and elegant."

Monsieur de Saverny, in Le Moniteur de la Mode, diverges a moment from feminine fashions to the equally interesting subject of interior decoration. "Do you like certain English styles?" he asks, "these comfortable and ingenious arrangements where careful research is disguised under apparent simplicity, and where all that can be imagined of inventive forethought renders each moment convenient and agreeable and is found placed as if by hazard? English styles are still fashionable."

"'Still fashionable!' This is as much as to say that you are already searching for new inspirations—that you are in love with novelty. But what is the novelty that seduces you? Is it that innovation of to-morrow, that 'not yet seen,' which astonishes first and which one is not at all sure to judge because the surprise it causes prejudices too much for or against it? The audaciousness of the Munich school will please you in this case. Of all the schools it is the most 'risk all.' The youngest, it is neither restrained nor guided by a glorious past, it ventures in unexpected forms and colors, into what conventional persons would call, without circumlocution, bad taste. But the conviction, the ingenious faith, the activity and the resolute will of the Munich artists impose a certain respect even from those who deplore their influence. This influence, at all events, is sure. Most of the things 'à la mode' that under a feminine pseudonym a celebrated woman's dressmaker offers to our snobbism come straight from Munich and were conceived and realized in Munich."

PRESENT fashions are all in favor of [illegible] figure, and the woman of [illegible] outline will need to be careful [illegible] of [illegible]. PROGRAM OF BOXING BOUTS AT THE RINK

Arrangements have been made to put on a boxing program at the Brock Street rink on Monday night, November 24, when some well known mit artists will been seen in action. Harry Westerby, of Toronto and Kid Ryan, of Rochester, will be with us again and endeavor to duplicate their performance of some years ago when they put up eleven rounds of fast work. The program includes a ten round bout between Tommy Pappas, the Fighting Greek and Artie Simmons, of Detroit.

Young Pierce, of Chicago, and Fighting Jackson, of New England, will appear for four rounds, and Knockout Bradley, of England, will attempt to live up to his name in a four round go with Jack Williams, of Winnipeg. In addition to this program, two local boys will do a turn.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

Three good games were played in the Senior Basketball League last night. The first contest was between the Tin-Ribs and the Cripples, the Cripples winning 20 to 7. Referee W. Flowers.

The second game was between the Plasterers and Dodgers. Score: Plasterers 12; Dodgers 1. Referee, W. Flowers.

The game of the night, however, was the Swankers-Saw-Bones contest. At full time the score stood 10 all, and after ten minutes' overtime the Swankers dropped a goal, winning a good game 12 points to 10. Referee, J. J. Thompson.

The Wrestling Class had a fine turn out last night, and for two hours some good work was indulged in. Senior Leaders meet to-night for floor work at 6 o'clock. Supper at 7.

The game in the Senior League for Monday night is Cripples vs. Dodgers. Wrestling class Monday evening at 8.30 p.m. There will be no gymnasium classes on Tuesday, Nov. 18th, owing to the senior banquet being held in the gymnasium.

GATHERING WORMS.

Supplying British Anglers Is a Remunerative Business.

Among the many curious trades that are carried on in different parts of Britain, that of worm gathering is one of the most weird, but certainly one of the most remunerative. The chief centre of this strange industry is Nottingham, upon which the anglers of England depend chiefly for their supply of red worms. They are the most tempting bait for certain classes of fish, and to catch the worm requires almost as much skill as to hook a fish. "Worms," said a veteran catcher who has been forty years in the business, "are the craftiest of creatures. When the night is cold only the tip of them is seen on the grass, and it is difficult work to draw them out of their holes. The best time to catch them is on a warm night after a shower of rain, when they can be found lying full-length on the grass. Even then you have to work warily, for if alarmed they dart underground like a flash."

It is for barbel-fishing that the worms are principally used, and every [illegible] quantities are sent to an- [illegible] Thames. Half a crown [illegible] for worms, and in a favorable season a good gatherer can "bag" as many as 30,000 a week. One man has been known to have earned $5 in one night, but that is a record which is seldom reached even by the most expert "wormer." In a dry season, however, the price goes up by sixpence, and sometimes a shilling, a thousand, and in a very exceptional year it rose to as high as five shillings a thousand.

The greatest demand for worms is in the weeks immediately preceding bank holidays, and it is not uncommon for as many as 100,000 to be dispatched from Nottingham during that period. But, strange to say, the worm is not so popular as a bait as it was some years ago, nor has the general demand increased in proportion to the number of fishermen.

CONVICTS AS HEROES.

When Danger Threatens They Often Distinguished Themselves.

"They worked nobly, many of them risking their lives, and suffering severe burns in their efforts to save the machinery from complete destruction. More than one man staggered out with his clothes actually in flames, and his hair and eyebrows singed away."

Who were the men?—the owners of the machinery, or workmen employed in the factory who knew that if it were destroyed, they would be left without employment? Not a bit of it. They were convicts, imprisoned in the great American convict prison of Sing Sing, which stands on the bank of the Hudson River, above New York.

It was on July 23rd last that this fire broke out in the prison workshops and raged furiously. But for the splendid work of two hundred "trusties"—as they call the good conduct men—the whole prison might have been destroyed.

But do not imagine that pluck of this kind belongs exclusively to the American criminal. In October, 1865, a new governor, Mr. George Clifton, was appointed to Dartmoor prison in England, and on the very day that he arrived the governor's house which stands on the right hand side of the prison gate, as you face it, caught fire. As Mr. Clifton drove up, the roof and attic were all ablaze.

The chief warden had already collected a gang of about thirty trustworthy men, and set them to work with buckets. There is a pond just across the road, and they formed a chain and passed the buckets like lightning. "No free men," said an eye-witness, "could have worked harder, and as for those who were on the ladder they never flinched although showers of sparks were beating down upon them and burning holes in their clothes.

They worked so well that they got the flames under, but some were so exhausted that they had to be helped back to their cells.

One man named Newbrook fainted, and was taken to the hospital. He was delirious that night and could not leave his bed for more than three weeks.

"Again in February, 1895, the wash-house at Dartmoor prison caught fire, but thanks to the splendid conduct of the prisoners"—as the governor wrote in his report—the flames were got under before serious damage was done.

On March 10th, 1891, there fell upon the south of England the worst blizzard of snow [illegible] the heights of Dartmoor, [illegible] furiously for [illegible] cold was terrible, the drifts were piled forty feet deep, and did not melt until the following June.

On the 13th the sheep began to die. Two prisoners asked to see the governor, and volunteered to lead a party to rescue the poor creatures. Some forty convicts joined them, and armed with shovels cut their way through the huge drifts amid the stinging ice blast, and succeeded at great risk to themselves in rescuing nearly all the flock.

Many a convict has risked his life in helping a warder attacked by some prisoner who has suddenly run amok. At Portland, some few years ago, was a man whom we will call Thomson, who was noted and feared for his mad fits of rage.

He had already got into trouble for throwing a bath plug at the governor, and for attempting to assault a warder with his own baton. On the latter occasion it took three warders to get him down.

One day, one of the principal warders was quietly going his afternoon rounds, and presently entered the laundry where Thomson was at work. Without the slightest warning, Thomson sprang upon him like a maniac and hit him over the head with a heavy iron spanner.

The warder dropped like a stone, but Thomson, not satisfied with what he had done, was about to hit him again, when a quiet elderly convict who was working near by rushed at the lunatic, collared him, and threw him down.

Before Thomson could get up a second convict came to the help of the first, and between them they managed to overpower the kicking, cursing, biting brute.

Edward Fitzgerald, who was among the least superstitious of men, once had a similar experience to that of Capt. Marryat. The incident is recorded in "Tennyson and His Friends," a book published about two years ago. Fitzgerald told a story of a vision; how he had one day clearly seen from outside his sister and her children having tea in the dining-room. He then saw his sister quietly withdraw from the room, so as not to disturb the children. At that moment she died in Norfolk."

RICHES OF WEST AFRICA.

Officer's Dramatic Discoveries—Where No White Has Ever Been.

Some interesting particulars of the new trunk railway, the construction of which will form one of the most important features of Sir Frederick Lugard's administration of Federated Nigeria are given by Reuter Agency.

The chance discovery of Port Harcourt, the coast terminus of the line by Lieut. Hughes, R.N.R., the commander of the Government yacht Ivy was made under dramatic circumstances, and the fact that the projected railway will cut through the very heart of the mysterious and almost unknown centres of the strongest forms of juju and fetish worship should provide incidents which, as construction advances, will prove not less exciting than those which attended the building of the Uganda Railway.

The whole line, which will be 550 miles in length, of the standard African gauge, is estimated to cost £3,000,000, and to occupy four or five years in construction.

For years past attention has been directed to the necessity for opening up a part of Africa which is not only the most thickly populated region on the continent, but also includes the richest palm oil belt in the world, and after the discovery of a coal-field at Udi extending for over a thousand square miles and yielding coal showing 75 per cent. of the value of the best Welsh coal, the question of a railway became more pressing.

Recently Lieut. Hughes found a hitherto uncharted creek which to the surprise of all showed a depth of 50 feet of water along-side a precipitous cliff 45 feet high, a condition of things unknown anywhere between Sierra Leone and the Congo.

On this discovery being reported the governor, in March last, commissioned the Director of Railways and the Director of Marine to investigate the matter, and as a result it was established that the newly-discovered creek, though not shown on any map, is really the main channel of the Bonny River.

A remarkable series of cliffs extending for three-quarters of a mile and averaging 45 feet above high water was discovered among the swamps. Opposite these cliffs soundings showed a depth of 70 feet of water. Armed with machetes, the Director of Railways, the Director of Marine, and the commander of the Ivy landed, and by means of a rope ascended the cliffs and cut through a section of almost impenetrable growth twelve feet in height.

Lieut. Hughes then ascended a tree to view the country. A few people were met, and it was discovered that no white man had been there before. Further investigation showed that the general conditions of the place were such as had never been hoped for on the West African coast, and the spot has been called Port Harcourt and selected as the terminus of the railway.

Not Lord Roberts.

Some little while back Lord Roberts had promised to review a boys' rifle brigade at Glasgow. At the last minute, however, he was forced to cancel the engagement and a local notability was hastily substituted, but the managers of the affair thought it only right to notify ticket purchasers that the famous soldier would not be present. In one instance they sadly overrated the effect of the announcement. A small youth who was to take part in the parade had come to get two tickets for his father and mother. The manager told him as [illegible] Lord Roberts that father and mother are coming to see—it's me."

enjoyable evening spent

A couple of very pleasant hours were spent last evening in the parlor of the George Street Methodist Church when the members and several ex-members of the Onward Young Ladies' Bible Class were entertained by Mrs. W. J. Stubbs and the officers of the class. The gathering numbered well over 50 young ladies. That the untiring efforts of Mrs. Stubbs are highly appreciated was self evident. During the course of the evening the following program was rendered after which dainty refreshments were served;

Opening Hymn. 131.
Prayer.
Piano solo—Miss Sweetman.
Chairman's remarks.
Reading—Miss Harrison.
Guitar solo—Miss Read.
Reading—Miss Campbell.
Instrumental duet—Misses McKee.
Picture Gallery Contest.

Several local young people attended the dance held last night in the town hall at Keene, under the auspices of the Keene Young Men's Club. Mr D. Kenneally acted in the capacity of floor manager, whiel the music was supplied by Tucker's Orchestra.

BAZAAR FOR ANGLICAN CHURCH

Distinguished Personages in England as Patrons

The Review is informed by the Rev. J. Price, the general secretary of the bazaar in this city, that the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Plymouth, Lord Penrhyn, and Mr. Louis V. Harcourt, the first Commissioner of Works in the British Cabinet, have added their patronage to this great and altogether unique bazaar. It is to be hoped that the English Church people in Peterborough will rise to the occasion, for such an opportunity is not likely to occur again for a long time to help the Anglican Church in this part of Ontario. The object in view is worthy of the great effort that is now being made by the promoters of the Bazaar, which is to provide an adequate accommodation for divine worship in the very rapidly growing district of the South end of the city.'

The Bazaar is to be held in the Armories. The band of the 57th Regiment has been engaged to play on the afternoon and evening of each of the three days, viz., the 27th, 28th and 29th inst. A full program of [illegible] will be published [illegible] of the Bazaar which will be issued about the end of next week.

NEW ROLLING STOCK FOR GRAND TRUNK

The Grand Trunk Railway System has just taken delivery of the following new rolling stock: 20 Mikado type locomotives, 63 wheel, No. 550 to No. 569 inclusive, from the Montreal Locomotive Works; 537 box cars from the Canadian Car and Foundry Co., Turcot, Que.; 220 box cars from the Eastern Car Co., New Glasgow, N.S.

Display of Silverware

Many people have been attracted to the tastefully decorated window at the Peterborough Hardware, where an exhibit of Community silverware has been arranged. The decorations of the window and the picture of Miss Fade Away, together with the display of silverware brings about a very pretty effect.

HOW MUCH SHALL I GIVE THIS YEAR?

By F. A. Conners, Pastor, Park Street Baptist Church.

If I refuse to give this year
To missions, one and all,
Then I have really cast my vote
In favor of recall.

If I give less than former years
Then I am dissipating
The ranks of Gospel heralders,
Who are His word relating.

If I give just the same this year,
As I have given before,
That means I favor no advance
To work done heretofore

Forgetting that the Lord hath said,
To all that He doth call,
Go give the blessed word of life,
To nations one and all.

But if I do increase my gift,
Then I have made it clear
That I do favor progress in
The mission field this year,

This is the best of evidence
In view of such condition,
That I do seek to carry out
The terms of His Commission.

CHOIR MEMBERS WERE ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Allen, Mr. and Mrs Richard Lees, Mr. and Mrs. George Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Kerr Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Petrie, were associated with Rev. and Mrs. Rollins in entertaining the choir of St. Andrew's church, at the Manse last evening when there was an attendance of about forty.

PETERBOROUGH MASONIC LODGE CELEBRATES 50th ANNIVERSARY

A Brilliant Gathering Assists at the Observance, and Enjoys a Delightful Evening

Anniversaries such as that celebrated by Peterborough Masonic Lodge, No. 155, last evening, come only once in fifty years. The years that intervene have seen two generations of Masons come and go with only one exception. The span of life as we call it, is no longer in the Masonic Lodge than in private life. The Great Architect of the Universe calls inexorably, and brethren alike obey His mandates. Two generations, taking up the work, building up by precept and example the lodge, adding strength to the Order in the town—now the city— district and province. Not only has the lodge prospered but the sister lodge, Corinthian, No. 101, fourteen years its predecessor, has likewise gained as well as other branches of the craft, the Royal Arch, Corinthian Chapter and Moore Preceptory. On the membership roll of all these are the names of citizens the most useful, public spirited and respected amongst a large and important community.

It may be of interest to place on paper the facts with reference to the institution of the lodge, and notice that it was established under dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and Grand Master M.W. Bro. T. D. Harrington, the dispensation being dated Januray 27th., 5863.

The Charter Members are as follows:

GEORGE BURNHAM, W.M. elect.
ROBERT STEVENSON, S.W. elect.
ALLAN T. HUFFMAN, J.W., elect
P. C. BLAICHER, Secretary.
N. HOFELLER, Treasurer.
HENRY LAWSON, S.D.
SAMUEL RIDPATH, J.D.
THOMAS GALLEY, J.D.
LEWIS GRANT.
I. J. CHRISTIE.
J. M. BURNS.
WILLIAM HELM.
W. BRUCE FERGUSON.
B. KIMBALL.
J. A. BUTTERFIELD.
A. SMITH.
H. AITKINS.
JOHN DRAKE,

was afterwards named as Tyler. Of these who were interested in the organization and institution of the lodge, and others who joined the Order in this lodge in the very early days, only one is living, Bro. J. L. Davidson of No. 815, George street, city. All others have passed away.

Bro. Davidson was proposed at a [illegible] 5th, 5863. At this meeting propositions [illegible] received from Robert Grant, James M Dunn and John S. Peters. The last two were principal and teacher of the local Grammar school. These candidates were received and initiated.

At the regular meeting held on April 10th, 5863, other candidates were offered the number indicating that the lodge looked forward to a fairly large membership. Among these were names, afterwards very familiar to the town, including Geo. A. Cox, Alex. Graham, Chas. Cameron, John Manson, R. Romaine, G. W. Hastings and many others.

The early minutes of meetings record faithfully, and at times minutely the transactions of the lodge, and indicate that the Order found favor with the best of the men of the town, and as a consequence the membership attained a considerable number very quickly. The lodge prospered from year to year, and is the largest and one of the most important in the district. The present membership is 200.

The details of the evening's entertainment were placed in the hands of an able committee, with W. Bro W. G. R. Higgins, and his fellow officers of the lodge. Sub-committees divided up the work and the result is a distinct credit to the good arrangements made, both for the comfort and entertainment of the gathering.

Among the decorations in evidence was a flag hung over one door leading to the ante-room, which had accompanied the British army through the Crimean war. It was well preserved and was of red ground inscribed with Masonic emblems, and had belonged to one of the regimental Masonic lodges.

In addition to being the 50th anniversary, it was "Ladies' Night." Wives, sisters and daughters of members came in goodly number. The handsome costumes and colors of the attractively dressed ladies lending a pleasing contrast to the sober garb of the gentlemen, though this was relieved by the handsome regalia worn on the occasion. A pleasing program of music and songs was given. The orchestra played brightly and in addition short addresses by the Most Worshipful Grand Master and brethren, filled in an hour acceptably. Refreshments were served in the dining room. Bro. Thos. Hooper being the caterer and providing a most enticing and inviting repast. The viands were served to the Company by members of the lodge who excelled in the capacity of waiters.

The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, Bro. W. D. McPherson, Toronto, was accompanied to the dias by a group of brethren, and further on was introduced to the assembly by Rt W. Bro. John Crane. The Grand Master was received in an appropriate manner as benefitting a distinguished member of the craft.

After expressing the pleasure he had in being the guest of the Lodge on such an occasion, coming as it did only once in each fifty years, he made some general reference to the Order, its principles, the devotion of its members, the purity of its animating ambitions and the fraternal features of the organization. The Order was widely distributed over the world, and its influence for good was recognized and approved.

Masons were quite willing to be judged by the works they did and by the benefits they bestowed. To all he would say that the work of Masons was to help men to build up in their inner consciences an appreciation of duty to themselves, to be better citizens and to follow and obey the commands of the Great Architect of the Universe. Men of the best intellect come to the Order from all ranks of life. To woman our care, affection and respect. As mothers they direct the impulses of the growing child, and at maturity we receive their sons into our Order and surround them with good and helpful influences. We as a people, are heirs of the treasures of the world. It is all ours, and shall we not preserve them. For our liberties hundreds of martyrs have yielded up liberty and life. We are the trustees for the future of the great heritage that has descended to us from our fathers. Masonry helped men to build up a character. On such occasions as this it comes to one to realize what an honor it was to be the Chief Head of so honorable a Craft. Our national, provincial and legislative life all contributed to the membership. From the throne of the governor-general, the chair of the premier, the seats of the members came adherents of the Masonic Order. It was a good thing that the men who rule and lead our public affairs, who have learned to rule and obey were taught such lessons in the Masonic Lodge.

He had, he said, a most pleasing duty to perform at this fiftieth anniversary. There was an honored brother of fifty years' service in the Lodge—Bro. J. L. Davidson, and the Lodge, as one man, felt that this long and loyal service should be fittingly recognized. He was commissioned by the Lodge to present to Bro. Davidson a very handsome Masonic Jewel, appropriately inscribed to mark the occasion it commemorated. It would be, he said, a beautiful reminder of the affection of his brother Masons, and something that would be treasured by his family and handed down to posterity. Bro Davidson came forward and the Grand Master pinned on the lapel of his coat the beautiful token of esteem and respect from his Lodge. After fastening the Jewel the speaker said, that he hoped that despite his age, Bro. Davidson would enjoy many years of intercourse with his Masonic brethren, and added his [illegible]

W. Bro. John Crane, in making announcement as to the refreshments and further entertainment, referred to the past history of the Lodge and to incidents called from the proceedings as recorded in the minutes.

The program, which was given in the handsome Blue Lodge Room, included solos by Miss Dorothy Allen, who cannot be heard too often and who sang delightfully. Mr. Morris Park contributed two songs. Mr. Park is one of the finest tenors of the city, and a general favorite. Miss Mignon Telgmann, who has made for herself a position as a violiniste of rare merit and accomplishment, played two delightful selections, calling for most skillful execution. Each of these artists were heartily and deservedly encored. Miss Elsie Wright, who had consented to give an illustration of Scotch dancing, deferred her performance until the company gathered for refreshments, when she gave the very artistic and pleasing "Highland Fling," and was so successful that the audience insisted on a repetition. The Opera House Orchestra played during the evening.

As the evening grew on, members and wives went home, but the younger people remained for an hour of dancing.

DRAFT OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BILL IS NOW COMPLETED

Sir William Meredith Presents His Report to Government and Submits What Will be the Most Modern Measure of its Sort in the World.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Sir William Meredith, special commissioner of the Ontario Government on workmen's compensation, has submitted his final report to the Lieutenant-Governor and the Cabinet.

The commissioner points out that this problem is one of the most pressing in the country, that the present law works an injustice to the workingman, and it was with this idea in view that he endeavored to formulate his measure throughout.

The new Compensation Act of the province will be along the lines of the German law, with modifications. The two great points which had to be settled primarily were that the injured workman and his dependents would receive the compensation to which they were entitled, and that the small employer should not be ruined by having to pay compensation for the death or permanent disability of his workmen, caused by no fault of his.

By the new bill industrial diseases are put on the same footing as to the right of compensation as accidents. Power would be given by regulations to an executive board to add to the number or manner of disease if thought best.

The commissioner makes quite plain his preference for a board to take charge of the whole matter in its adjustment and carrying out, although an American expert had feared a political interference.

Sir William believes that no hard and fast rule should be laid down for the reserve fund, and that it should be left to the board to determine. The provision allows that the employers shall not be unduly or unfairly burdened, and that on failure of the board to maintain the fund Governor-in-council may require the board to make a supplementary assessment of a necessary sum.

The commissiner explains the outline of the draft bill which he submitted at the last session of the Legislature, and states that inasmuch as the inclusion of the railways was opposed by the three principal steam railways and others he saw no reason why they should contribute to an accident fund.

Schedule two also includes telephone and navigation companies, which are exceptional in character. In order to ensure additional security in this schedule provisions are embodied to require an employer to commute weekly or periodical payments and to keep workmen insured against accidents.

In referring to the exclusion from the act of farming, wholesale and retail establishments and domestic service, the [illegible] taken that the state of public opinion would hardly justify this step as yet. Provision is made to bring them in when the board sees fit.

The new act entirely abrogates the common law doctrine that an employe takes on the risks incidental to his employment, as based on the fallacious assumption that the wages a man receives are to include compensation for those risks.

Another serious matter is that in which when a workman is guilty of contributory negligence, with the employer also negligent, the employer is not liable no matter how slight the part of the injured man. In the new bill, contributory negligence shall not be a bar to compensation but shall be taken into account in the settlement.

In Sir William's judgment the furthest the Legislature should go in allowing the intervention of the courts should be to provide that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may state a case for the opinion of a divisional court of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

The crown is not included in the bill, but will call on the board in case of accidents to Government employes.

In the case of injury traceable solely to wilful or serious misconduct the commissioner's bill provides no compensation unless the injury results in death or serious disablement.

"The question in my mind is not what other countries have done," says the commissioner, "but what does justice demand should be done. I have no fear that it will handicap the manufacturers."

He shows that the workman will suffer under the new law to the following extent: (1) Loss of wages for seven days, if disability does not last longer; (2) pain and suffering for injury; (3) outlay for medical treatment; (4) loss of 45 per cent. of wages while disability lasts. All that the employer bears is the 55 per cent. of the injured party's wages while off duty. The burden which the workman is required to bear he cannot shift upon the shoulders of anyone else, but the employer may, and no doubt will, shift his burden upon the shoulders of the community, or, if he has any difficulty in doing that, will by reducing the wages of his workmen compel them to bear part of it.

The bill also calls for a substantial contribution from the Provincial Government.

Austrian Royalty In London.

EVIDENCE OF TIDAL WAVE

Curious Phenomenon Reported From Lake Erie

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—The theory that a tidal wave swept Lake Huron and caused the heavy loss to lives and shipping, is being advanced by old mariners of this place.

The steamer Calcite of the Wyandotte Transportation Co., bound for Port Colborne in charge of Captain Joseph Parsons, has arrived in Detroit and reports that on Sunday, Nov. 9, just abreast of Long Point, Captain Parsons, who was on the bridge, heard a terrific rumbling, washing sound far aft, and turning beheld a gigantic wave, seemingly about 30 feet high, sweeping toward his boat at a terrific rate.

His vessel was traveling straight ahead of it and there was not time to turn and head into the wave, so he continued to run before it. With a crash and crunch the wave struck the ship aft, tons of water pouring over her stern up over the after cabins and engine house and curling high up around the smokestack.

The ship leaped ahead from the force of the wave, and hundreds of tons of water rushed down the deck to the forward end of the craft. The skylights on the top of the engine house were broken in, but no other damage was done to the Calcite. Had the vessel been taken broadside by the wave which seemed to come from nowhere, the vessel would have been wrecked without a doubt.

With the news of the wave on Erie, local vesselmen are inclined to believe that just such a wave swept over Lake Huron. The very bottom of the lake was affected by the storm, as is shown by the delivering of the terribly decomposed body and wreckage from the fish tug Searchlight at Herbor Beach. The Searchlight disappeared on Lake Huron, April 23, 1907, and went down in history as a mysterious disappearance. Nothing from that day was heard of her until the body and wreckage washed ashore last Wednesday.

However, the suffragette will never insist on the privilege of being bald.

CORONATION, ALBERTA, Nov. 17—Angus Flynn, shopkeeper at Thorne, and formerly a minister here, died yesterday from injuries received at the hands of his wife while she was temporarily insane. Their child was killed at the same time and Mrs. Flynn is now in Edmonton jail charged with murder.

SCRIBBLES TOO MUCH.

Mad Letter Writer Will Be Deported to England.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—An order has been issued for the deportation of George F. Robinson, Richmond street west, who appeared in the Police Court Saturday and was found insane. This action, which will be performed by the Dominion immigration officers during the next two weeks, puts an end to a case which, although it has been concealed from the public up to the present, is of an uncommon nature.

Robinson's insanity was suspected from a mania he exhibited for writing letters to prominent persons and institutions in Canada and Britain. Several of these missives were published in the British journals, in which he wrote about conditions in Canada and the advisability of coming to this country to make a living.

Reels Stuck In Mud.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—While Mr. Cohen, his wife and four children were watching their home burn at No. 2,559 Cartier street Saturday the hose wagon was stuck in the mud on the street a few blocks away. The family had a narrow escape from death in the blaze. The street was in a fearful condition, so one fire horse balked, and the wagon stuck fast. Other horses had to pull it out.

Clinical Congress Says Surgeons Are Let Practice Too Soon.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—War against "legalized murder" by surgeons who are commissioned to wield the knife before they have been sufficiently trained, was declared at the closing session of the Clinical Congress Saturday.

To prevent "criminal malpractice" so far as possible, the congress appointed a committee to visit the State Legislatures of this country and the provinces of Canada to urge enactment of the following into law:

"Require physicians to have five years' experience in general medical practice before permitting them to practice surgery, ordering that two years of their practice be passed in active hospital work or under the direction of a surgeon generally recognized as of the highest attainments; requiring medical colleges to give full clinical advantages as part of their courses in medicine."

For some time he has been keeper of Nottawasaga lighthouse, three miles outside this harbor. He leaves a widow and family.

Some years ago he published a book of his experiences, which was widely read.

Missed Bullet; Eased Pain.

GENOA, Nov. 17.—Baron Paterno, the murderer of Princess Giulia di Trigana, a lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, underwent a second operation yesterday for the extraction of a bullet which he had fired into his head in an attempt to end his life after the murder.

The surgeons opened the cranium, but were unable to find the bullet. They removed, however, several extraneous bodies, which, it is believed, will relieve the patient of the severe pains from which he has long suffered.

DISASTER ON THE SEA PREVENTED

Cunarder Liner Goes to Assistance of Burning Ship

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 17.—The Spanish steamer Balmes, with her cotton cargo on fire, was towed into St. George's harbor yesterday morning by the tugs Gladisfen and Powerful, convoyed by the Cunard liner Pannonia. The Cunarder had on board 103 passengers of the Balmes, taken off the burning ship Friday morning in mid-ocean and while heavy seas were running after a forced draught race to the rescue in answer to wireless calls for help.

When the Balmes came to anchor in the harbor her hatches were lifted. Great clouds of smoke belched forth, but powerful pumps soon sent tons of water into her hold and drowned out the fire. The steamer is in good condition except for the damage done by the water and the fire in her cargo.

The fire on the Balmes was discovered Wednesday night at eleven o'clock, while the steamer was plowing eastward on her trip to Cadiz, Spain, from Galveston and Havana. The flames were in hold No. 2, and spread rapidly, the smoke penetrating to the engine-room and the stokehold. The second engineer and several members of the crew were partially suffocated, but stuck valiantly to their posts.

The wireless operator, by direction of Captain Ruiz, then began sending out calls for assistance. The call reached the Pannonia, some 180 miles to the north, bound for New York, and Captain Robert Capper answered that he would come to the Spaniards' aid. The British cruiser Suffolk also answered the Balmes' plea, but the message she sent was indistinct.

Turning south, the Pannonia, under forced draught, raced at top speed toward the spot where the Balmes had said she was in distress. All Wednesday night and throughout Thursday Captain Capper pressed the Pannonia. Thursday night the Spaniard hove in sight of the Cunarder, which was soon to leeward alongside the burning vessel.

Captain Capper stood by the Balmes until morning, and then took off her passengers, the captain and crew electing to remain on board their ship to navigate her and fight the fire. When the transfer of passengers had taken place, the Pannonia and Balmes headed for Bermuda.

MYSTERY IS SOLVED.

"Mystery Ship" In Lake Huron Is the Charles S. Price.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 17.—The mystery of the "mystery ship" is solved. The great steel freighter Charles S. Price, over five hundred feet long, lies on the bottom of Lake Huron, where she turned turtle on Sunday last during the awful storm which swept the lakes.

Diver Baker, of Detroit, in company with Captain Bob Thompson, on the tug Sport, unlocked the secret of the lake at break of day Saturday morning in short order, after disappearing beneath the surface of the water in his diving outfit.

For nearly a week anxious mothers and wives have waited for some inkling as to the identity of the big steamer. But not until Saturday, with a smooth lake and favorable conditions, could the name of the ship be learned.

When the tug steamed into the river from the lake Saturday morning the suspense tried the nerves of the marine men and anxious relatives. Captain Thompson and Diver Baker revealed the name of the steamer to the eager reporters. There is no boat under the Price, as Captain Thompson dragged his anchor around the sunken steamer and found no obstacle.

The Price appears to have turned over in turtle fashion and without a moment's warning to the crew. Diver Baker found no bodies. He says he believes there may be some, but he couldn't get inside the steamer to learn. It is probable that work will now be immediately begun by the owners of the Price.

TEN MORE BODIES ARE FOUND ON LAKE SHORE

All Efforts at Identification Will be Made at Goderich—Seven Freighter Which Were Lost Are Unaccounted for and Are Believed to Have Sunk Near Sarnia

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—Ten more bodies of members of the crew of the James Carruthers have been found near Port Albert, and are lying in a local undertaker's rooms awaiting identification.

Two other bodies from the McGean, found at Bayfield several days ago, were not brought here till yesterday some difficulty having been met owing to the undertaker at Bayfield not wanting to give up the bodies, in spite of the order that all bodies are to be brought here. All wore life-preservers, one body being completely clothed and wearing an overcoat and mitts. From the description given by the owners of the boat he answers the description of E. Oilson of Chicago, a Swede.

Nothing was found on the other body to make identification possible.

The tug Horton picked up lifeboat No. 1 of the Argus just outside the north breakwater, standing on end, because of one of her forward air tanks being gone. The boat was badly broken.

The lifeboat and tug Horton went down the shore as far as St. Joseph, but found no more wreckage of importance.

Captain Whitney of the Lake Carriers' Association has arrived here and has made his headquarters at the Bedford. Everything that can be done to identify victims will be done through that office. He left yesterday morning on the tug Toronto for up shore near Kincardine, returning in the afternoon, but nothing was found.

Captain Babb yesterday received a message from the constable at Zurich saying that some person was giving the farmers along the shore permission to remove the wreckage. He will leave in the morning for St. Joseph, where he will search with the constable for this man and also store away what is left.

Still Unaccounted For.

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 17.—With the identification of the overturned steamer as the Charles S. Price, one mystery has been solved, but the more serious question now being asked is, "Where are the steamers Hydrus, Argus, Scott, Carruthers, Wexford, Regina and McGean?"

The opinion expressed by prominent marine men of the city seems to be unanimous that these vessels are lying in water from 80 to 100 feet deep within a radius of 30 miles of Sarnia. A possibility exists that some of these vessels may be floating about the lake partially submerged. Not much hope is entertained that any of them will come ashore. However, should another storm something of the proportions of the recent one occur, there would be a chance for these boats to be washed ashore.

Up to late last night seven bodies from the steamer Price have come ashore, and are now in Sarnia. They are John Groundwater, chief engineer of Cleveland; Herbert Jones of Superior, Wis.; I. W. Morrey of Detroit; Walter McInnis, near Owen Sound; Ernest J. Patton of Escanaba, Mich.; A. McIntosh, of St. Clair, and Chris. Faulkner, of New York.

Another body, thought to be one of the Price's crew, is here, but Milton Smith, former first engineer, and familiar with the crew, is unable to identify it.

Northern Queen Released.

SARNIA, Nov. 17.—The steamer Northern Queen of the Merchants' Mutual Line, has been released from her dangerous position at Kettle Point. Early Saturday the tugs Fisher and James Reid went out to the wreck and worked all day removing the sand that had formed around the craft since she grounded. It was found that she was imbedded ten feet in the bank.

Goderich Holds Memorial.

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—A service was held in Knox Church yesterday afternoon, in memory of those who lost their lives in the lake storm. The Oddfellows, Masons, Foresters, Orangemen and Sons of Scotland, also the town council, were all present in a body. The church choir was assisted by the choirs of all the other churches. The church was jammed to the doors, fully 1,700 people being present. Rev. J. B. Totheringham, rector of St. George's, preached.

Lashed To the Wheel.

GODERICH, Nov. 17.—A report has been going around town to-day that a board has been found down near Naftel's Point, on which was written in pencil: "I am with the boat lashed to the wheel.—B." It was probably written by Bruce Cameron, of the Wexford, as his body has not yet been found.

Memorial at Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—A big crowd gathered in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon at a service in memory of the sailors who lost their lives in the terrible storm on the great lakes last Sunday. James S. Potter, superintendent of work among sailors, recounted his experience on the steamer Huronic, which passed through the heart of the storm, and addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Hincks, Rev. Dr. Gilmour and others.

Funerals In Collingwood.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Nov. 17.—The body of Orin Gordon, wheelsman of the Wexford, which reached here Friday night, was interred in the Baptist Cemetery Saturday afternoon, and was followed to its last resting place by a large number of relatives and friends.

Four funerals in twenty-four hours seem to be a record here, and unhappily no one knows how many more are to follow.

GREED OF THE OWNERS

That Sent so Many Men to Death Says Minister

Captains Ordered Out in the Rough Weather He Declares

Canadian Press Despatch.

FORT WILLIAM, November 17 — In a sermon yesterday, Rev. J. A. Cranston, made the statement that the loss of life in the recent hurricane was due to orders given by officials that the captains take their vessels out in rough weather.

It was the greed of ship owners he said that had resulted in so great a loss of life. If the loss had been confined to ships and cargoes he would say it served the owners right.

SEES VICTORY

Thinks Milkmen Will Reduce the Price to 7c a Quart

HAMILTON, Nov. 17.—Success has at last crowned the efforts of Mayor Allan in securing for the people of Hamilton seven-cent milk. Arrangements have been completed with an east-end dealer to deliver the lacteal fluid at seven cents per quart, and all orders left at his store will receive immediate attention. The mayor is asking the people to continue the strike for a few days longer, as he is confident the larger companies will reduce their price to eight cents, and probably seven cents, per quart.

His worship was given to understand yesterday that each day eighteen ten-gallon cans of milk were being sent to a condensed milk company at St. George, and that the price was fixed at 12 1-2 cents per gallon.

HE'S A FUSIONIST

[illegible] perance Candidate in Middlesex.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 17.— Mr. John W. Laidlaw, reeve of Westminster Township, is the Liberal candidate in East Middlesex. The choice of the Liberal Executive was ratified Saturday by the Reform Association of the riding. There was some talk at first of simply endorsing Mr. Laidlaw, who had already been formally nominated by the Temperance Alliance.

On the other hand, there was a larger number who took the view that inasmuch as Mr. Laidlaw was a strong Liberal, who had been waited upon prior to the temperance convention, and who had consented to accept the Liberal nomination, he should be nominated on the Liberal ticket. In the end this view prevailed, and the nomination was made unanimous.

N. W. Rowell and F. G. Inwood were among those who spoke.

A CONFERENCE

Fielding Proposes That British Leaders Discuss Federalization

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(C. A. P. Cable.) — Considerable prominence is given to a suggestion from Hon. W. S. Fielding on the home rule situation. His proposition is that the parties should agree to a conference limited to only two conditions, namely: (1) That the conference consider the practicability of devising a scheme of federalization for the United Kingdom; (2), that in such scheme not only Ireland, but also England and Wales and Scotland shall receive the largest possible measure of home rule in local offices through local legislatures, having large powers, not merely county councils, but legislatures dealing with a class of subjects sufficiently comprehensive to give these bodies positions of dignity and importance, provided that such local legislatures shall have no part in the control of imperial affairs; and that paramount authority of the Imperial Parliament shall be recognised in terms that are beyond all question.

LITTLE QUEBECS

The bilingual question has become a very complicated one, and to the most people it seems to be mixed up with religion. Many people believe there is a plot to usurp the English language in Ontario, and that the Roman Church is in league with the French to bring out this end. There are French people who hold that their religion is in some way inseparable from their language, and that if they lost the one the other would go to pieces.

The law of association has a great deal to do with this. The Welsh people, for instance, in England keep up their language in worship and have Welsh churches in the English cities in which no English is used: the hymns, prayers and the preaching are all in Welsh. Anyone who has heard a Welshman pray or sing knows how much of his soul he can pour out in that sonorous and liquid language. The Welsh people are usually very clannish and hold esteddfods every year to encourage the use of the Welsh tongue and preserve the ancient characteristics and customs of their race. The English people take no exception to this, it is tolerated and in fact supported by them. But there is no fear of the Welsh language ever predominating in Great Britain and there is no talk of bilingualism — Why?

One reason is, because no Welsh parents in England would dream of insisting that their child should be taught Welsh in school simply because it had never heard any other language at home. The parents recognize that they are in an English-speaking [illegible] must learn to speak English.

Now, the French language position in Ontario is a similar one, but the French who have settled in certain districts, coming from Quebec where the French language is spoken, do not seem to realize that they have crossed the border, or if they do they apparently fancy they have brought Quebec with them. This seems to us to be the mistake. Ontario is an English-speaking country like Great Britain, and anyone who comes into Ontario must learn to speak English if he is to become an intelligent citizen.

Father O'Gormon has said that the bi-lingual question is one of pedagogy and not one of religion. We may dismiss religion from the question but we cannot make the plea of pedagogy. The question is whether certain districts of Ontario are to become little Quebecs. There is a persistant invasion of the eastern counties by French families who buy up every farm that is offered for sale, and in many cases "freeze" old established English-speaking people out of their neighbood in order to control the district. We state this, knowing the facts personally, and we think there is some cause for alarm in this movement, for it is the thin end of the wedge of disintegration in Ontario.

THE GEOLOGICAL CONFERENCE

(Ottawa Journal.)

Judging from the reports which are appearing in the scientific journals, the governments of the Dominion and of the several provinces will be fully recompensed for the expenditures which they incurred in connection with the twelfth International Congress of Geologists, held in Canada this year. Although the congress opened its deliberations early in July a number of foreign members and delegates are still studying the geological and other resources of the Dominion. The visit of several hundred representative scientists from all parts of the world has revealed to them the wonderful mineral resources of the Dominion—its nickel, copper, silver, gold, iron, asbestos—not forgetting fuels, such as coal, petroleum and natural gas.

The coal resources of the Dominion were specially studied at the congress, as also were the problems relating to the character and conditions of the great crystalline formations which compose two-thirds of the outcrop of the earth's crust in Canada, and comprising at least two million square miles of the mineral and metal-bearing series.

Canada's wealth and its enormous possibilities appear to have impressed the visitors with great force. Hundreds of reports, besides a score of volumes on Canada's geological resources, are, it is understood, being prepared by the representatives of the forty nations present at the congress. These will unquestionably assist in making known the wonderful resources of Canada not only geologically, but in every other respect.

FLEETS IN HYPOTHESIS

The Toronto News says if we could not man the Niobe and the Rainbow how can we man two fleet units?"

When will these Tory papers cease from belittling Canada in the eyes of the world! The navy which the Globe speaks about, and which it intends to build in Canada is a mere hypothesis, and is not based upon what Canada could do, but upon what we would do if we could do.

Where, then, is the difficulty which the News speaks of in manning two hypothetical fleet units? What need is there of the impediments of flesh and blood when you can draw upon an imagination like the Globe can command?

Camp Candlesticks.

A camp candlestick can easily be made with a piece of stick. Choose a straight stick about eight inches long and one inch thick. With a good knife sharpen one end as you would a lead pencil or a stake. Then split the other end into four parts, taking care not to allow any to snap, and strengthen the point where they meet by binding with string. The candles can then be placed between the four branches and held in position with string. The pointed end is then stuck into the ground and the candlestick is ready for use.

HOME BUTTERMAKING

Market reports invariably quote creamery butter higher than dairy butter, which is the designation given to that which is made on the farm. It is unfortunate that circumstances at times make it impracticable for dairy farmers to patronize a creamery. When this can be done, not only are the profits, as a rule, increased, but much hard work is taken away from the overburdened members of the family.

There is no good reason why butter made in the home dairy should not be as fine as that made in a creamery where cream produced under all manner of conditions has to be made up. All that is necessary is the carrying out of a well established system in feeding the cows, caring for the milk and cream and the churning and putting up of the butter. In order to teach the proper method of carrying out these various operations, there has been prepared, under the direction of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner at Ottawa, a bulletin entitled, "Buttermaking on the Farm," written by Mr. George H. Barr, Chief of the Dairy Division.

This work, which may be secured free from the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture, explains the comon defects of dairy butter as well as the conditions that are necessary to produce fine flavored cream. It then deals with churning, washing, salting, working and packing butter, and considers the modern necessary utensils and their care. These are shown in clear illustrations.

This bulletin, which is No. 17 of the Dairy and Cold Storage series, concludes with the following recommendations:—"Keep good cows, feed them liberally, keep them comfortable and clean when in the stable, skim a rich cream and keep it cool, churn. At a temperature that will give a flaky granule in the butter; use clean, pure water for washing butter, not more than three degrees colder or warmer than the buttermilk. Put the butter up in neat, clean, attractive packages, and keep everything in and about the dairy clean and attractive."

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held in Canada. Poultry entries number over 3,500, with pigeons canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production

It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"Well, you've got the tip," Cassidy returned, somewhat disconcerted, after a stolid fashion of his own. "It's up to you to take it, that's all. If you don't one of you will make a long visit with some people out of town, and it'll probably be Mary. Remember, I'm giving it to you straight."

Cassidy turned and went noisily out of the drawing room. As she heard the outer door close behind the detective Aggie's expression grew vicious.

"The truck horse detective!" she sneered. "An eighteen collar and a six and a half hat! He sure had his nerve trying to bluff us!"

"Perhaps it wasn't a bluff, Aggie," Garson suggested.

"Well, what have we done, I'd like to know?"

Garson answered with a note of weariness that was unlike him.

"It ain't what you have done," he said quietly. "It's what they can make a jury think you've done. And, once they set out to get you—God, how they can frame things! If they ever start out after Mary"— He did not finish the sentence, but sank down into his chair with a groan that was almost of despair.

CHAPTER VII.

A Legal Document.

MARY TURNER spent less than an hour in that mysteriously important engagement with Dick Gilder of which she had spoken to Aggie. After separating from the young man she went alone down Broadway, walking the few blocks of distance to Sigismund Harris' office.

Harris regarded his client with an appreciative eye as he bowed in greeting and invited her to a seat.

"I sent your cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch, the release which she is to sign," he explained, "when she gets that money from General Hastings. I wish you'd look it [illegible] it's all right. [illegible] but I appreciate your opinion of things, Miss Turner—particularly of legal documents."

"Thank you," Mary said. "And have you heard from them yet?"

"No," the lawyer replied. "I gave them until tomorrow. If I don't hear then I shall start suit at once." Then the lawyer's manner became unusually bland and self satisfied as he opened a drawer of the desk and brought forth a rather formidable appearing document, bearing a most impressive seal.

"You will be glad to know," he went on unctiously, "that I was entirely successful in carrying out that idea of yours as to the injunction. My dear Miss Turner, Portia was a squawking baby compared with you."

"Thank you again," Mary answered as she took the legal paper. For a moment her glance ran over the words of the page.

"It's splendid!" she declared. "Did you have much trouble in getting it?"

"Why, no," he declared. "But at the outset when I made the request the judge just nearly fell off the bench. Then I showed him that Detroit case to which you had drawn my attention, and the upshot of it all was that he gave me what I wanted without a whimper. He couldn't help himself, you know."

That mysterious document with the imposing seal reposed safely in Mary's bag when she returned to the apartment.

Mary had scarcely received from Aggie an account of Cassidy's threatening invasion when the maid announced that Mr. Irwin had called.

"Show him in," Mary directed.

"Who's the gink?" Aggie demanded.

"You ought to know. He's the lawyer retained by General Hastings in the matter of a certain breach of promise suit."

"Hope he's brought the money."

"Leave the room now," Mary ordered. "When I call to you come in, but be sure and leave everything to me. Merely follow my lead. And, Agnes—be very ingenue."

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise," Aggie nodded as she hurried out toward her bedroom. "I'll be a squab—surest thing you know!"

Next moment Mary gave a formal greeting to the lawyer who represented the man she planned to mulct effectively.

Irwin lost no time in coming to the point.

"I called in reference to this suit which Miss Agnes Lynch threatens to bring against my client, General Hastings."

"It's not a threat," Mr. Irwin. "The suit will be brought."

"You realize, of course, that this is merely plain blackmail."

"[illegible] Mr. Irwin, [illegible] don't you consult the police?"

Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny will you ask Miss Lynch to come in please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings cannot afford such publicity."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking. "I'm sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your troubles to the police rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared.

Mary pushed in his direction the telephone that stood on the table.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know"— He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief—a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom and the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in her manner as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh," the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat. "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child. You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that if he did not promise to marry you you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me. Did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, I'm so frightened!"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!"

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters! So tender and so—er—interesting!"

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed hastily, with some evidences of chagrin.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," Mary questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes," Aggie declared tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft luster, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"We're beaten," he confessed dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary whom plainly he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank [illegible]," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He took from his pocket a thick bill case and from this a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming as best

"We can't afford any scandal."

he might contrive a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money. You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she said.

"Well, they can leave you now, all right," the lawyer remarked unsympathetically. He reached quickly forward for the packet, which Aggie extended willingly enough. But it was Mary, who, with a swift movement caught and held it.

"I think," Mary explained tranquilly, "that you had better see our lawyer, Mr. Harris, in reference to this. We women know nothing of such details of business settlement."

"Oh, I see," he said disagreeably with a frown to indicate his complete sagacity in the premises.

"I thought you would, Mr. Irwin," Mary returned. "If you'll take the money to Mr. Harris Miss Lynch will meet you in his office at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and, when her suit for damages for breach of promise has been legally settled out of court, you will get the letters. Good afternoon, Mr. Irwin."

The lawyer made a hurried bow which took in both of the women, and walked quickly toward the door.

"Oh, you forgot your marked money, Mr. Irwin," Mary said.

The lawyer wheeled and stood staring at the speaker with a certain sheepishness of expression that bore witness to the completeness of his discomfiture. Without a word he walked back to the desk, picked up the money and restored it to the bill case.

"Young woman," he said emphatically, "you ought to have been a lawyer." And he took his departure, while Mary smiled in triumph and Aggie sat gaping astonishment.

"You've darn near broke my heart," she cried, bouncing up violently, "letting all that money go out of the house. Say, how did you know it was marked?"

"I didn't," Mary replied blandly. "But it was a pretty good guess, wasn't it?" Couldn't you see that all he wanted was to get the letters and have us take the marked money? Then, my simple young friend, we would have been arrested very neatly indeed—for blackmail."

"Gee!" she cried. "That would have been fierce! And now?" she questioned apprehensively.

Mary's answer repudiated any possibility of fear.

"And now," she explained contentedly, "he really will go to our lawyer. There he will pay over that same marked money. Then he will get the letters he wants so much. And just because it's a strictly business transaction between two lawyers, with everything done according to legal ethics"—

"And it's actually the same old game!" Aggie mused.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Thief.

MARY was in joyous spirits after her victorious matching of brains against a lawyer of high standing in his profession when she had entered the telephone booth, which had been installed in an extra closet of her bedroom for the sake of greater privacy on occasion. During her absence from the drawing room Garson again came into the apartment seeking her. On being told by Aggie as to Mary's whereabouts he sat down to await her return, listening without much interest to the chatter of the adventuress. The maid appeared and said:

UMBRELLA FOR THEIR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Miss Mary Robinson Remembered by Members of Her Class

ON HER BIRTHDAY

The home of Miss Elsie Follis, Rutherford Avenue, city, was the scene of a very pleasant event on Friday evening of last week, when the members of the Delta Alta class of the Park Street Sunday School met in a social way to surpise their teacher, Miss Mary Robinson, whose birthday they wished to celebrate. During the evening Miss Robinson was presented with a beautiful silver mounted umbrella, the address being read by the secretary of the class Miss Sadie Webb, and at the proper moment Miss Gertie Batley made the presentation.

The address was as follows:

Miss Mary Robinson,

Dear Teacher— We have gathered here this evening to celebrate the happy event of your birthday. We feel, as a class, that we cannot let the occasion pass without, in some manner expressing to you our feelings of good will and love. Your regularity of attendance at Sunday school, your patience, your faithfulness and daily walk in life has been an example and inspiration to us all. We now beg of you to accept this umbrella as a practical evidence of our appreciation of your work among us. We trust that it will not only mark the mile-stone you have just passed, but that it will bring to you pleasant thoughts of those who gave it.

Signed on behalf of the class

LILLIAN DICKS
Vice-President.
SADIE WEBB,
Secretary.

Although Miss Robinson was completely taken by surprise, in a few well chosen words she thanked her pupils and friends for their kind thoughts toward her.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and music. Refreshments were served by the young ladies

ALCOHOL A DEADLY POISON

BAR SENDING POISONED ARROWS

Rev. R. G. Peever Preaches Powerful Temperance Sermon.

Rev. R. G. Peever observed Temperance Sunday at George Street Methodist church yesterday. He preached from the text "Prove all things," and in a very incisive and convincing manner dealt with the drink traffic and its effects upon the people.

He said if there was a traffic which he hated in his heart it was the trade which thrived on the degradation of men and women. If there were a class of men whom he pitied and prayed that God would have mercy upon, it was the men who handed out this "strange fire" to their fellows and prospered by the destruction of their prospects for time and eternity.

ALCOHOL—WHAT IS IT?

He dwelt at length upon the questions "What is alcohol? and what is its place?" He said the latter question was decided by the answer to the former. He quoted the pronouncement of the late Sir William Boyd Carpenter, in which that famous physiologist stated that "Alcohol was a deadly narcotic poison. That the drunkard was a diseased man, and drunkenness was insanity."

Mr Peever drew illustrations from life and from his own experience with men who were addicted to alcohol, to show its effects upon the human mind and body. He said that the word "intoxicate" meant "to poison" and if you saw a man reeling down the street under the influence of liquor you would be correct in saying "that man had been poisoned."

TO INTOXICATE

The word was originally derived from the act of the savage when he dipped his arrows in poison and sent them with deadly purpose at his enemy. "And to-day," said the preacher, "whoever puts alcohol to the lips of his friend either out of 'hospitality' or over the bar, is as surely sending a poisoned arrow into him as when the savage drew his bow toward his enemy."

If alcohol is a deadly poison then its proper place is on the shelf of the druggist labled "deadly poison," with the skull and cross-bones, and only to be served under proper medical prescription like any other drug of the same nature.

A MAN'S PREACHER

The preacher dealt with his subject in a deliberate, able and eloquent manner, and earnestly pleaded with any present who were playing secretely with this drug, to have done with it before it got them in its deadly grip.

The sermon was a very powerful one and Mr. Peever is proving himself more and more a man's preacher with a straight and loving message to men.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS HEAR REV. G. A. WOODSIDE

Special Services at Knox Church to be Continued Throughout This Week

At Knox church on Sunday, both morning and evening, large congregations greeted Rev. G. A. Woodside, of Brantford, who is here for the week conducting special evangelistic services. Both services were of a most impressive character, and indicate a week of helpfulness and inspiration. The choir was assisted by Miss McNabb, of Toronto, a singer of rare power and sweetness, who will add to the attractiveness of the service each evening. In the morning Mr. Woodside spoke on the outlook of the Christian, Paul's master theme, and showed how many things point to the time when the last enemy shall be overthrown. In the tremendous battle Christ has proven Himself not only our great leader, but prophet, having actually anticipated by His marvellous efforts the splendid triumphs of modern science. Finally He entered the chamber of death and illuminated its dark corridors to the feet of all who follow Him.

In the afternoon Mr. Woodside addressed a meeting for men, speaking [illegible] practical Christianity—the blending of our business and religious life—the proper recognition of life's twofold obligation, business and religion.

The evening service was a memorable one. The music was of a high order. Mr. Woodside spoke on Christ's Claim on Men, showing how man could never come to his intended greatness, power of service, or likeness to God apart from Christ. This being true, Christ's claim is superior to all others. The service throughout was most impressive. Meetings continue each evening this week at 7.45 to 9 o'clock, to which the public is cordially invited.

Held Responsible For Death.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—Guilty of manslaughter was the verdict returned Saturday night by a jury in the Court of King's Bench against Pierre Valade, charged with causing the death of 13-year-old Ida Robertson on Sept. 9 last. The prisoner will be sentenced next Wednesday. The young girl either jumped or was thrown from the fourth floor of Valade's boarding-house, and medical testimony tended to show that an assault had been committed upon her.

Milady's Mirror

How to Cure Wrinkles.

There are other signs more subtle and potent, but wrinkles are the most pathetic because the most telltale indications of age. The lines and furrows they see disfiguring the faces of women of middle age ought to make girls do everything in their power to ward off wrinkles as long as possible.

Most muscles of the face are voluntary, responding to every passing emotion, and if the muscles are constantly kept at work, as in grimacing and with odd tricks of expression habitual with so many women, that lines, then wrinkles, will be fostered.

Even children should learn that the face should be kept in repose. The little lines around the eyes and the long "parentheses" that inclose the lips and mouth and that are excused on the ground that they are necessary to expression, "laughing wrinkles," as they are called, in reality add years to one's appearance, so there is no need to fear massage will take away the expression of the face.

The little vertical lines that so quickly appear between the eyes as a result of squinting or that are often assumed in deep thought give one a fierce, ratlike expression, and only by the greatest care can the habit be overcome.

Another wrinkle maker is the habit of lifting the eyebrows. Tiny lines grow and deepen just above the eyes, and great furrows soon mar the beauty of the forehead.

There are some lotions that are said to prevent and others to erase wrinkles and which, if not entirely efficacious, are harmless.

One of the preventives is made as follows: Boil three ounces of pearl barley in a pint of water till the gluten is extracted. Strain, add thirty drops of tincture of benzoin and use as a face wash night and morning.

If the wrinkles have shown themselves bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving sixty grains of alum in six ounces of rosewater and pour gently into one and one-half ounces of almond milk, stirring all the while.

Slit Skirt and Woolen Hose.

What a cruel alternative is put to the slit skirt wearers by Surgeon General Rupert Blue! He is quoted as saying that when the chilly winds of winter begin to blow the women will either have to sew up the slits in their skirts or wear heavy woolen stockings and sensible boots!

"Nearly all the women who affect slit skirts wear the thinnest kind of silk stockings and extremely low slippers," he is said to have observed. "If they wish to avoid catching their death of cold they ought to wear thick woolen stockings, as their grandmothers did, or sew up the vents."

When the dictum of Dr. Blue was repeated to a well known fashion authority she shrugged her shoulders and said: "I'm afraid they'll catch their death of cold then. But it isn't only the skirts that should cause the surgeon general to worry about women's health. If one wishes to be fashionable this winter she will have to [illegible] The [illegible] expose the ankles and some of the new crownless hats expose the head. Women can be induced to wear fur about their throats, but I'm afraid fur anklets would not meet with much success, and woolen stockings—oh, never!

"And," with a twinkle, "think what an advertising feature would be lost if women decided to take Dr. Blue's advice. There is a certain kind of small shopkeeper who attracts attention to his window displays by posting in a prominent place a photograph of a woman in a slit or diaphanous skirt. He is sure to draw a crowd—of men.

"Of course," more seriously, "that practice is really deplorable, and the right kind of man is no more attracted to the shop by it than the right kind of woman is by the extremes of fashion. It's undoubtedly true, however, that there are a number of women who ought to pay heed to Dr. Blue's warning and sacrifice a little of their ambition to be ultra fashionable to the consideration of their health."

The Daily Bath.

A help in restoring the skin after a strenuous week or two or month of outing is the daily allover scrub. It is not necessary to get into a big tub filled with water and lie in it any length of time. Much better is it to take the thorough soaping and rubbing at night, then removing every particle of soap with a spray, first tepid, then cold. The morning bath may be only a five minute splash in water with the chill barely taken off and as cold as it comes from the faucet for the spraying.

A healthy tingle follows such a bath, with renewed vitality and a glow of skin that shows how beneficial it is. For some a very cold bath is best; for the majority the water should be tepid or blood heat, just so it feels pleasant to the body. Hot baths should only be taken by advice of a physician. They are enervating and cause lassitude, besides being conducive to a habit of taking cold in the slightest draft. By the end of one month the girl who has almost despaired on viewing the ravages of her summer trip may find herself better in every way—healthier, prettier, fresher and showing the benefits for which she thought she had paid too dearly.

An Ancient Irish Find.

What is believed to be a discovery of great archaeological value has been made by Professor Edward Spencer Dodgson of Jesus college, Oxford, at Killult, near Falcarragh, County Donegal, Ireland. It is a peculiarly shaped stone covered with characters in Ogham, the writing of the ancient Irish, and has probably lain unnoticed for 1,000 years. The inscription has been partly deciphered, and it is supposed to refer to the hiding place of the treasure of an ancient Irish chieftain, which, tradition says, is somewhere in the neighborhood.

For the second time in its history, the University of Melbourne, Australia, has appointed a man without a degree to a professorial chair. It filled the Chair of Logic with a self-taught country editor, and it has now found a professor of History in a member of the Commonwealth "Hansard" staff, Mr. Ernest Scott, a son-in-law of Mrs. Annie Besant, the high priestess of Theosophy. Mr. Scott was an English journalist before he emigrated to Australia, and he was on the staff of The Melbourne Evening Herald before joining "Hansard." He has been a diligent student of early Australian history, and has published a couple of interesting volumes embodying his researches.

PUNCH'S NEW COVER.

Britain's Comic Magazine Changes Its 70-Year-Old Design.

An item of considerably more than usual literary interest is the announcement that for the first time for nearly seventy years, there is a change in the well-known cover design of Punch.

Few now living recollect Punch in any other cover than his familiar garb. He has, however, as a matter of fact, had a number of coats, not less than seven, to be precise. For the first three years of his existence it was the custom to change the cover design of the weekly issue with each half-yearly volume.

The first number of Punch was issued on the 17th of July, 1841, in a cover design by A. S. Henning. The founders of the paper were greatly elated when the whole edition of 5,000 copies was sold out on publication, and their satisfaction was increased when a reprint order for an additional 5,000 was sold out on the following day. A sale of 10,000 copies of the first number of a threepenny humorous periodical was no mean achievement in those days.

The second cover was a graceful design containing many figures of Hablot Knight Browne ("Phiz"), a contributor to Punch for a long number of years.

A third design was a delightfully pretty one by William Harvey, the Shakespearean illustrator. Mr. M. H. Spielmann, in his interesting "History of Punch," tells of the consternation in the office when a charge of £12 12s. was sent in with the design—"nearly half the total capital with which the engraver Landells a year before had begun the concern!"

Sir John Gilbert was commissioned to draw the next cover; a fine design which was subsequently used a great number of years as a wrapper for the Punch Monthly Parts.

Six months later Kenny Meadows produced the fifth cover, which was followed by a first design by Richard Doyle, a drawing in essential respects the forerunner of the now familiar design, which latter was produced by him for the beginning of the next volume, and was used for the first time in January, 1849. It is of interest to note that the first issue of the cover contained an advertisement of Part 3 of Thackeray's "Pendennis." Thackeray was at that time one of Punch's principal contributors, and the firm of proprietors, under its then style of Bradbury and Evans, were publishers of his works, as well as those of Dickens, both of which were issued first in monthly parts, the one published on the 1st and the other on the 15th of each month.

It is safe to say that there is no better known cover design in the whole world than the famous drawing of Doyle's, which has now been in use for more than 64 years. The addition of the second color now proposed is said to greatly enhance Doyle's design, making the delightful figures stand out with greater clearness and vividness.

Herring Season Failure.

The Scottish herring fishing season closed recently. The total catch has been 1,200,000 crans, each cran being equivalent to 750 fish. The catch in Great Britain is valued at £2,800,000. Notwithstanding this enormous catch, the fishing has been a financial failure to the curers, who have suffered heavy loss.

FUNERAL OF REV. J. H. ROBINSON

Many Ministers aud Friends Paid Their Last Respects.

The funeral of the late Rev. J. H. Robinson, held at Oakville, was very largely attended. The service was in charge of Rev. C. L. McIrvine, of Berlin, president of the Hamilton Conference.

The church was filled with friends from Oakville, Hamilton, Tillsonburg, Hagersville, Toronto, Norwich and other points, as well as a large representation of brother ministers, of whom about fifty were present from Toronto, Hamilton and various places in the district.

Rev. R. H. Rogers, of Arthur, who visited the deceased during his last illness, told of the serenity and joy of the closing days and with what certainty and steadfast faith Mr. Robinson had faced the beyond. During the service a quartet, The Silver Cord, by request of the late beloved minister, was sung by Rev. A. K. Birks, H. G. Livingston, A. E. Lavell and E. A. Pearson. Many lovely floral offerings covered the casket, Emerald street Church and Simcoe street church, Hamilton, also sending their tributes. Following the service at the grave, the casket was not lowered, as the only son of the family, Colnam, who had travelled from Saskatoon, could not reach Oakville until six o'clock, when he was taken to the cemetery for a last look on the face of his father.

A Judge's Poetical Request.

In "Memoirs of Famous Trials," by Rev. E. V. Burnaby, is an amusing story about the late Lord Bowen, "a brilliant, intellectual and clever judge." His lordship wanted a lift to the Lord Chancellor's breakfast in 1883 and addressed the following request to his old friend Mr. Justice Mathew:

My Dear J. C.—Will you be free to carry me, beside of thee, in your buggee to Selborne's tea, if breakfast be intends for we, on 2 November next D. V., eighteen hundred and eighty-three A. Why the Man Walks In Front.

When husband and wife go traveling together in the orient the man walks in front, careless and free, and the woman walks behind, carrying the bundle. Therefore you say: "The oriental cares not for his women. He despises his wife, and uses her as a beast of burden." Many occidentals never get further than this. But if you are observant, says a writer in the Christian Age, "you go out in the jungle yourself, and you discover things.

"The paths are overgrown and thorny. Creepers must be cut back. There are cattle and buffaloes to be driven off, and buffaloes are ugly creatures. There are snakes. In the villages are village dogs, which snarl and snap. You are a man, yet you will be glad of some one to go in front of you with a hatchet to clear your way. No woman would walk in front, and the man must be free. Now you see the reason why the man walks in front."

Girdles and Sashes.

The girdle or sash plays a very important part in the season's styles. Very many of these are extremely wide and swathe the figure, being distinctly oriental.

There are also girdle-like draperies and vests, which often assume the girdle outline.

In extreme instances broad bands of fur will girdle the figure. The straight [illegible]

Vogue of Fur Trimmings.

Fur trimmings are by no means a neglected item this year, for the vogue for touches of fur trimmings has extended to suits, wraps, hats, dresses, blouses and negligees, says the Dry Goods Economist. The styles call for the use of expensive furs, too, as the color effects of high priced pelts are a special feature. This means that the demand now is for fitch, leopard, mole, skunk, red, white and taupe fox, ermine, chinchilla, squirrel and similar pelts.

Fancy muffs are another source of profit to the fur department that carries an attractive stock of loose furs. Women are purchasing from two to five muffs. One or two of these may be wholly of fur, but the others are made of suit or coat material and trimmed with wide fur bands. These muffs are large, and it is surprising how much fur is required in making an up to date muff.

Then, too, the sale of muff pillows is no small item. They are expensive in the extremely soft new shapes and are well worth keeping in stock.

Odd bits of soap, when gathered up and boiled, make a splendid shampoo jelly.

POLICE BREAK UP GAME OF POKER ON SUNDAY

For some time past the police have had a certain office on George street under surveillance and as a result of this, four local young men will appear in Police Court shortly on the charge of playing poker on Sunday.

The raid was effected by Constables Reid and Sills yesterday afternoon whose observations of the building made them rather suspicious and they got into closer touch with the office by the way of the key hole.

The key hole served the purpose as the officers got wise to a rather interesting little game of poker in which there were only four participants. On the door being tried the cards and money were quickly hidden. Then the door opened to admit the officers, who, upon searching the men found the cards and a quantity of small change. The maximum fine for this offense is $10.

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART

Rev. W. F. Doyle Speaks on the Sacrifice of the Mass

The closing exercises of the Jubilee in commemoration of the issuing of the "Edict of Milan" and the ceremonies in honor of the fourth anniversary of the dedication of the Church of the Sacred Heart were observed yesterday. It was a day of general communion for the whole parish, and large numbers partook of the blessed sacrament. There were three masses celebrated, the first one at 7.30 by Rev. Father Doyle, S. J., the second one at 8.30 by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, and the last one a Pontifical high mass by Rt. Rev M. J. O'Brien, D.D., at 10.30. The assistants on the last mass were,—Deacon, Rev. J. J. O'Brien; Sub-deacon, Rev. J. V. McCauley, Priest of Honor, Rev. W. F. Doyle; Master of Ceremonies, J. McCarney; Censor Bearer, J. Theobald; Acolytes, A. O'Brien and L. Goselin. The Sodality of the Blessed Virgin sang at the first mass, the children of the school of the Sacred Heart at the second mass, and the Sacred Heart Choir at the last mass. The singing of the latter body was exceedingly good and for this the credit is due Rev. J. V. McCauley, choir leader; Mr. J. Armstrong, organist; Miss A. Simons, soprano soloist and Mr. P. Hensaaw, tenor soloist.

At the high mass Rev. W. F. Doyle, S. J., Superior of the Jesuit Order at Guelph, Ont., delivered an eloquent and very appropriate sermon. The eminent speaker chose his text from the Holy Gospel according to St. Mathew, 21; 13—"My house is a house of prayer."

"My dearly beloved in Jesus Christ," he began, "we are assembled here this morning to give thanks to God on this fourth anniversary of the dedication of this church, this house of God, this holy temple. The congregation have looked forward with joy and consolation to this anniversary because it is the date of the completion and dedication of this Church and it is also the occasion of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien's visit to this parish, the parish he served so long so faithfully and so well. Why was this church brought into existence? Within its sacred portals we catch a vision of the true reality of Christ. It is for Him these walls were raised and it was for Him you made sacrifice in order to have this edifice adorned and beautified. [illegible] Sacred Heart is a house of prayer because it is a home for the blessed sacrament and because it is a place where one finds peace, love and happiness. It is needless to further explain what this church means and why it is called a house of prayer. Within these walls and beneath this roof we have Christ Himself under the appearance of bread and wine. And taking bread he gave thanks and broke, and gave to them saying: 'This is My body which is given for you. Do this for a commemoration of me.' Thus we see that Christ is really with us and we have the sacrifice of the mass which is the renewal of the sacrifice of Calvary and it is on the sacrifice of the mass I wish to dwell this morning."

Rev. Father Doyle went on to state how in these days of Socialism and Anarchism, when men are trying to crush out religion, every Catholic should know what the sacrifice of the mass is. Mass is offered up to praise and honor God which is our duty, being as we are created by Him, belonging to Him and destined by Him. Assisting at the holy sacrifice of the mass is one way to return thanks to God for all the favors He has bestowed upon us. The sacrifice of the mass as decreed by the Council of Trent is most powerful in aiding the suffering souls in purgatory, consequently as it is the greatest means of honor, praising and glorifying God we should as often as possible assist at this great sacrifice.

Pope Pius the Tenth wishes that the custom of assisting at mass and receiving communion every day, as did the primitive Christians, should be revived, and no trivial matter should keep us from fulfilling this request whenever the opportunity prevails. Fathers and mothers should look after the spiritual welfare of their children and impress upon them the necessity of assisting at mass every day.

God's love for us, which is eternal, is the greatest of all love, and we should come to Him in the blessed sacrament and speak to Him as a child to its father. We should ask Him for grace and strength to overcome temptations and subdue our passions. If one looks around at the non-Catholic places of worship they appear cold and have no attraction other than their decorations because Christ is not present.

"When we Catholics," the reverend Jesuit exclaimed, "enter this church a feeling of awe comes over us, and we know we are in the presence of Almighty God. Have we appreciated His presence, and have we appreciated the ever burning sanctuary lamp and the doors always opened? If we have not appreciated these, let us start now. It is true that in some instances your work will not permit you to come to mass daily and you must earn your bread by the sweat of your brow, but you are to work out the salvation of your souls, and in doing this always have recourse in Jesus Christ, ever present in the blessed sacrament. Receive Holy Communion weekly, if not daily, and God will shower His blessing upon you, and you will reach eternal happiness, which is the blessing I wish you all in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

At the conclusion of mass, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, spoke a few words assuring the parishoners of the Church of the Sacred Heart that he was delighted to join with them in offering thanks to Almighty God for His favors during the past four years. He stated that there was a two-fold reason for these ceremonies; one, because it was the anniversary of the dedication of the church, and the other was the closing of the Jubilee, in commemoration of the issuing of the "Edict of Milan."

He urged them to mark this jubilee as the jubilees of old were marked, that is by the forgiving of all those who have injured them in any way. In closing His Lordship exclaimed: "I hope the year of this jubilee will mean for us the removing of all wickedness and then it will be a source of blessing now and at the hour of our death."

Immediately after mass, while the choir sang "O Salutaris," the blessed sacrament was exposed on the altar and remained so all day. The various societies, namely, the League of the Sacred Heart, Sacred Heart T.A. S., Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, St. Augustine's Sodality, and the school children attended the church at their respective hours for adoration.

AT VESPERS.

In the evening at 7 o'clock His Lordship Bishop O'Brien sang Pontifical Vespers, assisted by Rev. J. J. O'Brien and Rev. J. V. McCauley.

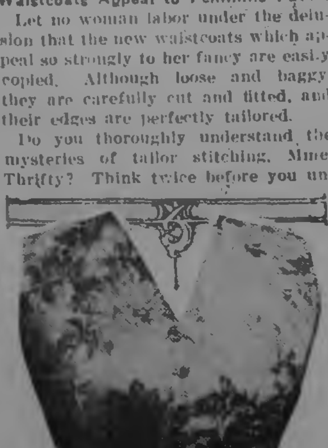
Rev. Father Doyle preached another eloquent and instructive sermon on Catholics setting a good example. He laid great emphasis on parents raising children who will be true Catholics and true citizens. The reverend speaker called upon them in his final words to assist at [illegible] possible.

During vespers various members of the choir contributed beautiful solos.

Waistcoats Appeal to Feminine Favor.

Let no woman labor under the delusion that the new waistcoats which appeal so strongly to her fancy are easily copied. Although loose and baggy, they are carefully cut and fitted, and their edges are perfectly tailored.

Do you thoroughly understand the mysteries of tailor stitching, Mme. Thrifty? Think twice before you undertake a waistcoat unless you do; otherwise it may prove your Waterloo. If you are using a suiting material for the vest be sure to purchase enough material to make gaiter tops for the boots to be worn with the waistcoated tailored suit. Gaiters matching the walking skirt make the feet look small and smart.



MODISHNESS IN SILK VESTS.

A Cause For Thanks.

T. Suffern Taller at a luncheon that he recently gave at the Newport casino was witty at the expense of the slashed skirt, the transparent blouse and other of woman's new fashions.

"Young Mrs. Blanc," a neighbor said to Mr. Taller, "is a very beautiful woman, but she puts on airs."

"Well," said Mr. Taller, "let us thank goodness that she puts on something! You know what the 1913 fashions are."

SLAVES TO HOT BATH

England Is Most Bath-ridden Country In World.

The vexed question of the hot bath, which was condemned by Dr. Fortescue Fox at the International Congress of Medicine, was discussed by a much-traveled balneologist who has inquired into the bathing habits of many peoples in the course of his wanderings.

"England is the most bath-ridden country in the world since the days of ancient Rome," he said. "Undoubtedly we have too many hot baths. Too much hot-bath lounging and washing are bad for the skin and for the general constitution, and are generally a sign of laziness, self-indulgence and effeminacy. The modern easily tired man is becoming a slave to his hot bath, where, with the aid of an adjustable electric light, a book-rest and a box of cigarettes he evaporates his strength.

"Other countries are much more moderate in their bathing habits, but in England unlimited baths are the rule, daily or twice daily without fail, and at other times when there is nothing else to do. In German middle-class houses the bath is regulated to a nicety, conformable with health and cleanliness. Not only the frequency but also the temperature of the bath is studied. A thermometer is found in most bathrooms.

"In Italy the hot bath is regarded as even less of a necessity. A girl friend was going to an Italian school in Naples, and found on the hall notice board on the first day of term the following order:

"'All girls wishing to have a bath this term are requested to write their names here.'

"America is a good second to England in the bath obsession, and probably beats us for the luxury and variety of the fancy baths indulged in.

"Recognition of the evil of over-indulgence in hot water is to be seen in a curious old custom still to be found among the older miners in South Wales. Some of these men take their hot tub in the kitchen with the greatest regularity after work, but they wash every part of the body except the spine, owing to the idea that the hot water takes the backbone out of them.

"The ideal is probably a weekly hot bath soak of ten minutes, at a temperature of 98 deg. to 101 deg. Fahrenheit, and a daily cold or tepid splash bath after a previous wash."

A Fox Tragedy.

On one of the large estates in Hingham, Eng., a few weeks ago a fox was found to be destroying poultry. The time of the raids and their boldness were proof enough that the fox must be a female with young. Poisoned meat was prepared for her, and at once the raids ceased. A few days later one of the workmen of the estate came upon the den of a fox, at the mouth of which lay dead a whole litter of young ones. They had been poisoned. The mother had not eaten the doctored food herself, but had carried it home to her family. They must have died in the burrow, for it was evident from the signs that she had dragged them out into the fresh air to revive them and deposited them gently on the sand by the hole. Then in her perplexity she had brought various tidbits of mouse and bird and rabbit and placed at their noses to tempt them to wake up out of their strange sleep and eat as hungry children ought to eat. Who knows how long she watched beside the still forms and what her emotions were? She must have left the neighborhood soon after, however, for no one has seen her since about the estate.

RHEUMA DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

After 25 Years of Misery, this Man Walks, Works and Feels Fine Again

Right away—the first day you start to take RHEUMA—the Uric Acid poison begins to dissolve and [illegible] and leave the sore joints. [illegible] RHEUMA works so speedily you actually can feel the Rheumatism leaving the body. A bottle costs but 50 cents and if you are not satisfied, the Warne Drug Company will return your money. Read this:

"I wish to state to you the facts and nothing but the facts. I bless the day a friend brought me a 50 cent bottle of RHEUMA. I used one-half of it and it did me more good than all the other medicines I ever tried. I had been afflicted with Rheumatism all over my body for more than 25 years, I could not walk, and was a broken-down man. During that time I spent a small fortune, trying to get rid of the horrible disease, but without help. However, RHEUMA reached my case and I thank God I can again use my feet and do my work.

"Before taking your medicine I was staying with a daughter on her farm, and despite her loving efforts to tempt my appetite I could not eat. After I had taken RHEUMA two days my appetite returned. Yours for prosperity."—Prof. H. H. Kolling, 7 S. Ninth St., Richmond, Ind., Oct. 10, 1912.

Six do the Work of SEVEN

Six shovelfulls of coal will do the work of seven in a Hecla Furnace.

You can see it for yourself. Have the Hecla Dealer show you the steel-ribbed Fire-pot—a fire-pot that radiates the heat so quickly that it never becomes red hot—and it is guaranteed never to burn out. This fire-pot (our patent) has three times more radiating surface than that of any other Furnace. It draws the heat from the coal instead of letting it go to waste up the chimney—Feel the smoke flue—It is always cool.

Investigate the Hecla and you will make a big saving in your coal bill. It not only saves 1 ton in 7, but it is absolutely proof against leaking gas or dust.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Germs In Water.

Many women think it a great trouble to boil the water; yet, as a matter of fact, it is a minimum of labor compared with the work and expense that would be consumed in case one of the family contracted malaria, typhoid or any one of the other illnesses directly due to impure drinking water. When one considers the dangers run daily by negligent housewives who give their families water right from the faucet it is a wonder that more deaths do not result from this really criminal negligence. Boiling the drinking water is a sure way of killing the germs. It does not, of course, remove them from the fluid, but at least it kills the germs, which, being dead, cannot do half the harm that they would should they enter the human system living.

His Great Discovery

And the Events That Led Him Up to It.

By CECILY ALLEN.

The Pelham twin who wore petticoats smiled in superior fashion on the Pelham twin who wore pants.

The proud possessor of infinitesimal knickerbockers glared back at her of the petticoats.

"I shall have to tell mumzey," said Miss Petticoats.

"If you do I shall pinch you black and blue," replied her brother, nearly tearing himself away from Douglas Raymond, newly arrived assistant at Morris Manor school, who was awkwardly trying to fasten coat buttons for his rebellious pupil.

"Natalie has been waiting most an hour. She says your naughtiness will give her new money, maybe, and you'll be sorry when she's dead."

"I won't give her anything of the sort, you ninn," replied the Pelham in pants as he jerked on his mitten. "And I love Natalie much better than you do. Anyway, I was only kept in ten minutes, eh, Mr. Raymond?"

Very gravely Douglas Raymond drew out his watch and glanced at it.

"Twelve minutes, and you might have gone two minutes ago if you had not tied the sleeves of your coat together. Tell your nurse that the next time you are kept in for being a naughty boy she had best come inside and wait."

The Pelham twins trotted sturdily toward the door, the boy flinging over his shoulder:

"Natalie is not our nurse. We don't have a nurse any more. She's our sister." Then, stopping stock still, he added: "And there will not be any next time. Cracky, won't Natalie be tickled when I tell her you thought she was our nurse!"

Douglas Raymond sighed as the door closed on the twins. Then he crossed the room and stood looking down in the street. [illegible] had taken high college honors. He had just [illegible] a small college professorship—through lack of influence—and with his mother dependent upon him he had not dared to refuse the liberal financial offer of the master of Morris Manor, a flourishing private school overlooking the Hudson. Even that offer had not come until midwinter, after death had caused a vacancy on the Morris Manor staff and when Douglas had almost decided to give up his college ambitions and dig into commerce.

Morris Manor was a boarding school for boys, with a few day pupils drawn from the rich owners of country homes thereabouts. Just across the tree lined avenue was a fashionable school for girls. Evidently from this school had come the small sister of his rebellious pupil. He leaned over the window ledge to see whether they were safely on their homeward way, and suddenly his fingers gripped the stone coping.

The twins were dancing up the street, one on either side of a tall, slender girl, clad in a natty skating suit, with a scarlet tam-o'-shanter on her well poised head.

"Natalie"— And he had not guessed. However, he would know the graceful walk, the splendidly poised head, among a thousand. The trio disappeared around the corner, and he hurried back to his desk.

"William Reginald Pelham!"

There it stood on the "D" class list. Douglas had not had time to become familiar with his roll book. The wise looking little laddie who said such astonishingly rebellious things in such a precise way had been known to him during that first school day only as "Willie." If he had only known most certainly he would not have detained the boy and let her stand out in the cold. What if she did have pneumonia—

He tried to correct the copybooks, but his thoughts would wander.

Why was she here? Why had she not carried out her original intention of going abroad to study art? And, if she was not studying, what was the Pelham family doing at their country place in midwinter, with the social season in full swing in the city?

He might have known that Willie was her brother. Her odd, demure way of saying startling things had first attracted his [illegible] that had nearly wrecked his last year at college. How could he work, then, with the thought that love and the girl who was all in the world to him were alike beyond his reach? There was his future to carve, his mother to support, a few of his father's debts to pay, and on the other side Natalie Pelham, the Pelham wealth, the Pelham position. She had been flirting with him, of course, not willfully, but just because it came as naturally to her as eating and drinking. She had never taken him seriously, and after [illegible] spent [illegible] her mother a little [illegible] summer resort, he had dropped out of her life just as if there had never been teas in the "frat" room, moonlight walks on the campus, football games and promenades which they had enjoyed in common. And here she was again just when he needed to hold himself well in hand. One thing he must do: avoid her disturbing presence, her magnetic charm, if he possibly could.

Thereafter, in justice to the other pupils, he explained to himself, he showed no partiality to the Pelham twin. In fact, that youth, if he had not been so perfectly cognizant of his own mischievous wrongdoing, might have complained of discrimination. But every afternoon Raymond stood at the window and watched the slender figure with its two small charges hurry through the crisp winter air. She must have changed, he argued to himself. Certainly she had settled down, for she could not be doing the opera, teas and receptions and call for those children every afternoon.

And then came the day of the blizzard. Raymond watched it shut down on Morris Manor and could hardly keep away from the window. Was she coming for those children on foot? By the way, it was odd that she never came with a sleigh or carriage. Other children were claimed by fur clad footmen or strong elder brothers. Nearly all the day pupils were gone. Patty Pelham had not even tried to come across the street from the school for girls. Raymond began to pace the floor.

"Do you think your sister has forgotten or is afraid to come out? Don't you think you had better go home with Wilfred Bailey when his mother sends for him?"

"Oh, Natalie will be here all right. She's probably fussing with Patty's rubbers. Natalie is not afraid of anything."

Ten minutes later she staggered down the street, and Raymond dashed downstairs, drawing her through the door and shutting out the mad storm with a thousand furies tearing at his heart. Why had he not gone to meet her? He led her into the classroom, tore off her wraps, chafed her hands and her face, sending the oldest boy to the principal's office for brandy and help.

An hour passed before the strain was over, and then they sat facing each other in Mrs. Morris' small sitting room. An awkward silence fell between them.

"Please do not worry any more," he said firmly. "I caught your house on the phone just before the wires went down, and no one is worrying. The teachers at Miss Montgomery's will look after Patty, and Mrs. Morris is having a room made ready for you to stop here. You are quite sure you feel no pain in your side [illegible] [illegible] leaned back in her chair and smiled.

"I am comfortable—and happy. How far off June seems! It must have been in the dark ages."

Douglas Raymond leaned forward and looked into her eyes. There was no mischief in the answering glance.

"When your father failed, when you were in trouble, why did you never write? You must have known that the altered circumstances broke down the one barrier between us."

"Oh, they were not so much altered. I wasn't suffering, you know. We have a little left—enough to educate the children and live comfortably—and"—

"Yes? Didn't you want me?" he whispered.

"I was afraid—you might think that all that sort of thing had made some difference before. It hadn't, you know—only you would not speak"—

"Oh, and you told Patty it was not nice to let boys kiss her, and you're doing it."

Raymond stood up very suddenly, and Natalie, leaning over the back of her chair, laughed into Willie's shocked face.

"Did you remark that dinner was ready?"

"No; I didn't, but it is, and if you don't come at once I shall tell Mrs. Morris—why."

Nero's Dining Room.

Excavators in Rome have uncovered the ancient dining room of the Emperor Nero. The chamber revolved by machinery. Underneath were three vertical shafts, down one of which the explorer descended for 120 feet without reaching the bottom. But near one of the other shafts he found a tank and below this a chamber twenty feet wide by sixty feet long, with stones carved as cog wheels, which evidently represented the machinery by which the dining room was made to revolve. Presumably slaves furnished the power. Close at hand and under the dining room was a bath, with rooms for various bathing processes, the walls being beautifully decorated with pictures.

STARTLING FINDS.

Church Plate From Sussex Picked Up In South African River.

The recent sensational discovery of a parcel of pearls in a gutter in Highbury reminds one of other cases of lost property being recovered in strange fashion—so strange, in fact, that the most daring of fiction writers would hardly care to put the incidents on paper; they would seem so improbable.

Not so very long ago some church plate which had been missing from a Sussex village for some years was discovered embedded in the mud of an obscure river in South Africa. How it came to be there is not known and probably never will be known.

Last summer one of the many visitors to a popular seaside resort on the South Coast lost a five-pound note. The loss was discovered at dinner. The dinner-party immediately broke up and everyone went in search of the missing fiver. The owner thought she had had it with her on the beach, but as there were hundreds of persons on the beach at the time she did not think it possible that it could be there. Yet there it was found, blowing about the beach along with a number of bits of unconsidered waste-paper. The party had been sitting together in a circle on the beach, and their chairs had not been moved; the fiver was being blown about in the centre of the circle. Hundreds of people were on the beach at the time. A few moments after the note was discovered the owner of the chairs came along to move his property out of the way of the incoming tide.

A man whose luck at finding property is quite uncanny once nearly failed to live up to his reputation. One day the spring of the hinge of his cigarette-case got out of order, and so prevented the case from closing properly. He always carried this case and his loose gold in his top right-hand waistcoat pocket. In pulling out the case he inadvertently took out three half-sovereigns with it, for the case had opened in his pocket and the coins had become wedged in between the two sides of the case.

The half-sovereigns fell on the pavement, and, although the night was dark, the man recovered two of the coins. The next day his friend chaffed him on his change of luck, but the laugh was soon with him, for on opening his umbrella he had [illegible] half-sovereign fall [illegible]

A man once put a sovereign on the top of a bill which he intended to pay, and placed the bill with the coin on a table. He was called away suddenly, and when he returned the sovereign had gone.

Some weeks afterwards the sovereign was found under a large book-case, and at the same time the real culprit was detected. The household dog, a large Newfoundland, had strolled in through the window and had swished the coin off the table.

McGILL BESTED VARSITY ARGOS TRIMMED OTTAWA

Shaughnessy's Team Will Not Play for the Dominion Honors

Big things happened in rugby circles on Saturday. Shaughnessy's boys of Montreal defeated Varsity by 22-14 and thereby won the Intercollegiate honors.

Argonauts defeated Ottawa by 30 to 12 and as a result, Hamilton Tigers are declared winners of the Interprovincial, as the McGill team has disbanded and will not play for Dominion honors, the title will be decided by a game between Hamilton Tigers and the winner of Parkdale and T. The hold that hockey has on the Ontario towns and cities is shown by the number of new rinks built during the past summer and those now should be the best the O.H.A. has under construction. This winter should be the best the O.H.A. has ever had.

BOWSER ROLLS IN

Assists In the Formation of New Political Party

BECOMES A DIVISIONIST.

But While He Believes In the Theories of the Infant Organization He Finds Its Practices Somewhat Objectionable—Mrs. B. Blamed.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

"WAS a pamphlet left here this afternoon for me?" inquired Mr. Bowser as soon as he reached home the other evening.

"I think something of the kind was thrown through the area gate," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"I shall want it the first thing after dinner."

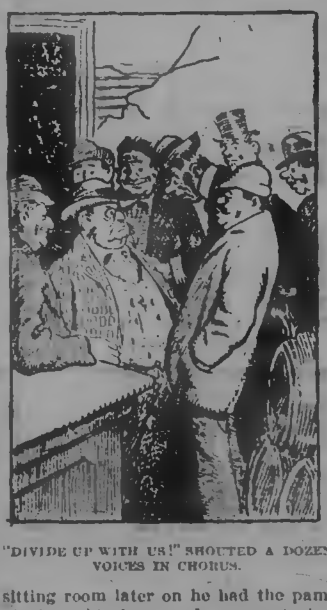
"It's on the piano."

"Mr. Dayball said he sent it, and I am anxious to devour its pages. That little pamphlet may create a revolution in this country."

"About what?"

"Never mind till after dinner. I want to eat fast so I can read. Mr. Dayball says there is a revolution coming, and I think so myself. Things can't go on this way much longer."

He finished his meal first and ran upstairs, and when she reached the sitting room later on he had the pamphlet on his knee and was gesturing and exclaiming:



"DIVIDE UP WITH US!" SHOUTED A DOZEN VOICES IN CHORUS.

"He's right—by thunder, he's right!"

"Is it a collection of family recipes?" was asked.

"Of course not. What would I be doing fooling around with family recipes?"

"Is it hints on hogs and chickens?"

Bowser Glares at Spouse.

He glared at her over the top of his spectacles for a minute and then resumed his reading, and it was not until a quarter of an hour later that he suddenly slapped his leg and exclaimed:

"By the horn spoon, but I'm seeing things in a different light from ever be- [illegible]

"And will you now explain what it is?" she asked.

"It relates to politics. There is to be a new party in the field next year. This pamphlet goes on to state why there should be a new one, and I'll be hanged if I don't agree with every word of it. Yes, sir, I'm seeing things as they have never occurred to me since I cast my first vote."

"And what is to be the name of the new party?"

"The Divisionists, probably. But, whatever it is, it is sure to sweep the whole country. We cannot be kept down any longer."

"Since when have you been kept down, as you call it, Mr. Bowser?"

"Never you mind about that, but get ready for one of the biggest landslides ever known in this country. It never was right and never will be right for one man to be worth $10,000,000 and another to have to work for $2 a day. All men should be equal. All property should be divided up. There should be no rich and no poor. I tell you there are truth and justice and reason in every line of this book, and I'm glad I got hold of it."

"Are you going to change your party?"

Changes His Politics.

"I am and announce it right here and now. Yes, sir, I'm a Divisionist, and if they want any speeches from me during the campaign I am at their service."

"I should think your adventures with politics last fall would have been enough to cure any further longing," she replied with a sigh.

"What's that? What do you mean by that?" he demanded as he rose up.

"Didn't your party throw you down after you spent about $50 for beer?"

"Never—never in this world! After I got the ball rolling I retired to make room for younger men. The idea of my party throwing me down!"

"Well, perhaps it didn't, but you got robbed and battered in a saloon, and some men had to bring you home. If I were you"—

"Stop right there, woman!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he brought his fist down on the stand between them. "I never got battered or robbed, and I was never brought home drunk. I simply participated in the opening of the campaign, and you know it as well as I do."

"Oh, that was it?"

"Yes, that was it, just as I am going out this evening to participate in what may be called the opening of the campaign of the new party. They have a meeting only three blocks away to effect an organization. I do not care to take an active part, but I wish them to know that I am on the side of the oppressed. I'd like my name to be the first on the list."

"Hadn't you better read the pamphlet clear through before committing yourself?" asked Mrs. Bowser as he walked back and forth.

Wrong For Thirty Years.

"I've read enough to satisfy me that I've been wrong for the last thirty years," he replied. "I have always felt that there was a right path if I could only find it, and it is here at last. By ginger, but it won't take us long to upset the existing order of things and give everybody a fair show! As they will probably get me on the platform to make a speech and perhaps want me to help draft a party platform, you needn't sit up for me."

Mrs. Bowser had no more to say, and Mr. Bowser found his hat and cane and set out. At the gate he was joined by a fellow Divisionist, a man who had been on the point of applying for something at the basement door. His original idea was abandoned for a better one, and he struck Mr. Bowser for a quarter.

"Of course not," was the reply. "Why should I give you a quarter? I'll bet, you haven't done an hour's work in the last six months. You go on!"

"And you go on, too!" answered the man. "There'll come a day when you bloated bondholders will have to shell out and divide up, and don't forget it!"

At the corner was another Divisionist, and he blocked the way and boldly demanded 15 cents for supper and lodgings.

"Don't you know it's against the law to solicit alms on the street?" sharply queried Mr. Bowser.

"I am not soliciting alms," was the surly reply. "I'm only asking for my fair share. I tell you, old man, things in this world have got to be divided up. They're holding a big meeting down here and whooping her up to beat the band. Are you going to cough up?"

Bowser Waxes Wrathy.

Mr. Bowser had to menace him with his cane to clear the path, and before he reached the hall he encountered a third and fourth and was addressed so impudently that it made his blood boil.

At the door of the hall he found several people who knew him by name and received something of an ovation but he had scarcely finished bowing his thanks when an individual crowded forward and confidentially suggested:

"Say, cap, it would be a nice little thing to buy a keg of beer before the speaking begins."

"I'm not in that line," was the reply.

"Then what are you here for?"

A second man crowded up and asked him for the loan of a dollar, and a third thought they ought to exchange hats to even up things. Another suggested cigars for the crowd, and the first comer returned to the subject of beer.

"I—I don't exactly understand this thing," said Mr. Bowser as they elbowed him around. "I have been reading a pamphlet and I am favorably impressed with its arguments and theories and have rolled in here to assist in the organization of the new party. [illegible] the arguments are very conclusive. I don't know when I have read anything that appealed to me more strongly. As the pamphlet says, no man should be richer than his fellow man, and no man"—

"Then divide up with us!" shouted a dozen voices in chorus.

"Oh, but that's different. We are here to effect an organization and start the ball a-rolling. We are here to"—

"We want beer and cigars."

"I say, we are here to"—

"To divide up! Somebody take the old croaker by the neck and shake a barrel of money out of him."

Wouldn't Be Bulldozed.

Mr. Bowser might have got out of it for a two dollar bill, but he wouldn't stand bulldozing. The result was that a score of men began elbowing him about, and of a sudden he made a dive for an opening and reached it. As he went out he headed for home at his best speed, and hard on his heels was a crowd of fifty enraged Divisionists. Mr. Bowser appeared. He had lost his hat and cane, and his eyes were bulging out and his ears working. He didn't stop to open the gate, but with a mighty leap he cleared the fence and was in the hall with the key turned in the door when the first of his pursuers fell up the front steps.

"Did you set the ball rolling and then retire?" asked Mrs. Bowser of the panting man who hung to the hall tree to get his breath.

It was two minutes before he could reply, and then he pointed upstairs and hoarsely said:

"Woman, to your room! In the morning I will settle with you for this sixteenth attempt to assassinate me!"

LAKES DISASTER FUND CIVIC CONCERT TO BE HELD

In Aid of the Fund on Monday Next — Lord Mayor to Preside.

Following the recent terrible disaster on the Great Lakes and the loss of life amongst the officers and crews of the respective vessels, a movement has sprung into action in the shape of a public appeal in opening a subscription list for the families of those sailors lost in the fearful occurrence. Substantial contributions are already offered by members of the Dominion Marine Association. The Mayor of Toronto will act as honorary treasurer, and Mr. H. H. Gildesleeve, manager of the R. & O Nav. Co., has been appointed general treasurer for the fund. Contributions should be sent to either of these gentlemen before December 1st. All subscriptions will be acknowledged. The mayors of all Canadian cities are being asked to co-operate in this appeal by acting as honorary treasurers in their respective localities.

In this connection there is this thought. In Peterborough nearly one thousand men met together last Thursday night to dine, and to consider ways and means to raise an immense fund to evangelize the world and incidentally send men and money to convert the Chinese and Japanese. These objects are very good, and those who urge them are animated by good motives.

The pitiful thing was, that with the papers full of details, with the horror of the appalling disaster and loss of life before them, no man in that large meeting referred to it, and no one was patriotic, thoughtful and considerate enough to say, "hold, here is where our money and interest should go at this time. Here is suffering among our very own people to be relieved." Two hundred and seventeen men drowned, nearly two hundred families made destitute, while men prepare to send money and men to the Chinese.

However with the end in view that charity begins at home, a grand concert is being organized by Mr. John Allan to be held on Monday next in St. Paul's Church. This is not a denominational affair, it is to be conducted in the name of the city. Mayor Bradburn is to preside over the concert, vocalists and artists are giving their services free and a collection is to be made in aid of the relatives of the victims of the disasters.

Further particulars will be published later and it is hoped that the public generally will give practical proof of their sympathy with the families of the brave sailors lost in the recent hurricane which swept the Great Lakes.

Mr. Wm. Collins, lockmaster at the Peterboro Lock, estimates that his returns on passenger traffic will show that forty thousand people passed through the lock on boats this season.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

On Thursday, November 20th, the local Council of Women hope to have a large and representative audience to meet Mrs. Wells in the Collegiate Institute Hall.

The local Council has an enrollment of twenty-nine societies representing upwards of 500 women in this city.

The committee who have this matter in charge, feel that such a backing means a crowded house, and they appeal to all women, whether connected or not with the Council to do their utmost to secure an audience of responsible citizens, very particularly the chosen few with a vote. The following extract has been culled from the Herald Washington, D.C.

"Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells gave an address last night on "The need of Police Women and their Work." Commissioner Randolph, chairman of the evening introduced the speaker. The necessity of women police officers was explained by Mrs. Wells. Women hesitate to go to a policeman for advice or help. This is easily understood, and it behooves every municipality to provide women officials who can render help in many ways where men would be powerless. The police woman's work is largely preventive. Mrs. Wells is small and we who heard her talk in a low sweet voice, would be apt to hazard a guess that she was a college professor or a literateur."

Mrs. Schneider, of London street, will not receive this week.

Mrs. H. O. Fiske will not receive to-morrow, nor again until the New Year.

Mrs. W. H. Hill, Bethune street, will not receive until after the New Year.

Mrs. Joseph Knox, 481 Gilmour street, will receive from 3.30 to 6, Tuesday afternoon, November 18.

Nurse Walkden has returned to Toronto after a visit with Mrs. Jas. Fanning, George street.

Mrs. J. H. Renwick, 567 Aylmer st. will be at home to-morrow, Tuesday November 18th, from 3.30 to 6 o'clock and not again until the New Year.

Mrs. M. A. Turner, 337 Downie street, will receive on Wednesday from four to six o'clock, and not again until the New Year.

THREW LEMON AT "THE GUY"

An Extra Number for the Land of Golden Dreams

If reports be true, there was some extra hilarity at the final presentation in Lindsay, of "The Land of [illegible] Miss Jessie Spence and [illegible] old Gollop, both of this city, who had been asked to take part.

At the night performance, the audience included a party of Peterboro rugby players, who had front seats. Naturally they applauded the Peterboro contributors, but some of the homebrew audience took another view of the affair, and it is said a lemon was hurled in the direction of Master Gollop, who was singing "Im the Guy."

"The Guy" reciprocated and returned the compliment. It is also said that some persons hissed when both Miss Spence and Master Gollop were performing.

SEEKS THE GUARDIANSHIP OF THE BOY

Case is Being Heard To-day Before Judge Huycke

At a County Court session to-day before His Honor Judge Huycke, Harold A. Howson, of Norwood, made application for guardianship of his half-brother, Reginald A. Howson, aged 8 years. The application was opposed by George Harding, of Dummer township, a grandfather of the child. F. D. Kerr appeared for the applicant, while E. H. D. Hall appeared for Harding.

Reginald Howson's father died some six years ago and his mother married again. About two years ago she passed away, hence the boy was without a guardian. Harold A. Howson lives in Toronto, but if he wins the case the boy will be allowed to stay with Mrs. B. Howson, an aunt by marriage, in Norwood.

EAGLE LAKE HUNTERS HAD GOOD LUCK

The Eagle Lake Hunt Club returned home on Saturday night after one of the best camps ever held in the history of the Club. They brought back thirteen deer and mighty fine [illegible] of the members [illegible] composed [illegible] Evans, C. Westlake, [illegible] Sheehy, W. [illegible] Evans, J. O'Leary, A. Fuller, A. G. Carruthers, J. Gibbs and M. Dobson.

"We never had a better trip," said Captain Gunsolus to a Review reporter this morning, while the other members of the camp voiced the same opinion.

One of the good stories that are being told on some of the crack shots of the party is that one morning two members on going out onto the lake paddled right into a bunch of four deer. As a result they became rather excited but at last recovered sufficiently to get a couple of of the deer. Another favorite is that two of the members of the party while sitting on the dam near the creek, saw a big moose swimming the creek. The hunters as result emptied their rifles at the swimming moose. The party claims that the shots numbered some 37. each

Mr. Sheehy, one of the members, proved his ability as an athlete by running a good half mile and capturing his deer.

BOYS WHO SHOT THEIR COMRADE HELD FOR TRIAL

Mad Prank at Port Credit, Where Lads Engaged In Battle With Rifles From Behind Trees Is Chargeable to Trashy Books and Wild West Picture Shows Declares Coroner.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Cecil Babcock and William Sherman, aged 15 and 17 respectively will be sent up for preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering Thomas Crisp while Ralph McCallum will be used as a material witness in the trial, as a result of the verdict returned last night by Chief Coroner Johnson's jury, which investigated the circumstances of the shooting affair, near Port Credit, last Saturday, in which Crisp was fatally wounded.

The jury found that Thomas Crisp came to his death as a result of a shot fired, either by William Sherman or Cecil Babcock, in an interchange of shots, with Crisp on the one side and Sherman and Babcock on the other. Their verdict was homicide, but it will be left to the jury in the trial to say whether it was a case of murder or manslaughter. Incorporated in the verdict was a strong recommendation that more stringent regulations be enforced regarding the sale or rental of firearms, and that the age limit for the purchase of same be raised.

William Sherman, one of the boys accused of the murder, told in a most intelligent and straightforward manner of the occurrence of the day up to the time of the shooting. The four boys had left on the nine o'clock car for Port Credit, and spent the morning and part of the afternoon shooting at rabbits and at a target. While walking along the road towards the city, Crisp began shooting into the air to frighten his companions, and in a short time they began retaliating in the same manner. In the course of a half an hour they arrived in front of the gate of Mr. Hall's property, when Crisp, who was in the lead turned and began shooting in the direction of the two boys, Sherman and Babcock, who were walking some distance behind him. Price dodged behind a telegraph post, while the other boys sought refuge behind posts on either side of the road. From these positions Babcock and Sherman began firing in the direction of the other boy, Price, but only in fun, with no intention of hitting him. Price in turn was firing at them. The fourth boy, McCallum, had no rifle, so he sat at the side of the road, out of the line of fire. After a time Sherman turned his back to Crisp and was reloading his gun, when he heard another shot, and immediately afterward Babcock called to him to look at Tommy. Sherman saw Crisp lying on the ground, and both boys ran over to him. Sherman claimed that his shot had not hit Crisp, as he had heard it hit the post. He also stated that Babcock had told someone that he (Babcock) had shot Tommy accidentally.

Ralph McCallum told practically the same story, while Constable Holmes stated that Babcock had confessed at No. 3 police station to having shot the boy accidentally. Other witnesses testified, but their testimony had very little weight, other than to establish the fact that Crisp had rented his rifle from Solomon Holbres, a second-hand dealer on East King street.

Coroner Johnson in his address to the jury laid stress on the fact that the boys were committing an unlawful act and must be held responsible for the result of the deed, as it resulted in the death of another boy. The one who fired the shot was guilty of murder. It was his opinion that there was no possibility of the shooting having been an accident, as the boys had, according to evidence, fired at least forty or fifty shots. He blamed the circulation of trashy books, wild west shows and melodramatic moving picture shows for exercising a bad influence on young boys.

TO ABOLISH "SWEATING"

Social Workers in London Plead for Welfare of Women

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Led by the Duchess of Marlborough, a great call for the abolition of "sweating" among women workers went forth yesterday from a conference of influential people at her home, Sunderland House, in Mayfair. Representatives of society, of the church, and of every political party united with the workers themselves demanding the abolition of "sweating." There were Mr. Masterman, financial secretary of the Treasury, urging that this was no party question; Lord Lytton condemning this "dry rot sapping the strength of the nation"; J. R. Clynes, a labor M.P., pleading for a place in life for the worst paid worker, and the Bishop of Oxford.

No speech brought home the conditions of "sweating" more forcibly than that of the duchess herself, who said that when it was remembered that two million women and girls are employed in factories and workshops in Great Britain, and at least 100,000 working for wages in their own homes, the question of "sweating" became surely a matter of great importance.

When Mr. Masterman arose to speak he discovered that suffragettes were present. Several women at the back of the room greeted him with cries of "Votes for women." As the interruptions continued the duchess of Marlborough appealed to the suffragette element to desist, with the desired effect.

Stewards promptly took a hand, and in the scrimmage were attacked also by male sympathizers with the women. Some of the stewards were kicked and badly bruised.

In spite of the fact that many of the disturbers were ejected, the uproar persisted to such an extent that at the end of half an hour the meeting was abandoned. WILSON THINKS HUERTA WILL HAVE TO CAPITULATE

Financial Boycott of Present Regime Will Bring Results He Thinks.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—That the United States in its policy toward the Provisional Government in Mexico is content to await the outcome of the steady pressure being exerted to bring about the downfall of the Huerta regime was apparent yesterday in official circles here. Exciting rumors from Mexico City wholly failed to ruffle the calm confidence of President Wilson or Secretary of State Bryon.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly," was the declaration of one high official of the Government in discussing the developments. The President was not at all aroused by reports that Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affairs, was about to quit Mexico City, and it was stated that no orders had been given either to Mr. O'Shaughnessy or John Linn at Vera Cruz, to leave Mexico. Rumors that the American embassy would be closed within 48 hours were characterized in official sources as "fake."

The President told callers during the day that while there had been some change in the Mexican relations as to persona there had been no essential change in the circumstances to which he had referred the other day as seeming favorable to a solution of the difficulties.

The President, it is said, is confident that the financial boycott of the Huerta regime by the United States and the great foreign powers will be a powerful factor in bringing about the end of Huerta.

While in some quarters there was a disposition to regard Cabinet changes in Mexico, as the forerunner of disintegration of the Huerta regime, in others it was pointed out that they might mark the adoption by Gen. Huerta of a more active and vigorous policy and one more defiant of the United States Government.

The possibility of an interruption of railroad communication between the City of Mexico and Vera Cruz, which is now practically the only outlet for the capital, is giving considerable concern to the officials here and it is said that any attempt to thus completely isolate Americans and other foreigners in the Mexican capital would result in quick action by the United States to prevent it.

Secretary Bryan had heard from some of his agents that the line of communication was threatened, but it was not clear whether the interruption was to be expected as a result of some decree of the Huerta Government or from operations of the revolutionists, who have suddenly appeared in some force in the difficult mountain country lying between Vera Cruz and the capital.

BOYS SUSPECTED OF CAUSING SEVERAL FIRES AT MILLBROOK

ALSO TAMPERED WITH SWITCHES

What is suspected as the wild pranks of some bad boys have held the citizens of Millbrook in constant anxiety this last few days. Setting fire to buildings has been their greatest pleasure, and when on Sunday evening Mrs. Stevenson's barn was burned it was suspected that these lads had a hand in it. These suspicions were greatly strengthened last evening when two more fires occurred.

Mrs. Evans, who resides across the road from Mrs. Stevenson, was working in the front part of her house yesterday, and on returning to the kitchen she found a small fire blazing in the middle of the floor. It had no doubt been started by some mischievous lad, whose mind had been turned by the tale of some "Wild West" and a few more such "bad" men.

Mr. Shaw, a G.T.R. sectionman, arrived home in time last night to extinguish a small blaze that had been started at the door of his stable. No doubt this was also the work of the same boy, or boys.

If their actions had been confined to houses alone it would not have been so serious, but they tampered with several G.T.R. switches, and on last Friday night the watchful eye of Conductor P. Dougherty, of the G.T.R. "Moonlight," prevented an accident. He noticed a switch partially open just in time to have it set before the night passenger train came through.

Constable Miller is making an investigation.

FEDERAL INQUIRY WILL BE MADE INTO LAKE DISASTER

Wreck Commissioner Lindsay and Two Others Will Form Board to Investigate and to Suggest Future Action to Make Navigation Safer —Proposed Bill Will Make Captains Obey Signals.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—There will be a searching Departmental enquiry into the terrible marine disaster on the great lakes. Capt. Lindsay, Dominion wreck commissioner, and two others will form the board, which will meet at Goderich or Sarnia probably. The duties of the commissioners will not only consist of probing certain aspects of the recent wrecks, but to suggest some future line of action on the part of the Government in order to make navigation on the great lakes safer.

The Cabinet at yesterday's meeting voted $25,000 for the fund for the relief of the sufferers in the lake disasters. The amount will supplement the sum raised by the general public.

The Government is receiving reports hourly, claiming that the failure of captains and officers to give proper regard to official storm signals, was in a large sense responsible for some of the catastrophes, while it is further claimed that had some of the steamers been equipped, as are ocean liners, with apparatus for sprinkling oil upon the troubled waters, the disaster could not have been so great.

It is expected that later on a commission will be appointed to consider the whole question of lake and river navigation. Hon. J. D. Hazen has a proposed bill already printed which will make regulations more binding upon skippers and impose penalties. Such a commission, it is said here, might redraft the bill if this is deemed necessary.

The whole question of Government insurance has been revived as a result of the great lakes disaster. At present Lloyd's discriminates against Canadian shipping.

Three Inquests Planned.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—It is understood that the Provincial Government is arranging to have three inquests held in the lake counties which have been receiving the bodies of the storm victims. The enormity of the task, if otherwise handled, has been pointed out to the Attorney-General, and the Department has taken action towards centralizing the investigations.

Walkerton for Bruce County; Sarnia for Lambton, and Goderich for Huron, have been chosen, and the Department has instructed the local crown attorneys as to the best course to pursue.

The Attorney-General states that he is not aware of any steps planned at Ottawa, and that the instructions he has issued will be subject to change if found necessary.

DOG BETRAYED HIM.

Toronto Burglar Owes Arrest To the Actions of a Terrier.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—His suspicions aroused by the actions of a small white terrier dog, Constable Crummey entered the rear of the tailoring shop of A. Samuel & Co., at 321 West Queen street, at 12.30 this morning and caught Samuel A. Corbett, a trainman, of 19 Baker avenue, West Toronto, rifling the premises.

The constable nightly walks up a back lane on Queen street to see that all is in order, and last night, on coming to the rear of Samuel's shop, the white terrier ran up to him, fawned upon him, cringing as if in fear. Entering the premises through a back shed, the constable came upon Corbett bending over a pile of clothing. Asked what he was doing there, the man feigned drunkenness, and mumbled an unintelligable reply, but at last said he lived there. Hearing a noise in the store, Constable Crummey promptly handcuffed his man to a post and went in search of an accomplice, but could find none. A police call brought half a dozen more officers and the premises were thoroughly searched, but the other culprit had escaped.

Corbett proved a tartar when it came to getting him in the patrol wagon. He fought three policemen as long as he could stand against them, and after he had been placed in the patrol, he jumped on the guard and attempted to break away.

RUN DOWN BY AUTO.

Eight-Year-Old Toronto Girl Dies of Her Injuries.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—While running along the roadway with two other little girls on Clinton street, just north of College, at six o'clock last night, eight-year-old May Gordon of 600 College street was run down by a motor car driven by Frank Bethel of 433 Palmerston avenue, sustaining injuries to her head and body from which she died an hour later in the Western Hospital.

At the time of the accident the child was returning with some wool with which her mother was going to knit a woollen bonnet for her chum's doll. The children were all running quickly down the sidewalk, when May swerved suddenly to the road way, and although one of the other girls called to her to watch out for the approaching motor car, she ran directly in front of it, was struck in the temple, and thrown unconscious underneath the wheels of the car.

Mr. Bethel, the driver, picked up the unconscious child and drove at top speed to the Western Hospital, but she never regained consciousness.

Driving to the detective office at the City Hall, Mr. Bethel told of the occurrence and explained in detail how it occurred. He was not detained by the police.

THE TOLL OF THE LAKES

Are we getting used to disasters? It really seems like it from the calm way in which we receive the news of the most appalling calamities which some years ago would have moved us to the very depths of our being. Have we any depths to move? Have we become shallow and hard-hearted? Can nothing shock us?

The blow of the great series of disasters on the lakes was somewhat broken by the gradual way in which the full details of the loss was revealed in the newspapers. The sinking of the Titanic staggered the imagination at one stroke. The story of the wrecks on the lakes was told by instalments and in brief, matter of fact telegrams, and its enormity was therefore not fully realized. But now, with all the tragic facts before us, the mind can grasp the full import of what has happened, and no one with a heart for the sufferings and sorrows of humanity can remain unmoved in the presence of this awful toll of death which the mighty lakes have demanded from those who do business in great waters. Bodies of strong men, who but a week ago were full of life and hope, are being cast up by those inland seas, dumb witnesses of the terrible buffettings and lashing of the storm, which in its mad fury must have pounded those great vessels, probably dashing them against each other like toys and thrusting them beneath the billows with all their human freight, never to rise again. [illegible] our security. Let us think of those who are suffering to-day, and try to enter into their experience. If we can do this, we cannot but respond to their call for our practical sympathy. What we can do humanity bids us do. An appeal has come from the Mayor of Toronto to our city for help. Mayor Bradburn is looking to the citizens of Peterborough who can afford, and who have been themselves shielded from calamity, to give willingly and liberally to the Great Lake Disaster Fund. Let not this appeal be made in vain.

On Monday next a definite effort will be made and a special opportunity will be presented to all citizens to help this fund by means of a Benefit Concert, at which the best musical talent of the city will gather and give their services free to help this Fund. All the cities in Canada are responding to the call for help. Peterborough is no mean city and must not give a mean contribution. We cannot give the sailors now, but there are storms on land as well as on sea, and this coming Winter may overwhelm some of the bereaved ones if we do not come to their relief. Other cities will do their duty. Peterborough must not lag behind.

BOYS AND GUNS

There have been an unusual number of fatalities reported lately through rifle accidents. This is perhaps natural at this time of the year, but in an exceptionally large number of the cases reported the accidents were caused through boys using these fire arms. One of the latest was the sad case in Kingston where a boy who was shooting flies in the house with an air gun accidentally shot his mother, the small shot entering her eye and killing her almost instantly.

To say that such cases ought to be a lesson is a mere platitude. That something drastic ought to be done in the way of stopping boys from using these weapons at all is very patent. Complaints have come in from the out-skirts of our own city of boys wandering about with shot guns and firing away with impunity. This is another instance of the laxity of parents in the restraint of their boys, for no boy could have a gun without his parents knowing it, and most of them must be purchased by these parents.

They say "boys will be boys," but boys will be Barbarians if they are not under proper parental discipline and control. The boy who injures another with a gun is not responsible, the one who must bear the blame is the one who permits him to handle a gun.

JEKEL AND HYDE

The question must force itself more and more upon those who read the Globe editorials with any intelligence, whether that newspaper is sincere in its advocacy of a Canadian navy? One day it will print a jingoistic article demanding the immediate production of two fleet units, and the next day it will hold up its hands in horror at the madness and the criminal waste in navy building in Europe.

It would appear that there were two editors on that great newspaper, and that they are in perpetual combat with one another; or else that the Globe is a sort of Jekel and Hyde who one day masquerades as an apostle of peace and disarment and the next as a fire-eating son of Mars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, offerings today amounted to 2900 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 800 calves.

A feature of the trade today was the stronger feeling in the market for common cattle, and prices as compared with a week ago show an advance of 30c to 40c per 100 pounds. The better grades of cattle were unchanged in price. Common bulls were active, and sales of round lots were made at $4.40 to $4.60, and canning cows at $3.40 to $3.50 per 100 pounds. A new departure in the trade was the demand from American buyers for milch cows and springers. Butchers' cattle were fairly active, there being a good demand for small lots to fill actual wants.

Owing to the small supplies of lambs coming forward for the season of the year and the keen competition between buyers for the same, the undertone to the market continues strong, and prices have scored another advance of 25c per 100 pounds. The trade was active, and sales of western stock were made at $7.50 to $7.75, and eastern at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds. There was no further change in sheep, but prices were firm, with a good demand for ewes at $4.75 to $5 per 100 pounds. Grass fed calves brought 4⅜c to 4½c, and milk-fed 5½c to 7½c.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs today, and prices advanced 10c per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75, do., medium, $6.50 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.75, canners, $3.40 to $3.50, butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; do., bulls, $4.50 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $90, do., common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5, bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7 to $7.75.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.35 to $9.60.

Calves, $5 to $15.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"There's a girl wants to see Miss Turner."

"She says it's important. I guess the poor thing's in hard luck from the look of her," the kindly Fannie added.

"Oh, then, she'll be welcome, of course!" Aggie declared, and Garson nodded in acquiescence. "Tell her to come in and wait, Fannie. Miss Turner will be here right away." She turned to Garson as the maid left the room. "Mary sure is an easy boob," she remarked cheerfully. "Bless her soft heart!"

A minute later a girl perhaps twenty years of age stepped just within the doorway and stood there with eyes downcast after one swift, furtive glance about her. Her whole appearance was that of dejection. Her soiled black gown, the cringing posture, the pallor of her face, proclaimed the abject misery of her state.

"Are you Miss Turner?" she asked in a voice broken by nervous dismay.

"Really, I am very sorry," Aggie replied primly, "but I am only her cousin, Miss Agnes Lynch. But Miss Turner is likely to be back any minute now."

"Can I wait?" came the timid question.

"Certainly," Aggie answered hospitably. "Please sit down."

As the girl obediently sank down on the nearest chair Garson addressed her sharply, so that the visitor started uneasily at the unexpected sound.

"You don't know Miss Turner?"

"No," came the faint reply.

"Then, what do you want to see her about?"

"She once helped a girl friend of mine, and I thought—I thought"—

"You thought she might help you," Garson interrupted.

"You have been in stir—prison, I mean." Aggie hastily corrected the lapse into underworld slang.

Came a distressed muttering of assent from the girl.

The conversation was put to an end by the entrance of Mary, who stopped short on seeing the limp figure huddled in the chair.

"A visitor, Agnes?" she inquired.

At the sound of her voice the girl looked up and spoke with some degree of energy.

"You're Miss Turner?" she questioned.

"Yes," Mary said. Her words rang kindly and she smiled encouragement.

A gasp burst from the white lips of the girl, and she cowered as one stricken physically.

"Mary Turner! Oh, my God! I"—She hid her face within her arms and sat bent until her head rested on her knees in an abasement of misery.

Vaguely startled by the hysterical outburst from the girl, Mary's immediate thought was that here was a pitiful instance of one suffering from starvation.

"Joe," she directed rapidly, "have Fannie bring a glass of milk with an [illegible]

The girl in the chair was shaking soundlessly under the stress of her emotions. A few disjointed phrases fell from her quivering lips.

"I didn't know—oh, I couldn't!"

"Don't try to talk just now," Mary warned, reassuringly. "Wait until you've had something to eat."

Aggie, who had observed developments closely, now lifted her voice in tardy lamentations over her own stupidity.

"Why, the poor gawk's hungry!" she exclaimed. "And I never got the dope on her. Ain't I the simp!"

The girl regained a degree of self control and showed something of forlorn dignity.

"Yes," she said dully, "I'm starving."

Mary regarded the afflicted creature with that sympathy born only of experience.

"Yes," she said softly, "I understand." Then she spoke to Aggie. "Take her to my room and let her rest there for awhile. Have her drink the egg and milk slowly and then lie down for a few minutes anyhow."

Half an hour afterward Aggie reported with her charge, who, though still shambling of gait and stooping, showed by some faint color in her face and an increased steadiness of bearing that the food had already strengthened her much.

"She would come," Aggie explained. "I thought she ought to rest for awhile longer anyhow."

"I'm all right, I tell you," came the querulous protest.

"Are you quite sure?" Mary said to the girl. "Then tell me all about it—this trouble of yours, you know. What is your name?"

"Helen Morris."

"I don't have to ask if you have been in prison. Your face shows it."

"I—I came out—three months ago."

"And you'd made up your mind to go straight?"

"Yes." The word was a whisper.

"You were going to do what the chaplain had told you," Mary went on. "You were going to start all over again, weren't you?"

The bent head of the girl bent lower in assent.

"It doesn't work very well, does it?"

"No; I'm whipped."

Mary's manner changed. She spoke cheerfully for the first time.

"Well, then, how would you like to work with us?"

"You—you mean that"—

"Our kind of work pays well when you know how. Look at us. Suppose I should stake you for the present and put you in with a good crowd. All you would have to do would be to answer advertisements for servant girls. I will see that you have the best of references. Then, when you get in with the right people you will open the front door some night and let in the gang. Of course you will make a getaway when they do and get your bit [illegible]

"You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year."

There flashed [illegible] swift, sly glances, and the lips of the girl parted as if she would speak, but she did not; only her head sagged ever lower on her breast and the shrunken form grew yet more shrunken.

"It doesn't suit you? Good! I was in hopes it wouldn't. So, here's another plan. Suppose you could go west—some place where you would have a fair chance, with money enough so you could live like a human being till you got a start?"

There came a tensing of the relaxed form, and the head lifted a little, so that the girl could look at her questioner.

"I will give you that chance," Mary said simply, "if you really want it."

The wretched girl sat suddenly erect and her words came eagerly.

"Oh, I do!" And now her hungry gaze remained fast on the face of the woman who offered her salvation.

"Then I have just one thing to say to you first. If you are going to live straight start straight, and then go through with it. Do you know what that means?"

"You mean keep straight all the time?" The girl spoke with a force drawn from the other's strength.

"I mean more than that. I mean forget that you were ever in prison. I don't know what you have done—I don't think I care. But whatever it was, you have paid for it—a pretty big price too."

"I have, I have!" The thin voice broke, wailing.

"Well, then," Mary went on, "just begin all over again, and be sure you stand up for your rights. Don't let them make you pay a second time. Go where no one knows you, and don't tell the first people who are kind to you that you have been crooked. If they think you are straight, why, be it. Then nobody will have any right to complain. Will you promise me this?"

"Yes, I promise," came the answer very gravely, quickened with hope.

"Good!" Mary exclaimed, with a smile of approval. "Wait a minute," she added and left the room.

"Huh! Pretty soft for some people," Aggie remarked to Garson, with a sniff.

Mary returned soon. In her hand she carried a roll of bills. She went to the girl and held out the money.

"Take this. It will pay your fare west and keep you quite awhile if you are careful."

But, without warning, a revulsion seized on the girl. She shrank again and turned her head away as her body trembled.

"I can't take it!" she exclaimed. "I can't! I can't!"

"Didn't you come here for help?"

"Yes," was the faltering reply, "but—but—I didn't know—it was you!"

"Then you have met me before?" Mary said quietly.

"No, no!" The girl's voice rose shrill.

Aggie spoke her mind with frankness. "She's lying."

Garson agreed. His yes was spoken in a tone of complete certainty. That Mary, too, was of their opinion was shown in her next words.

"So you have met me before? Where?"

The girl unwittingly made confession in her halting words.

"I can't tell you." There was despair in her voice.

"You must."

The girl only crouched lower.

"I can't!" she cried again, panting as if in exhaustion.

"Why can't you?"

"Because—because"— The girl could not go on.

"What were you sent up for?"

"For stealing."

"Stealing what?"

"Goods."

"Where from?"

"The Emporium."

In a flash of intuition the whole truth was revealed to the woman who stood looking down at the cowering creature before her.

"The Emporium!" she repeated. There was a tragedy in the single word. "Then you are the one who"—

The accusation was cut short by the girl's shriek.

"I am not! I am not, I tell you!"

For a moment Mary lost her poise. Her voice rose in a flare of rage.

"You are! You are!"

The craven spirit of the girl could struggle no more. She could only sit in a huddled, shaking heap of dread. Mary soon mastered her to such an extent that when she spoke again, as if in self communion, her words came quietly, yet with overtones of a supreme woe.

"She did it!" Then after a little she addressed the girl with a certain wondering before this mystery of horror. "Why did you throw the blame on me?"

The girl made several efforts before her mumbling became intelligible, and then her speech was gasping, broken with fear.

"I found out they were watching me, and I was afraid they would catch me. So I took them and ran into the cloak room and put them in a locker that wasn't close to mine and some in the pocket of a coat that was hanging there. God knows I didn't know whose it was. I just put them there—I was frightened"—

"But they caught you later. Why didn't you tell then?"

"I was afraid," came the answer from the shuddering girl. "I told them it was the first time I had taken anything, and they let me off with a year."

"You cried and lied, and they let you off with a year. I wouldn't cry. I told the truth—and"— Mary's voice broke in a tearless sob. The color had gone out of her face, and she stood rigid, looking down at the girl whose crime had ruined her life with an expression of infinite loathing in her eyes.

Aggie took advantage of the pause. Her voice was acid. "Some people are sneaks—just sneaks!"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Food For Invalids.

Many good cooks cannot cook satisfactorily for invalids. They fail to realize that the invalid's food must contain as much nutriment and as little bulk as possible; that, although it must be nourishing, it must be dainty as well.

After the invalid's food is cooked much remains to be done to make it palatable. The daintiest china, the brightest silver and the whitest table linen are none too good for the invalid's service. The hot food must be served hot, not warm, and the cool food must be served cool. A single flower on the lunch tray often acts as a better appetizer than a bottleful of medicine, and a small amount of food tastefully arranged is sure to be of greater benefit than a large amount—unappetizing because of its very bulk.

DEATH OF TWO FORMER PETERBORO PEOPLE TO BE INVESTIGATED

Demise of Miss Ettie Forsyth is Followed by Death of Her Sister—Father Says Cause Was Vaccine Poisoning

Hamilton Spectator

The death of Mrs. Mary Alice Griffin, at her home, 67 Younge st. early Sunday morning, under conditions similar to those attending the death of Miss Etta Forsyth, a sister, who died in the same home one week previous, will be investigated by a coroner's jury. Coroner R. Y. Parry decided the circumstances warranted him sending the stomach to Toronto for analysis. The jury empaneled met at Robinson's undertaking rooms at 10.30 o'clock, and after viewing the remains, adjourned till Monday night next at 8 o'clock to continue the enquiry at central police station.

A Spectator reporter interviewed the husband at his home, Young street, this morning:

"I am of the opinion that my wife's death was due to vaccine poisoning, and that her sister, Miss Forsyth, died from the same cause," said Mr. Griffin. "In July last I was stricken with smallpox and was quarantined in the upper rooms of my house, while my wife and children, Miss Forsyth, and another married sister, Mrs. Renton, and her 10-year-old daughter, were quarantined in the rooms below me. In order to look after me my wife and her sisters had to place medicines and food on the stairway, leading from their apartments to mine. There was considerable bad odors arising from my illness, which they could not help inhaling, as they placed these things on the stairway for me. This, I think, had something to do with the death of my wife and her sister, the principal cause, however, being vaccine poisoning. They were all vaccinated at that time. My two children, who were vaccinated a year ago, have shown no signs of illness but the 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Renton who was vaccinated at the same time as my wife and Miss Forsyth, is now developing the same symptoms as they did some time previous to their death. My wife has always been a healthy woman, but ever since she was vaccinated she has been complaining of not feeling well. Every morning for weeks, immediately after arising, she would have to vomit, and the sister who died a week previous to her death was exactly the same."

Coroner, Dr. R.Y. Parry, when seen by a Spectator reporter immediately after the inquest this morning, said he thought the deaths of the two women might be due to lead poisoning from old water pipes or ptomaine poisoning from canned goods. When asked if he thought their deaths might be due to vaccine poisoning, following their vaccination as far back as July, he said he was not prepared to say as to that, as he was not sure as to the length of time vaccine poisoning might remain in the system before causing death. He gave it as his opinion that Miss Forsythe had died from internal poisoning.

When a Spectator reporter called at the home on Young Street this morning he found two bright little girls clinging fondly to the father. The aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Forsythe, who within the past week have lost two daughters, were present. They only recently moved to this city from Peterboro.

The funeral of their daughter, Miss Etta, was held from their residence, 83 Augusta street, Saturday last, and the death of the other daughter, Mrs. Griffin, following within a few hours, proved a crushing blow, and their grief was extreme.

Mrs. Griffin was in her 54th year Miss Etta being in her 30th year. The funeral of the former will be held privately from the parents' residence to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

There was a conference of physicians at the Griffin home yesterday after the woman died. Dr Roberts medical health officer, was among those present. The doctors agreed that the proper procedure to determine the cause of death was to have the stomach analyzed.

When the Forsyth family resided in Peterboro, their home was the first house on the Chemong Road north of Wolsley street. They have many friends in Peterboro.

DIRECTORS OF INSTITUTE MET

The Board of Directors of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute met at the City Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon, Mr. C. E. Moore, the President, in the chair; also Messrs. A. The first business was to make selections of subjects for the speakers who will take part in the Ennismore and Lakefield meetings on December 1st; also to make arrangements for halls entertainment etc. The secretary was instructed to invite several speakers to be present and give short addresses.

The matter of forming a Ploughman's Club was taken up, and seemed to find favor with those present, and it was decided to bring the matter before the County Council and the Agricultural Societies, and at the Institute meetings to get the opinions of the farmers, and then decide whether or not to proceed with the proposition.

LINDSAY BREAKS THE MILK RING

Milk Vendors Drop Price to Seven Cents

Lindsay, Nov. 18—The milk ring which was organized in town about one week ago is burst—dead as a mackerel; got the black eye from the citizens, and the milk vendor, the advocates of high-priced lacteal food for Lindsay have received their quietus and the fluid is being dealt out at the old price to-day, namely seven cents per quart. It was an unsuccessful endeavor on the part of a few milkmen to secure a raise in price.

GOLD WATCH PRESENTED

To Miss Vera Whitfield at May's Schoolhouse

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the trustees, parents and children S. S. No. —, met in the fine new school building familiarly known as May's School House, to do honor to the occasion of the presentation of a gold watch to Miss Vera Whitfield, by Mr. Burnham, M.P. After several songs by the children and addresses by Inspector Lees, the Chairman, Trustees Barnes and Hunter, presentation was made by Mr. Burnham who said that he considered it a great honor to present the winner of distinction in education with a mark of that distinction. He had been in several of the township schools on the same errand and the gatherings were all like this one, the very best that the section could afford. Enthusiasm in the cause of learning meant a vast deal to both people and pupils and he was rejoiced to see the interest that was being taken in it.

THERE WAS PLENTY OF AMMUNITION

A Lindsay Report on the Disturbance in Opera House

Under a heading of Peterborites Drew Rough House Methods, the Lindsay Warder says:

The final performance of 'The Land of Golden Dreams" Amateur Company Saturday night was poorly attended, and the extravaganza was rather loosely staged, owing to a number of parts being left out.

The audience was also graced (?) by the presence of a number of young men from our neighboring city to the east, Peterborough, who occupied seats in the bald-headed row, where they could get the best view of the stage settings, etc. They came armed with a large bag of lemons, one large cabbage head and a number of onions, and with the opening scenes the lemons began to make their appearance on the stage. This was kept up until resented by the audience and also by those on the stage, and finally one of the local amateurs, after getting off a number of jokes on the Peterborites squelched them with the following short address: Advancing to the footlights and holding a lemon to the view of the audience, he remarked, "This is what the Peterborough fellows use in their cocktails." The remark had the tendency of quietening the sports from the east.

After such an outburst of wit we don't wonder at the result.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD-LAD WANTS TO REMAIN WITH GRANDPA

He Has Been Living With Him and is Apparently Happy

The case of George Harding contesting the application of Harold A. Howson for the guardianship of Reginald Howson, the former's grandson and the latter's half brother, was heard yesterday before His Honor Judge Huycke.

Six years ago William Howson, father of Harold and Reginald Howson passed away and left between three and four thousand dollars for Reginald. Mr Benjamin Howson a brother of the deceased and the deceased's son Harold were made the executors of the will. Mr Benjamin Howson has since passed away and his wife, a resident of Norwood, was left his property, and therefore became an executrix of the will of the late William Howson.

About eight months ago William Howson's wife who was Reginald's mother and Harold's stepmother, died. Since then Reginald has lived with his grandfather and grandmother, and has become greatly attached to the elderly couple.

Harold Howson is a traveller for a piano firm in Toronto, where he makes his home. He would like to have the boy with him where he could have every advantage of up-to-date schools and receive religious training. Several witnesses, among them being Mr. J. B. Pearce, J.P., of Norwood, and School Inspector Lees testified that the little fellow could [illegible] grandfather. [illegible] Mr. Harding's residence several times and although it was a fairly comfortable house there were no luxuries.

Mr. George Harding when called to the stand stated that he was 59 years of age and his wife was 58. He had a farm in the township of Dummer which was a fair average among other farms in the vicinity. The reason why he wanted to have the boy was that he liked him and he had no children at home. At the death bed of the little lad's father he promised to be a father to the child and when the hand of death removed his mother, he took the child according to his promise to the father. It was with the greatest difficulty that the old man suppressed sobs which fully showed that he was greatly attached to the boy. Mr Harding stated that he attended the Bethel Church and the little lad was given every opportunity of availing himself with a religious training.

Mr C. F. Darling, ex-Reeve of Dummer, Mr George Garbutt and Mr. Joseph Batten, the well-known local blacksmith, all testified that the Hardings were fairly well-to-do people and the little boy could have a comfortable home. In reference to there not being any carpets on the floors Mr Batten stated that he had been in quite a few farmer's homes in his day and carpets were not found in very many. Mr R. Deen, clerk of the Township of Dummer gave evidence to the fact that Mr. Harding's home was worth between six and seven thousand dollars.

While the question as to where his future home should be was being discussed, little Reginald sat in the press box with a cheerful face and told a Review reporter that he liked to go to school and liked his teacher. He wanted to stay with his grand-dad and it was clear from his conversation that the old man had truly been a guardian of the finest type to him.

His Honor Judge Huycke called the little fellow aside and questioned him as to where he would like to live. It was clear when he returned that the question of his going to any other home had brought tears. His Honor called Mrs. Benjamin Howson aside and found that she had two daughters attending school, one in the High School and the other a Public School in Norwood. She was an ardent church member and the little fellow could find a very comfortable home with her. His Honor also had a consultation with Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. E. H. D. Hall.

"This case has caused me much anxiety," remarked His Honor. He stated that on both sides there was evidence to the fact that the little lad would have a very comfortable home in either case, yet there were also very serious disadvantages on both sides. He suggested that Mr. Harding and Mr. Howson talk the matter over with their respective lawyers and see if they wouldn't be both satisfied with having Mrs. Benjamin Howson made the lad's guardian. He was convinced that this would make it much better for both parties for if Mr. Howson took him to Toronto, Mr. Harding could not see him often and if Mr. Harding kept him, then Mr. Howson couldn't see him often, but by leaving the boy with Mrs. Howson, who had control of the boy's money, both gentlemen could visit him frequently and he would be in a very good place. His Honor gave them till next Monday at two o'clock to think it over and come to a decision.

The Review man asked little Reginald if he liked the idea and the lad answered amid a flow of tears, "I want to stay with grandpa."

THE LEGAL COMMITTEE

Deals With Suggestions by Ald. [illegible]

ACCIDENT CLAIMS

In response to Ald. Buller's suggestion in Council that information be secured as to the Workmen's Compensation Act, the following letter was read at a meeting of the Legal Committee last night:

G. N. Gordon, Esq.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir—Re Workmen's Compensation Act, I regret to say that at present all the material used on the Workmen's Compensation Committee is out of print. I understand the final report of the Commissioner is now being prepared, but as yet has not been submitted.

Yours faithfully,
A. M. DYMOND.
Law Clerks Public Bills.

Ald. Gordon noted that the bill had been reported by Sir Wm. Meredith and has appeared in the Press.

Members of the Committee were inclined towards levity in dealing with Ald. Buller's suggestions, which also included a request that information be secured regarding Prison Farms.

The Naval Bill and The Mexican Situation were referred to as more interesting topics for discussion.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES

It was decided to recommend to the Board of Police Commissioners that the police department learn the particulars of accidents, in which the City is interested, as soon as possible after an accident. This decision grew out of a discussion on three claims for damages.

A suggestion by the chairman that policies be taken up to cover accidents on the streets and highways was favorably received.

Mention was made of a situation on Belmont Avenue, where a sidewalk was constructed in the path of a large tree, which is now in the centre of the walk. In case of accident the City would be liable. It was the general opinion that the tree should not be there.

There are even women who dislike sunshine because their clothes look shabbier then.

Chas. Johnston is Found Guilty of Theft

Walter Mahaffey Admits Stealing Articles—Both Remanded

Chas Johnston was found guilty this morning by Magistrate Dumble on the charge of stealing seventeen hens from Mrs. Turner. Walter Mahaffey pleaded guilty to the charge of being implicated in the theft of the raincoat valued at seven dollars and a coat and hat valued at two dollars and a half. Johnston pleaded guilty to the same charges but not guilty to the charge of stealing a lap rug. Mahaffey said he stole the rug. On the charge of the theft of the lap rug, Johnston was remanded for a week, while Mahaffey was remanded one week for sentence.

G. N. Gordon appeared for the prisoner, Johnston, while Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution.

Another charge will probably be laid against Johnston next Monday.

"If I'm sent down you'll have to look after my wife and family," remarked Mahaffey during the proceedings. Chief Thompson admitted this to be the case.

ON THE LONG TRAIL

Strange Things Happened There

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Beth Cushman was riding home by way of the long trail. It was a yielding to sentiment that Beth herself despised, but she could not help it when she came to the crossroads.

The long trail had been her favorite ride with Miles Hill, but that handsome cowpuncher had ceased to call upon Miss Cushman.

From the trail she could look down into a little canyon through the middle of which rushed a frolicsome stream. On the bank of the stream there stood a horse and rider, a girl on a cream colored pony.

Beth drew a jealous breath, for she could see that the girl was lovely in a blond, golden haired, pink and white way.

As she gazed down there, the white pony lipped the stream and, out from the rocks of the canyon, there dashed a horse and rider. It was Miles Hill [illegible]. Beth caught her breath as the man rode rapidly toward the girl, bent [illegible] and, with his arm around her slender waist, the two forded the stream and rode rapidly up the canyon and disappeared from view.

Entirely heartsick, but with a brave smile on her lips, Beth sat down to supper that night.

Her uncle, a morose, taciturn man, ate silently and swiftly, and rising, went away on some official errand, for he was sheriff of the county.

Mrs. Colt and her two daughters breathed a little easier after his departure and began to talk to the two cowboys who ate with the family.

"Pa hasn't said anything, but I reckon he's off on that Tinkerman case," observed Mrs. Colt.

"I reckon he is," returned Link Paterson, buttering another biscuit.

"Some one said Miles Hill had disappeared from the range," went on Mrs. Colt, with a side glance at her niece.

"Jameson hinted that Miles was mixed up in the Tinkerman raid," put in Louise Colt eagerly.

"Jameson better try again. There ain't a squarer fellow nowhere than Miles Hill," muttered Link.

"Where is Miles, then?" demanded Cora.

"Miles? Why, I can't say exactly. It's sort of a secret, you know, ma'am." Link grew very red and looked at Beth's pathetic face.

Beth lifted her head haughtily. Her eyes flashed splendidly.

"I don't know why his whereabouts should be a secret," she said nervily. "I saw him today."

"Oh, you did?" queried Link, relieved, and Sammy Smith asked quickly:

"I reckon it 'twan't far from Little canyon, Miss Beth."

"It was right there. He was riding with a girl, a very pretty girl," said Beth bravely.

There was nothing more said concerning Miles Hill, and after supper Beth went to her room and rested her weary head on the sill, letting the cool, sweet air caress her flushed cheeks and dry the tears on her lashes.

Link and Sammy rode away, and from the overcrowded bunk house came talk and laughter and song as the cowboys prepared themselves for [illegible] in the town [illegible] miles distant.

After they had [illegible] away and Sam Soy had ceased to rattle dishes in the kitchen silence fell on the ranch house and its inhabitants.

From the veranda below Beth caught the drift of voices now and then through the confusion of other sounds, but after it grew very still the voices came up sharply penetrating.

"I think your pa was too severe with Miles Hill," said Mrs. Colt. "He sure was plumb set after Beth, and it showed he was honorable to speak to Henry about it first."

"Miles isn't poorer than any other cowpuncher around here, and plenty of them marry and settle down," agreed Cora, who was fond of her little cousin.

"I heard him tell pa that if he'd name the sum he thought he ought to have before he asked Beth to marry him he said he would have it," put in Louise.

"How much did pa tell Miles he must raise?" asked Cora.

"Five hundred dollars," laughed Louise. "I heard poor Miles telling him it would take him a whole year to do that out of his pay and then his clothes would be so shabby Beth wouldn't look at him by that time!"

"What did pa say to that?"

"He just laughed, and then Miles got angry and said he'd show him a thousand dollars before he'd ask him, and he went off in a rage, and I haven't seen him since."

"Beth, poor child, said she saw him with another girl," worried kind Mrs. Colt.

"It's a shame!" cried Louise. "I'll just scold Pa Colt when I get hold of him! See if I don't."

Beth withdrew from the window and went to bed. There was a singing in her heart because Miles Hill had loved her, whatever his wandering heart was doing now. He had asked her uncle for her hand, and Uncle Henry had refused, but there was a measure of comfort in the thought that Miles had not been deliberately faithless. He had been turned away, and the blond girl had tempted him.

The girl fell asleep to dream of her lover and the pretty girl who had waited for him in Little canyon and who had received his kiss upon her lips with airy nonchalance.

It was perhaps a week after that Beth Cushman once more rode home by the long trail. This was not from desire. Stern necessity demanded the change of route because during a severe windstorm there had been several trees uprooted along the short trail and a landslide had completed its destruction.

So it happened that Beth rode slowly along the familiar way, her eyes fixed on the little space between Bonnie's brown ears.

She had passed Little canyon without a glance into its green depths and was climbing the hill when she suddenly came to the top, where a thrilling scene was taking place.

Riding straight toward her was a most villainous looking Mexican, and in the curve of his left arm he carried the slender form of the beautiful blond whom she had seen with Miles. Shouting down the distance came Miles, bending over his horse in vain pursuit of the Mexican.

While she paused there, startled at the scene, a shot rang out from the bushes bordering the trail, and Miles threw up his hands and fell to the ground. The horse cropped the grass undisturbed by the still form of his master lying so near.

All this happened in a breath. When Miles fell the Mexican was still coming toward Beth. A great rage filled her soul with a mad desire to kill, to avenge the life of her old sweetheart.

A word to Bonnie, and Beth dashed into the scene, her revolver thrust into the face of the frightened Mexican.

"Give her to me! Let go! I'll kill you if you don't!" she screamed in his ear.

He released his hold on the girl, and Beth clutched her in strong arms and swung her across her saddle; then she dashed past the Mexican and guided Bonnie to where the prostrate Miles lay on the ground.

"You're safe now," assured Beth as she helped the girl to the ground and then dismounted. To her surprise the girl stared at her rather impudently until a smile crinkled the corners of her rouged lips.

"Say, Miss Buttinsky, what do you mean by queering this picture?" she asked sharply. "Wait until old Fennell gets up here. I guess you've spoiled thirty feet of perfectly ripping film."

"Picture?" faltered Beth. "Film? I don't know what you mean."

The girl laughed gleefully and clapped her hands at a stout, red faced man who came panting toward them.

"Don't have a fit, Fennell," she said saucily. "It's only another tenderfoot taking a movie picture for the real thing."

But Mr. Fennell was grinning with enthusiasm.

"It was great—great—Flora!" he cried. "Young lady, I must have you in this. What say? Could you do that stunt again?"

Beth looked at him in a bewildered way, and her blushes deepened when she noticed that Miles Hill had risen quite unhurt and was regarding her with grave interest in his brown eyes.

"Perhaps you will explain it to me. I've never been called a tenderfoot before." Beth smiled at the girl called Flora, and the girl nodded back in a friendly way. The Mexican had approached and was nonchalantly rolling a cigarette, while from the underbrush there crawled another actor of the cowboy type. It was this worthy who had fired the blank cartridge from ambush at Miles Hill.

Mr. Fennell explained all about his company of moving picture actors and how this particular film was to be a star production if it turned out well. And he wanted [illegible] to help them out by repeating the rescue of Flora [illegible] the girl by the Mexican, who in real life was her husband.

So the camera man threaded up his machine again, and the scene was repeated to the great satisfaction of Mr. Fennell and all concerned.

At last the company separated, the actors going back to their headquarters at Red Ford and Miles Hill riding slowly home with Beth, who had so unexpectedly come into her own again.

"You thought I was dead, honey?" he asked after awhile.

She nodded. "And I saw you and Flora in the canyon the other day," she added.

"You mean where I kiss her and ride upstream?"

"Yes—I—er—believed it was true, Miles."

He laughed tenderly. "It couldn't be, dear, because there's only one girl in the world for me, and she's so fine that when she saw the girl she thought was mine being carried off by a no 'count greaser she just naturally would not stand for it, but rushed in and rescued the girl for me."

Beth blushed hotly, but her eyes were very happy.

"I heard about your asking uncle," she said. "Is that why you are acting in this moving picture company, so that you can raise a thousand dollars?"

"To marry you at once," he smiled down at her. "You see, I'll have the money saved up in three months. Fennell's going to get out four more of these wild and woolly western plays, and I'm going to be in every one of them. I guess you might as well begin on your wedding clothes, dearie."

"And I thought it was the blond all the time, Miles," she whispered tearfully.

"Don't pin your faith on blonds, honey," he cautioned. "They always do the contrary things. This time it was not the blond; it was all for you."

HUSBAND TIRED OF SEEING HER SUFFER

Procured Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which made His Wife a Well Woman.

Middletown, Pa.—"I had headache, backache and such awful bearing down pains that I could not be on my feet at times and I had organic inflammation so badly that I was not able to do my work. I could not get a good meal for my husband and one child. My neighbors said they thought my suffering was terrible.

"My husband got tired of seeing me suffer and one night went to the drug store and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me I must take it. I can't tell you all I suffered and I can't tell you all that your medicine has done for me. I was greatly benefited from the first and it has made me a well woman. I can do all my housework and even helped some of my friends as well. I think it is a wonderful help to all suffering women. I have got several to take it after seeing what it has done for me."—MRS. EMMA ESPENSHADE, 219 East Main St., Middletown, Pa.

The Pinkham record is a proud and honorable one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Where Clocks Are Curiosities.

Clocks are regarded as curiosities by many of the Hindus, and for this reason half-a-dozen or more timepieces are often found in the apartments of the wealthy Hindustanees. They are not used as time-pieces, but simply for ornament, since the old-fashioned way of telling the hour in India, by calculating the number of bamboo lengths the sun has traveled above the horizon, is entirely satisfactory to the natives.

It is said that in the country police stations in India, where the European division of the hours is observed, time is measured by placing in a tub of water a copper pot in which a small hole has been bored. It is supposed that it will take one hour for the water to leak into the pot so as to fill it and sink it. When the policeman sees that the pot has disappeared he strikes the hour on a bell-like gong. If he is smoking or dozing the copper pot may have disappeared several minutes before he discovers the fact, but the hour is when he strikes the gong.

Eugenie Not Ill.

The decision of the Empress Eugenie not to travel this summer led many people in London to jump to the conclusion that this remarkable lady was in failing health. As a matter of fact, her majesty, who is now in her eighty-eighth year, is enjoying exceptionally good health, but preferred the quietness of her home at Farnborough Hill to the sea trip in the Mediterranean, which she has indulged in regularly for the past few years. The empress, by the way, has [illegible] affection [illegible] English people, if [illegible] other [illegible] than that she [illegible] son, the gallant [illegible] England.

Convict's Pet Mouse.

On the completion of a three years' sentence, a convict has left Peterhead Penitentiary, Aberdeenshire, accompanied by the companion of his imprisonment, a brown mouse. He caught it while working in the quarries shortly after his arrival at Peterhead. The mouse shared its captor's meals, and in twelve months had learned a variety of tricks, such as eating out of the convict's hand and sitting up at the word of command.

Novel Auto Cab In London.

When the automobile taxicab appeared and gradually swept the old hansom from the streets of London, many were the lamentations of old clubmen at the disappearance of their beloved "London gondola," which had served them so well ever since they could remember. The bodies of the old Londoners, who mourned the passing of the hansom, would turn in their graves if they could see the "novel autocab" which is now appearing on the streets of London. It is a weird-looking thing, like an old-fashioned Sedan chair, hitched on to the side of a bicycle, and is the latest invention. It runs on three wheels and is driven from the saddle of the attached cycle. Hooded like a taxicab, it can seat three persons, two on the back seat, and one on a pivot seat. As it consumes little petrol, the fare will be only half that of the taxicab.

Preaching In Kilts.

Rev. L. Branford, of Islay, Scotland, is a cleric who habitually wears the kilt. In doing so he merely revives a custom which was once universal among the Highland clergy.

Up to about a hundred years ago the Highland priests not only wore the kilt on all occasions, but they had their own tartan, the main color of which was dark blue. Further, the Highland cleric of the old days usually went about armed to the teeth. Even on the Sabbath he would be preceded on his way to church by his servant bearing his broadsword and pistols. When the minister ascended the pulpit he took his weapons with him, placing them in a conspicuous position on the pulpit ledge.

WEDDINGS AT SEA.

Captain of Warship or Merchantman May Perform Ceremony.

Very few people are aware of the power vested in the commanding officer of a British man-of-war, or in the captain of a British merchantman, when on the high seas or in a foreign port, where there is no British representative, as regards marriage, providing one or both of the contracting parties be a British subject. The scope afforded either of the officers is such as might be turned to very good account by enterprising novelists.

The captains of His Majesty's vessels are authorized by the Foreign Marriages Act of 1892 to act as marriage registrars just the same as an ambassador, consul, or British resident abroad, and the ceremony may take place on the high seas or on board a British man-of-war on a foreign station, subject to certain "prescribed modifications." These indicate that the legality of the marriage depends on the commanding officer fulfilling the conditions of the Foreign Marriages Act, which, with very slight differences, conform to the conditions as to age, consent of parents, false oaths, residence, and so on, applying to marriages in the United Kingdom.

Though no one can question a captain's authority to marry at sea or on board a vessel on a foreign station, if any of the provisions laid down are not fulfilled, a secretary of state has the power by means of a warrant to vary or annul the marriage performed under the Act.

Before this Act commanding officers of men-of-war and merchantmen celebrated marriages on board under an old Act, and the marriage had to be confirmed on arrival at the nearest port by the British representative there. Where there was none, the captain himself had to act as consul and confirm his own deed.

In the merchant service the skipper has even greater power. He is not obliged to give a certificate, the only compulsion on him being the necessity to "log" the marriage in his official log-book, where it may be seen entered between reports dealing with the vessel's victualling, her course, the weather encountered, the ships spoken to, and the many humdrum details of "writing up the log."—Weekly Telegraph.

Sir Oliver Lodge.

Sir Oliver Lodge, who delivered the address to the British Association at Birmingham a short time ago, in which he declared his belief in the continuity of life after physical death, is a serious scientific man who takes his pleasures gladly. He is a firm believer in recreation, and his theory is that games should be played in moderation by all, and not merely by those who can do them well.

Personally, Sir Oliver is very fond of golf, which he holds to be the best of all recreations for the man who has to work hard with his head. When Prof. Tait taught him golf at St. Andrew's thirty-six years ago, he said, "You don't play golf with your muscles; you play it with your morals." To which young Lodge replied, "I hope my morals are not as bad as my golf." He has improved since then.

Sir Oliver, besides being a distinguished physicist of highly original and independent mind, is the exceedingly popular principal of Birmingham University. Lord Rayleigh introduced him as the new president in the place of Sir Edward Schafer, who is in San Francisco, and a rather piquant contrast was thus avoided, for while Sir Edward is one of the avowed leaders of the ultra-materialistic school, Sir Oliver is the chief hope in England of the scientific school which looks beyond physics and chemistry to an ultimate cause and a larger hope.

Women as Directors.

Lady Boot, whose share in the building up of her husband's business, that of chemist, in London, is to be recognized by her election to a seat on the board of directors, will not be quite the first woman to occupy such a position. The Hon Elaine Jenkins, daughter of Lord Glantawe, is one of the directors of the Swansea and Mumbles Railway, and regularly attends all the meetings.

This railway has the dual distinction of being one of the oldest in the kingdom and the only one with a woman director. The steam-engine was so much in its infancy that the founders of the line sought and obtained Parliamentary powers to run their carriages by horse, wind, or steam power; one idea being to rig the train with masts and sails and run them over the rails by the force of the wind.

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic In The World.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

ONE HUNDRED APPLICATIONS BEFORE THE CURLING CLUB

Judging from the preparations the curlers are making they evidently think that the weather is going to turn colder in a decidedly short time.

At a meeting of the Committee of Management a few days ago, it was decided to limit the membership to one hundred and twelve of last years members and twenty-eight new members, making a total of one hundred and forty members in the club. Already there has been about one hundred applications for membership and it looks as if this popular winter sport is going to have a firmer hold on the followers of the broom this year than ever. The Committee of Management will meet shortly to consider the applications.

Mr. Angus McIntosh, the veteran ice-maker, will again be on the job.

SPORTING GOSSIP

The Trenton Hockey Club has received permission to play their games at the Belleville rink. The Trenton rink was destroyed by fire.

Mr. Glover's move to have the O. H. A. recognize district winners by the presentation of medals is a good one. There are plenty of clubs who deserve such recognition.

The officers of the Peterborough Hockey Club hope to receive a hearty patronage at the concert to-night.

The rink management will demand 60 per cent. of the gate receipts this winter. The division has been 50 and 50.

Old familiar faces are to be seen in a display at the north window of the H. LeBrun store.

The Alert hockey team is endeavoring to arrange a game with a team in Lindsay for New Year's.

GOOD SEASON FOR KETCHECUM CLUB

"Good time! well, we should say so," was the answer received by a Review reporter from members of the Ketchecum Hunt Club, who have returned from their lodge at Ketchecum Lake.

The party brought back some eleven deer which, considering the last few days of weather, was fairly good hunting.

Those who composed the party were Messrs. H. Winch, R. Gibbs, J. D. Collins, M. Comstock, Dr. McPherson, W. C. Ackerman, Fred Roy, R. J. Munro, Robert Stewart, Dr. Gentile, George Douglas, J. W. Bennet, E. F. Mason, Archie Jackson.

The gentlemen report the best of weather, except for a few days, when things were rather on the blink with the rain and snow.

A New Line.

"No; I don't. Most of the people who are wicked never expect to see their names in the headlines."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SLAYER OF ELEPHANTS

JAMES SUTHERLAND HAS SPENT 17 YEARS IN THE JUNGLE.

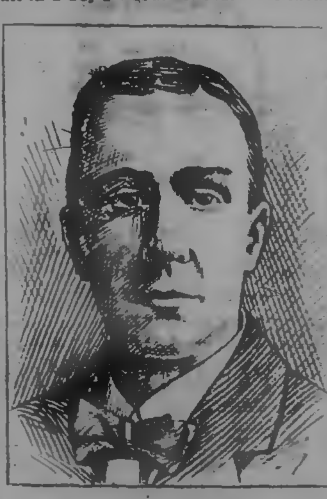
Scotsman, Who Has Shot Six Hundred Elephants and Sold Tons of Ivory May Visit Canada in the Near Future—He Is Tired of City Life and Will Go Back To His Job In Africa.

Taking a few days off, before returning to Africa to resume the slaughter of elephants for their ivory James Sutherland, Scotsman and champion elephant slayer of the world, may pay Canada a flying visit in the near future.

The spoor of the giant pachyderm is more familiar to Sutherland than the ways of civilized man and he confesses that he feels a restraint in the stuffiness and restricted area of a city and will return to his job, which is shooting elephants.

For the past seventeen years Sutherland has all but lived entirely in the wilderness of Africa, surrounded only by natives. He has shot some 600 elephants and sold tons of ivory. An average expedition requires six to nine months and yields about two tons of ivory. Ivory in bulk is worth about $7,500 a ton, so that there is a fairly good compensation for the risk and isolation.

As for the isolation Sutherland has come to like it. He has little use for the artificialities of civilization, finding life in the "forl," as the denizens call the dense African forest, more sincere and straight-from-the-shoulder than life in the cities. As for the risk—they are many, but they are a part of the business the same as risk accompanies steeple-climbing and railroading and electrical work. It's all in a day's work. A man who lacks the nerve has no business elephant hunting, says Sutherland.



JAMES SUTHERLAND.

"There is no calling, except prize fighting," says the veteran huntsman, "that requires a man to be so physically fit as does elephant hunting. Absolute control of one's nerves is necessary. The elephant has the advantage over the hunter. He is higher up, he can see over the tall grass and locate the hunter. The great beasts charge through the forests directly at the hunter and especially if wounded are extremely dangerous."

Sutherland's closest shave, as he declares, occurred in 1908, when he had trailed a herd of five bull elephants all day. He secured four of the beasts with little trouble. The fifth was wounded near the heart when it charged the hunter. Now in elephant hunting there are only four vulnerable spots and they are small [illegible] shots count. There is the brain shot, between the eyes, [illegible] through the small opening in the ear, a bullet in the vertebrae of the neck or one in the heart. At any other spot on the great carcass a bullet is likely to fly off at a tangent, or make flesh wound which infuriates the elephant.

This particular big bull, irritated by a flesh wound, was charging the hunter. One does not shoot elephants for a lifetime without learning to hold one's nerves in control and wait until the quarry is near enough to insure a shot in the vital spot. There is not much use in missing the vital spot, because if you don't get the elephant with a single shot the chances are very good that the elephant will get you.

Sutherland's second shot at this pachyderm took effect in the eye, gouging out the optic, but not halting the beast. In an instant the elephant was crashing through the bush and had tossed him with a blow from one of its tusks. Before he had time to scramble to his feet Sutherland was seized about the waist by the elephant's trunk and flung aloft. He landed on the beast's back and slid off. The third attack of the bull lodged the hunter high in the branches of a tree, unconscious. One of his native servants fetched him his gun and assisted him to recover consciousness.

Pulling himself together, his gun supported by the native, Sutherland fired his third shot, when the elephant advanced to within a dozen or 15 yards. Although it brought the bull to its knees, it did not stop it. Nerving himself with all the reserve energy he had, groggy though he was, the hunter managed to put a fourth bullet in the elephant's brain.

The hunter has visited the wilderness camps of Henry M. Stanley and Emin Pasha, paddled up the Semliki river, teeming with crocodiles, spent days in the forest of the pigmies who shot at him with poisoned arrows and come through alive. Not only that, but he prefers to take the chances of the African forests to the maze of the streets of civilization. Sutherland is 40 years old.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR FOR GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB

The ninth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club, was held Saturday evening at the Bank of Montreal chambers.

There was a fair attendance of shareholders present. The following were elected as directors for the coming year. Mr. P. Campbell, H. Ritchie, T. D. Mulholland, T. F. Matthews, A. H. Stratton.

The reports of the various committees were possibly the best that have been made in the history of the Club.

It is expected that next year will see a considerable change in the club-house to meet the demand for increase of accommodation and comfort.

The year has been a most successful one in every branch of the Club's interest, and the prospects for the coming season are even better.

WHEREIN HE QUALIFIED.

Candidate Lacked Many Virtues, but One He Had Counted.

"Is your candidate for this high office a man whose statesmanship has been proved by years of experience in positions of trust and responsibility?"

"I dunno."

"Possibly a reformer, some grand old Christian whose life has been tested in the crucible of affliction—his whole being on fire with the grandeur of moral ideas?"

"Mebbe, mebbe."

"A man of charming personality?"

"Not exactly."

"Graceful wit?"

"No."

"A lion in debate?"

"No, no!"

"Then to what influence"—

"That's it, pard; you've struck it at last—he's got influence!"—Puck.

Answered.

Upon the occasion of his first visit to a parishioner a certain Boston divine tried hard to make friends with his host's eight-year-old.

"How old are you, my son?" asked the clergyman benignantly.

"Eight," was the laconic response.

"Ah, quite a little man," came patronizingly from the minister. "And what are you going to be?" he added, after a slight pause.

"I am going to be nine," said the child, with conviction.—New York Globe.

Good Man-ners.

She was gowned in a severely plain tailored costume and assumed other mannish freaks in her dress.

An old lady who was very near-sighted entered the street car. The mannish girl waited a moment, but as no man signified his willingness to give up his seat she rose and gave hers to the older woman.

"Thank you, sir," said the other in grateful acknowledgment. "You are the only gentleman in the car."—Detroit Free Press.

Said With a Bright Smile.

"Your work bears the closest kind of inspection," remarked the girl with the dimple. "What infinite pains you must take with it."

"Perhaps," replied the artist; "but, do you know, I enjoy the pains."

"Then," she rejoined, with a bright smile, "you, too, pursue art for art's ache."—Chicago Tribune.

Logical.

"Well, didn't I tell you that we had here a marvelous treatment? You are not the same man any more."

"Then be kind enough to send your bill to the other."—Paris Le Rire.

Measured.

"It is hard to take the measure of great financiers."

"Oh, I don't know! With some of them it is done by the Bertillon system."—Baltimore American.

Mr. Churchill's Ride to Balmoral.

When Mr. Churchill arrived at Perth recently on his way to Balmoral he leapt upon the platform and called for the motor-car which had been ordered to take him to his destination. That the car could not be found.

There was much commotion and running about by hurried porters, but Mr. Churchill, afraid he would be late, for his important duties, could not await the result of the search.

"I must be off!" he exclaimed; "I have to be in attendance on the King at 7.30 to-night," and ordering his valet to throw his luggage into a taxi-cab near at hand he jumped in.

"Where to, sir?" asked the driver.

"Balmoral," replied Mr. Churchill.

Fast traveling just enabled Mr. Churchill to cover the sixty miles and keep his appointment.

The car originally ordered for Mr. Churchill was waiting on the other side of the station, and an amusing feature of the incident was that a cinematograph operator was standing by ready to record that part of the First Lord's journey to Balmoral.

The best many a girl gets out of it who marries for a home is a chance to cook for boarders.

-FACT HUNGER-

As children, our first demand is for nourishment; our second for facts.

All through life we go about searching for information.

We make a new acquaintance, but before we will accept him as a friend or invite him to our home we ask for facts about him.

We visit a foreign land; and from the moment we step across its border we are asking questions—searching for facts.

We are asked to try a new food product; isn't it instinctive with us to ask at once:

"Who makes this new article?"

"How is it made? what goes into it?"

"Is it worth the price charged for it?"

Facts—we are simply hungry for them.

Strange, isn't it, that we should so often have to search for them? Odd, that some manufacturers still withhold the facts about their product. Not always because they are facts to be ashamed of—for there are many worthy articles yet unadvertised.

But it will not be so much longer. The fact-hunger of the human race is becoming keener and keener. The more facts we get, the keener our relish for more of them.

Soon it will be impossible to sell a man or a woman anything until everything has been told about the goods that can be told through Advertising.

The public has discovered that Advertising tells much-needed facts—that, in fact, Advertising satisfies fact-hunger.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

EVANGELIST AT KNOX CHURCH

Rev. G. A. Woodside Continues His Mission Services

Rev. G. A. Woodside, of Brantford, is at present in Peterborough and is holding a series of evangelistic services at Knox church. Last evening a good congregation of people came out to hear him and were not turned empty away.

The evangelist is being assisted by Miss McNabb, of Toronto, who sang very sweetly. She has an appealing and a soothing voice, and gives expression to both the words and the music of her sacred songs.

STRONG EVANGELIST.

Mr Woodside is a tall, athletic looking man, who knows how to handle an audience. He began his discourse last night by describing an Old Testament scene. He drew graphic pictures of the first Passover in Egypt, and described the effects of the plague of the slaying of the first-born.

All this was done with an eye to cumulative effect, and as the preacher advanced in his theme he advanced in power of convicting oratory. Many stories were told of men lifted from the depths of ruin and despair, and made hopeful and useful members of society.

SHELTER FROM STORM.

The text of the sermon was a very appropriate one: "Come, my people, enter into thy chambers and shut the door till the storm of my indignation be passed." Never before, said the preacher, were men shielding life as to-day. There were shelters for children, for the sick, for the insane and for the poor. But the world could offer no shelter for the sinner. Christ was the only refuge for the human soul, and the invitation of the text was for all who were seeking peace and protection from the storm of life.

The people of Knox church intend making the most of this opportunity of enlivening the spiritual life of their own members. They are also anxious that Mr. Woodside's services of powerful evangelism will be well attended by all classes. No better evening could be spent than listening to this preacher's divine message.

They were attended by Maurice and Mary McEntee, brother and sister of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Shire will reside in Toronto.

Music and Drama

The Picton Times says:—The Royal Concert Company of Toronto, entertained a very appreciative audience on Tuesday evening. The talent comprised Miss Mabel Farrance, entertainer; J. Alfred Hubbard, tenor; Eddie Piggott, comic singer and impersonator; Miss Henrietta Walmsley, contralto and Miss Margaret Campbell, pianist.

The singing of Mr. Hubbard and Miss Walmsley, either in solos or duets, was much appreciated by the audience, being repeatedly encored. They sang a number of old favorites, as well as many of the newer songs. Where all were so good it is difficult to select one, but perhaps the best of all was "Down the Vale" in which both voices blended in harmony.

The accompanist is to be congratulated on her success as her music was well adapted to the volume of the voices.

The entertainer, Miss Farrance, possesses considerable dramatic ability. Her manner was most pleasing and while her selections were mostly in lighter vein, her rendering of "Play in Your Own Back Yard" with musical accompaniment, showed that the young lady was not at fault when giving a pathetic number.

Eddie Piggott's selections were all delightfully comic. His make-up for every part was to the life and his Scotch and Irish dialect very good indeed He impersonated with equal success a policeman, a postman, a "Rube," an Irishman or a Highlander, and kept his audience in paroxysms of laughter. His most taking selection perhaps because it dealt with very popular topics was "Breaking Up the Home" in which he impersonated a fashionably dressed woman who carried a nearly real poodle under her arm. After recounting her husband's unkind criticism of her devotion to "dear Fido" she proceeded to advise the ladies present on a variety of subjects from the care of dogs to the question of votes for women.

The costumes of the performers were new and handsome—no small factor in the success of the evening.

"BILLY THE KID"

At the head of what is reported to be one of the strongest companies that has been got together in the support of a melodramatic star, the popular young [illegible] Erwin, is to present the ever popular play, Billy the Kid, at the [illegible] on Saturday next, Nov. [illegible], for two performances. All of the scenes of the play, which is a good strong, well written melodrama, are laid in New Mexico, and the settings which are shown in the four acts are reported to be exceedingly handsome as well as typical of the localities they represent. The part of the hero, Billy, is said to fit Mr. Erwin most admirably, and the story told is a very interesting one. 33

St. George's Choral Society will meet for practice in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute tonight at 8 p.m. prompt. Members are asked the bring copies of the "Messiah" "Judas Maccabaeus" and Part Songs. As Tuesday, Nov. 25th, next is the date of the Annual Autumn concert, every member is requested to attend, as the practice will be final for that event.

The following artists will take part in the concert at St. Paul's next Monday evening:

Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Miss Ada C. Richardson, soloist of Charlotte street Methodist church.

Mr. Maurice Park, tenor soloist.

Mr Asa Huycke, soloist Murray street Baptist church.

Miss Edwina Palmer, violin soloist.

Mr John Allan, solo organist and accompanist.

Mayor Bradburn will take the chair. A crowded house is looked for as the entire proceeds without any deduction will be handed over to Mayor Bradburn to be included in the Peterboro fund in aid of the widows and orphans of those who lost their lives in the recent storms on our Great Lakes.

In response to the appeal for funds on behalf of the sufferers from the recent disasters on the Great Lakes the Committee of the St. George's Society, with their usual generosity, have arranged to give to the Fund the whole of the proceeds from the coming social, which will be held in the W.O.W. Hall on Friday evening, November 21st.

As this is for such a laudable purpose it is hoped there will be a bumper crowd, and the collection will be worthy of the efforts of those who are giving their time and talent to help those in need.

PALESTINE TRIP PLEASED MANY

Lecture and Musical Program Was Greatly Enjoyed

A rare treat was afforded the large audience at the lecture hall of Charlotte street Methodist church last night, when Rev. T. J. Mansell gave a lecture on "A Trip Through Palestine." Much interest was evinced by the gathering in the views and remarks of Mr. Mansell, who has travelled over the country in question. Members of the Salvation Army Temple Band contributed to the musical program. An instrumental quartet was given by Deputy Bandmaster Ford, Bandsmen Patton, Richardson and Robinson. Bandsman Robinson also gave a euphonium solo and Bandsman Sandford a trombone solo.

PRES. WILSON IS PATIENT

Has Settled Down to Wait For Huerta to Act.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Absence of any evidence that fresh instructions had gone forward from Washington to John Lind or Charge O'Shaughnessy was understood in official circles here yesterday to mark the advent of another period of patient waiting for some decisive development in Mexico.

In spite of all the rumors of blockades and intervention coming from Havana and Vera Cruz there has been no sign of such activity at the Navy or War Departments, as might be expected to precede adoption of any such radical steps by the administration. Moreover, it has been intimated in official quarters that only by direction of Congress would such a step be taken.

Officials still decline to furnish information as to what has been accomplished by Wm. Bayard Hayle in his conference at Nogales with Gen. Carranza and his constitutionalist Cabinet.

State Department advices made public yesterday indicated that the insurrectionary movement is spreading rapidly not only in the north of Mexico, but to the south and east. This last development is regarded here as very important, because the success of the constitutionalists in obtaining possession of the rich oil fields in the east and some deep water port on the gulf coast would enormously strengthen them from a military point of view, the former insuring them a full treasury, and the latter an easy means of supplying themselves with munitions of war from Europeans in the West Indies.

To Use Official Residence.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 19.—The announcement that a diplomatic reception would be given by Senora Emilia Aguila De Huerta, the wife of the Provisional President, at Chapultepec Castle to-day, gave rise to a story that Gen. Huerta yesterday had taken up his residence there. It was explained that Senora Huerta had decided to hold the reception at the castle because of the inadequate accommodations of the private home of the Huertas.

Chapultepec Castle is the official residence of the Mexican President. Since the late President Madero vacated the historic palace it has been undergoing renovation at the hands of painters and decorators.

German Sentiment Veering.

BERLIN, Nov. 19—The retirement of Gen. Huerta from the Provisional Presidency of Mexico is now the surest way to restore order in that country where German interests are so great, according to an editorial article in The Tageblatt, which heretofore had steadily attacked the policy of the United States in Mexico.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 19.—Four rural mail delivery routes are now being operated out of St. Catharines, the fourth being yesterday.

TO PLACATE INDIANS.

Gen. Scott Sent By U. S. Government To Treat With Navajos.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—In the hope that the excited Navajo Indians who are now defying the Government authorities at Beautiful Mountain, New Mexico, may be induced to yield peaceably and surrender the eight renegades whose arrest is sought, the War Department yesterday ordered Gen. Hugh L. Scott, commanding the second cavalry brigade, at Fort Bliss, Texas, to proceed in haste to the Navajo agency to confer with the Indian chiefs.

Gen. Scott is singularly influential with the Navajos, whose language he speaks. He has always been regarded by them as their best friend and it is believed that he will be able to placate them.

The general's instructions are to confer with Major McLaughlin, the Indian agent, before beginning his conference. In order to make a show of force orders were despatched to Fort Robinson, Neb., to entrain and despatch to the Navajo agency a full squadron of the 12th Cavalry to serve as Gen. Scott's escort.

WILL FIGHT THE PROTEST.

Chateauguay Conservatives Also Intend to File Counter Charges.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—Counter charges of corruption against Liberal workers are expected to form the answer Conservatives will make to the petition filed Monday by five supporters of Hon. Sydney Fisher, defeated by James Morris in the recent Chateauguay bye-election, who are contesting its result.

It is announced authoritatively that the contestation will be fought out to the bitter end, Mr. Morris and his friends being confident that they will be able to disprove what they term the "trumped up" accusations made by those backing the contestation.

BALLINGTON AND BRAMWELL BOTH TO SHAKE HANDS

Leaders Will Meet But the Two Forces Will Not Unite

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Gen. Bramwell Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, and Gen. Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, will meet in New York, it was announced here yesterday by Bramwell Booth. The two have not met since Ballington Booth separated seventeen years ago from his father, Gen. Wm. Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, and organized the Volunteers of America.

"I will see my brother in New York and take his hand," said Gen. Bramwell Booth. "But this does not mean there will be any move toward consolidation of our forces. This visit will be a family affair."

Gen. Booth left Chicago yesterday. After meeting Ballington Booth in New York he will return to England.

Britain Has Aeroplane Gun.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A cable from London to The Herald says:—

Great Britain has acquired what the War Office considers the ideal aeroplane gun. It is the latest model of the air, the cooled, gas-operated Lewis rifle, already experimented with by the United States army.

Firing upward of one thousand shots a minute, it is to be made a weapon of offence for aeroplanes in the British service. An unofficial test of the new gun is to be made at Bisley range on Nov. 27.

Settlement Reached.

HALIFAX, Nov. 19.—An agreement involving 10,000 men employed by the Dominion Coal Co., and represented by the Provincial Workmen's Association, was reached here yesterday.

The agreement renews the present understanding for three years, or until Dec. 31, 1916. The company has granted an increase of six per cent. to all workmen in and about the mines working under $2 per day, making a minimum rate for mine laborers of $1.70, instead of $1.60 per day, and an increase in the minimum rate of the shift men from $1.75 per day to $1.85 per day.

Technical Re-arrest of Thaw.

CONCORD, N.H., Nov. 19.—Judge Aldrich in the Federal Court yesterday ordered the re-arrest of Harry K. Thaw on the strength of the extradition warrant issued recently by Governor Felker. This was done to clear the record, but counsel immediately engaged in an argument over the custody of the prisoner, and the new arrest was delayed pending the decision of the court on certain technicalities.

Adding School Accommodation.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 19.—Three years ago a new eight-room school was erected in St. Patrick's Ward to replace a three-room structure. The City Council has been directed to issue $25,000 debentures to add four rooms at once. The accommodation is 335, and the registered attendance already 456.

SCHMIDT ON TRIAL TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Hans Schmidt, the priest who confessed to killing Anna Aumuller, a young German girl he had married by a self-performed ceremony, and afterwards dismembering her body and throwing it into the Hudson river, was placed on trial to-day before Judge Foster in the General Sessions Court. Insanity will be Schmidt's defence.

Turns Flips With a Passenger.

BUC, France, Nov. 19.—Maurice Chevillard, a French aviator, established a new record yesterday for turning somersaults in the air by carrying a passenger in his machine. He accomplished an aerial loop twice in brilliant fashion, going through the performance apparently with as much ease as if he were alone.

NEW FAIR LAUNCHED.

Toronto's Live Stock Show Is Already International.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—This city's new winter fair was opened yesterday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds, when Mayor Hocken pressed the button that officially opened the first National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show of Canada. Present indications are that the fair will, in a few years, compete with and outrival the great Live Stock and Dairy Show held annually at Chicago.

Even at the commencement the show has outgrown its name and is now an international show, because there are entries in the horse and cattle shows from places in the United States as far west as Michigan and Wisconsin, and also from the western provinces of Canada, as well as from the many fine breeding farms in the Province of Ontario.

Yesterday was Children's Day, but owing to the threatening weather and to the fact that the school trustees would not allow the children a half holiday to take in the exhibition, only a small crowd was present in the afternoon, and at night the attendance dropped off even more, because of the rain.

TO KEEP DINOSAURS.

Hon. Mr. Coderre Will Check Exportation of Giant Fossils.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—Hon. Louis Coderre, Secretary of State, has lost no time in taking action to prevent a recurrence of such an incident as the recent acquisition by the American Museum of Natural History of New York, of a complete skeleton of the pre-historic creature, the horned Dinosaur, which was unearthed in Red River district of Alberta. This skeleton of the Monoclonius, as it is scientifically termed, is the first complete specimen of this mammoth which has ever been secured. The creature stood about five feet high and was fifteen feet long. It flourished in the Red River region some three million years ago.

Mr. Coderre takes the view that there should have been legislation here to prevent this valuable specimen going outside of Canada.

The Legislature of Alberta takes the same view and Hon. J. R. Bole, Provincial Minister of Education, has asked the Secretary of State to take steps to conserve to Canada further finds of a similar character. Mr. R. E. Bennett, M.P., of Calgary, has also exerted his influence to put a stop to what many regard as depredations by the American Museum.

Mr. Coderre has referred the matter to Mr. Brock, chief of the Geological Survey of Canada, for an opinion, and acting under the latter's advice, legislation will be enacted at the next session of Parliament to render it impossible to take such finds out of the country without official sanction.

STEAMER ON FIRE

Passengers and Crew Were Rescued by Battleship

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Steamer Scots Dyke, from the Mediterranean for Sunderland, caught fire and burned to the water's edge off the Isle of Wight last night.

A heavy sea made it impossible to launch the few lifeboats which were not destroyed in the early stage of the fire and passengers and crew were crowded on to the stern when the battleship Ironduke, which was carrying out trials in the channel came up and played searchlights on the doomed ship, while her boats rescued all hands.

GANGSTERS OPEN FIRE ON CLUB HOUSE

One Man Will Die And Others Were Wounded

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 19.—A spectacular battle was fought last night around a club house on the lower East Side. Gangsters crouching behind trees and ash barrels and other cover, opened fire on the club house which was promptly returned from those inside, who were evidently prepared. Fifty shots were exchanged and when the weapons had been emptied re-inforced police jumped in. One man lost an eye; another will lose a leg, and a third man was fatally shot in the back, and many others were slightly wounded. Seven were arrested.

Six revolvers were found in the club house and six more lying outside.

FARM HAND IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Mangled Body Found When Engineer Stopped Train

Canadian Press Despatch.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 19.—A Grand Trunk freight train last night ran over and killed, about a mile from Cainsville, Edwards Roberts, a farm hand who was walking on the track, carrying a lantern, a flash and a jug.

The accident was discovered when the engineer stopped his train at Cainsville to fix a valve which would not work, and found the body crushed up into the gears.

SIXTEEN BODIES FOUND IN MINE

Six Men Rescued, but Twenty Others Are Still in the Mine

Canadian Press Despatch.

ACTON, ALABAMA, Nov. 19.—Sixteen bodies and six live men have been taken from mine No. 2, where an explosion occurred yesterday. Perhaps twenty men remain in the mine.

ACTON, Ala., Nov. 19.—An explosion in No. 2 coal mine of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. here at 3.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon entombed between 25 and 40 miners, according to estimates of company officials.

Up to nine o'clock last night seven bodies had been removed from the mine. The list of the dead: L. L. Patterson, E. Bright, John Langston, Henry Childers, Boss Driver Burns Kitrell, two unidentified negroes.

Of the victims, some are white and some are negroes, as the mine employed miners of both races. The normal quota of employes is seventy men, but Monday was pay day at this mine, and some did not report for work yesterday. Twenty-three diggers entered the working yesterday morning and early last night it was not known how many others reported during the day.

The first rescue parties who entered the mine last evening searching for any who might be alive, reported that they had passed several dead bodies lying beside the tramway of the sloping entrance shaft.

Mine officials hurried here from Birmingham, 24 miles away. They brought State Mine Inspector C. H. Nesbitt and an automobile load of surgeons.

Acton Mine No. 2, which lies in Shelby County, on a branch of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, has been considered one of the best equipped in the district. It has a single track slope and uses an 18-foot fan with the split air system. So far as ascertained the mine workings were not much damaged by the explosion, the cause of which has not yet been determined, and it is expected that the work of removing the living, if any, and the dead, will be speedily accomplished.

Union Counties' Good Roads.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 19.—At the opening session of the Leeds and Grenville counties council yesterday afternoon the report of the commission entrusted with the construction of goods roads under the Government plan showed that 26 miles was built the past summer. The report was held over for adoption by the reeve of Gananoque until he has access to the accounts covering the expenditure on road improvements in his town. He criticized the report for being lacking in detail.

Song Names of the States.

The most beautiful place names in the world, according to Robert Louis Stevenson, are those of North America. "The names of the states and territories," he declares in "Across the Plains," "form themselves into a chorus of sweet and romantic vocables—Delaware, Ohio, Indiana, Florida, Dakota, Iowa, Wyoming, Minnesota and the Carolinas. There are few poems with a nobler music to the ear; a songful, tuneful land, and if a new Homer shall arise from the western continent his verse will be enriched, his pages sing spontaneously, with the names of states and cities that would strike the fancy in a business circular."

Soiled Papers.

Large papers or leaves of books that have become soiled from much handling can be put into perfect condition if the loose dirt is first rubbed off with a piece of bread. Then cover the spots with blotting paper made damp with oxalic acid in solution. Lastly pass a hot iron over the blotting paper until it dries.

To remove deep set creases in papers or the leaves of a book put between two pieces of white blotting paper—or any unsized paper—slightly dampened, and press with a warm iron until the page is perfectly smooth.—New York Tribune.

ANXIETY IS FELT OVER LONG SILENCE OF STEFANSSON

The Karluk Has Not Been Sighted Since August 14 and Up to Nov. 11 No Word Had Been Received of Arrival at Herschell Island—Vancouver Men Are Inclined to Discredit the Story.

NEW YORK, Nov. [illegible] New York Sun publishes [illegible] special from Seattle, Wash.:

Vilhjalmar Stefansson, Arctic explorer and discoverer of the white Eskimo, who was aboard the steamship Karluk when the vessel was last sighted off Flaxman Island on Aug. 14, possibly is lost, as is the vessel and all her people.

Nothing has been heard or seen of the Karluk since that date, despite the fact that extensive search has been made for her. Whalers say there is little hope of her ever being discovered, as she is known to have encountered the heavy weather which prevailed off the Alaskan coast early in October.

This is the opinion of members of the Canadian Arctic exploration party at Colinson Point, according to a despatch received from Fairbanks yesterday.

Stefansson left Victoria last summer with an expedition outfitted by the Canadian Government to make explorations and scientific research along the northern coast of the American continent.

The last word the Naval Department at Ottawa had of the whereabouts of the Karluk was in a telegram from R. M. Anderson, commander of the southern party, who reported that the Karluk did not reach Herschell Island and was last seen off Flaxman Island about Aug. 11. This telegram was dated Nov. 10 and 11 and was sent from Colinson Point, Alaska.

It was as follows:—

"Canadian Arctic Expedition.—Schooners Alaska and Mary Sashs wintering at Colinson Point, Alaska. Heaviest ice conditions in recent years prevent further advance eastward. Scientific staff: R. M. Anderson, commander; Chipman, Cox, Johanson, O'Neill. Balance of southern party on board Karluk. Karluk did not reach Herschell Island. Last seen off Flaxman Island about Aug. 14. No ships able to get east of demarcation point this year. Whaler Elvira crushed and sank off Humphrey's Point Sept. 23. Belvadore caught off icy reef, but apparently safe. A letter follows.

(Signed) "R. M. Anderson."

So far this letter has not reached the Department. The last word to be received from Stefansson was early in August. It was a telegram from Nome, Alaska, giving an account of his sailing from Port Clarence. On July 27 the Karluk got separated in a storm the companion ship Sashs at Keotzebue. The whereabouts [illegible] Sashs was unknown. Stefansson stated that the Karluk had behaved well in a heavy storm and rounded Point Hope on July 31. They met ice near Icy Cape. The Karluk worked satisfactorily. The whole day of Aug. 1 they set fast in the ice. Early on Aug. 2 they were six miles from land, thirty miles west of Barrow. They worked [illegible] Barrow, the northernmost point of Alaska.

Report Not Credited.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 19.—The reported loss of the Stefansson party is not credited here. There is no reason for believing that disaster occurred except the absence of news, which really means nothing. The party was well equipped in every way, and its commander and lieutenants were all experienced in Arctic exploration, while their craft was a staunch ship, well suited to any and all ice conditions that might be encountered.

Dog Team To Take Mail.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 19.—All the mail consigned to Vilhjalmar Stefansson and members of his party lies at the Edmonton postoffice. A dog team will receive the mail at Athabasca Landing and from there convey it to Herschell Island, the farthest point north, arriving about Feb. 24, 1914. There are several packages and they are addressed "The Vilhjalmar Stefansson Exploration Party, Herschell Island."

CONTRACTORS LOOKING OVER SITE FOR DAM

Operations Will Not Commence Till Next Spring

Messrs. W. A. McCaffery of Toronto, C. M. McGuigg of Nipigon and W. C. Chambers of Harriston, are in the city to-day in connection with the construction of the new $75,000 dam at Nassau. This trip is merely a preliminary one as the men are engaged in looking over the site and will hold a conference with Mr. Grant this afternoon in regard to the matter.

Seen by a Review reporter, Mr. McCaffery stated that it would be impossible to commence operations before spring owing to the lateness of the season, but that preparations for getting the material on the ground would probably start at once.

BROTHERS FOUND DEAD.

Archibald and Neil McFarlane Are Asphyxiated In Toronto House.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—Two more victims of gas poisoning were discovered yesterday morning, when Archibald and Neil McFarlane, brothers, 23 and 21 years of age, were found dead in the same bed in their room at the residence of Mrs. Eliza Evans, 165 Duchess street.

The discovery was made by Wm. Chandler, another roomer, who knocked at the door to arouse the men for work, and receiving no response, entered. He immediately threw open all the windows and summoned a physician, but both men were beyond aid, apparently having been dead some hours.

The theory of the police is that one of them turned out the gas and turned it on again, and although the occurrence is evidently purely accidental, investigations are being made and an inquest will be held.

East Indians Rioting.

LADYSMITH, Natal, Nov. 19.—About a thousand East Indians started rioting here yesterday afternoon and claiming as British subjects, equal rights with the white men. The mounted police finally dispersed the mob, but the East Indians appeared to be dangerously inflamed. The disaffection was regarded here as so grave that a force of armed townsmen was enrolled and the police provided with revolvers.

The Indians returned last night to Elandslaagte, one hour's distance from Ladysmith. Fears of a renewal of the outbreak were so far dissipated that the volunteer police disbanded.

The Lotus Eaters.

The race of people to whom the name "lotus eaters" was applied was a Lybian tribe, known to the Greeks as early as the time of Homer. Herodotus describes their country and says that a caravan route led from it to Egypt. The lotus still grows there in great abundance—a prickly shrub bearing a fruit of a sweet taste, compared by Herodotus to that of the date. It is still eaten by the natives, and a kind of wine is made from its juice.

Those Who Arrive.

A New York capitalist said at a dinner in Boston that neither the prudent man nor the daring man made a success of life.

"The prudent gets nowhere," he declared. "The daring go to smash. It is those who mingle the two qualities, it is the daringly prudent, who arrive.

"In other words," concluded the capitalist, "the men who succeed are those who run risks at a very slow walk."—Washington Star.

Dr. Ross of London W. Run Down by Auto Wit Fatal Results

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Rev. Dr. James Ross, a leading scholar and educator of Canada, was struck and fatally injured by an automobile in a city street late yesterday. He died from a fractured skull an hour later. He had stepped from behind a trolley car into the path of the automobile. Several women who witnessed the accident, tore their dresses into strips and bandaged Dr. Ross' head before the arrival of an ambulance.

The accident occurred at the rush hour and at a time when the traffic at Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue is particularly heavy. L. T. Stowe, an undertaker, was operating his auto north on Twenty-third street. He said that Dr. Ross stepped from the shadow of a southbound vehicle directly in the path of his machine, and that it was impossible to avoid hitting him. Dr. Ross was hurled several feet in the air and landed on his head on the asphalt, fracturing his skull. The police after hearing an account of the accident from witnesses declared that the undertaker was not to blame.

Several letters from Andrew Carnegie, found in Dr. Ross' possession, indicated that the clergyman came here to seek Mr. Carnegie's aid for the public library at London, Ont., Dr. Ross' home. Dr. Ross was pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montreal, and a professor in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. He was 60 years old.

According to A. O. Jeffery, of London, Ont., who identified the body, he and Dr. Ross came here Monday to buy books for the library in London. They were to have returned to Canada to-day.

LOOKING INTO RESOURCES.

Experts Will Valuate Canada's Petroleum and Gas.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—The recent statement of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, that oil would be the fuel of the future for the British navy, and that the supply would be to a large extent have to be obtained from the overseas dominions, has not been lost upon the Dominion Government, and a corps of experts have been set to work to conduct a thorough investigation of the petroleum and natural gas resources of the country.

This investigation will be the most complete and extensive ever attempted in Canada. Experts are of opinion that in the production of oil for the needs of modern civilization Canada will take a leading place, and the Government has decided that immediate steps towards a realization of the commercial value of the Dominion oil resources are in the interest, not only of Canada, but perhaps of the Empire.

It is further announced that the Department of Mines is about to send experts to investigate the great "tar sand" deposits of Northern Alberta.

A GOVERNMENT THAT CANNOT GOVERN

The Government's decision to release Larkin will not undo the results of the most gigantic political blunder of modern times. Everyone agrees that Larkin's sentence was a mistake. The Times says a greater blunder than his imprisonment could not be conceived.

The Westminster Gazette, which is in the closest touch with the Government, declared in contrasting the cases of Carson and Larkin: "The working class will not admit that there are high political reasons for leaving an eminent lawyer alone while a workingman goes to prison" Lloyd George has publicly admitted that Larkin was probably the most prominent cause of the bye-election defeats.

The Liberal Government in Great Britain has many good points, its intentions are of the best and it has honestly tried to carry out legislation with the object of bettering the conditions of the working classes. But in the administration of Home affairs it is one of the most futile, blundering, weak-kneed and vacilating governments that ever held office at Westminster. With such a strong majority one would imagine it would be a strong government. But, whatever has been the reason, this so-called government has not governed at all—it has allowed itself to be governed by every Tom Dick and Mary Anne who dared to defy it.

All this suffragette farce could [illegible] the length it has under [illegible] policy [illegible] tended to encourage these silly women, with the result that they can practically dictate their own terms and laugh in the face of the law. The same thing applies to the labor troubles which have torn the country from end to end. They arrested Larkin and sentenced him to prison and now they have let him go free again, not out of pity for him but out of fear and indecision.

There is an out-cry against Larkin's arrest, as we see from the above news extract, on the ground that if he is arrested Sir Edward Carson ought to be treated in the same way. This is reasonable enough in one sense, yet it is scarcely a parallel case, for while Sir Edward Carson has said some wild things and made a show of fight he has never as yet caused the least damage or any serious disturbance. Jim Larkin on the other hand has not only made inflamatory speeches, he has incited to malicious revolt, which has brought untold misery and suffering upon the people. If there had been any really strong men, or one strong statesman in the Liberal Cabinet all these feuds would not have been allowed to hang on in the manner they have done.

For the sake of the country and for the sake of humanity, this strife between labor and capital in Dublin ought to have been forced to a settlement by determined pressure being brought to bear on both sides long ago. Larkin, after all, is only one man, he is not so much a cause as an effect. It is for a government which claims any right to the name—to govern, and in this the Asquith Cabinet has failed. It is time it either took hold of things with a firm hand or got out and let some-one else try.

TWIN STARS

The Montreal Star comments upon its sister orb in Toronto as follows:

"But we must give the Toronto "Star" credit for being willing to make some changes in the Liberal policy. It says:—

"The present ground of attack upon the Liberal policy is that it is too large and expensive. Perhaps that criticism is not unfoundest. Could the parties agree upon some program that would be a fair beginning for a fleet suited to our own requirements and at the same time adding to general British strength upon the ocean. Suppose that something less than the two fleet units were accepted and placed under Canadian control, under the Canadian Naval Service Act."

"Quite so. We always suspected that the "Little Navy" section of the Liberal party felt that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had gone too far when trying to put up something which would make a fair showing beside the Borden policy. A close observer could detect signs of nervousness and alarm when their revered leader was talking of "two fleet units" and two Dreadnought cruisers. That is not their idea of a proper naval policy for a peaceful people. The "Niobe" suits them better—a boat that will not fight and cannot fight and never was intended to fight. An Old Home Week Navy is their notion."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Globe lost its temper yesterday because the Toronto News called it a hyporite for denouncing bribery and corruption in the Conservative party, after closing its eyes to the same thing when the Liberals were in office. The Globe's reply gives one the impression of a man in a rage, who can only reply, "you're another!"

Angus MacKinnon, nine-year-old, of Guelph is at present in an hospital suffering from a broken arm and internal injuries and badly bruised about the body. And we are the people who sent missionaries to India to save the natives from the juggernaut car!

[illegible] Gordon, a little eight-year-[illegible] down and killed in the act of crossing the road to a store to buy wool for her doll's cap. What is a doll's cap to an automobile ride, anyway!

The Montreal Herald insists every day, at the foot of every individual editorial, that its readers should keep their eye on Quebec. This must appear to most readers as a sinister warning. The Herald seems to delight in keeping its readers in suspense, this is bad for the nerves, Mr. Editor.

THE LOCAL MARKET

PETERBORO, Nov. 29 — There were four loads of hay on the market yesterday, and three of them sold at twenty dollars, the other bringing twenty-one. This is the highest sum paid for hay on the local market for some time, and one would be inclined to think that it would remain that mark for the remainder of the season, but a local grain and hay dealer thinks otherwise. He stated that he would not pay more than $17 for hay, and it would be down to that price inside of a month. When asked how he figured that out, he stated that up to the present time the farmers were kept busy trying to get the ploughing done, which meant that they could not find time to bring the hay to town. As soon as the ground freezes and the work around the farm ceases, the roads leading to the city will be dotted with hay and the result will be a decided drop in the price.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea."

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Somehow the speech was welcome to the girl, gave her a touch of courage sufficient for cowardly protestations. It was more like the abuse that was familiar to her. A gush of tears came.

"I'll never forgive myself, never!" she moaned.

"Oh, yes, you will," Mary said malevolently. "People forgive themselves pretty easily. Stop crying. Nobody is going to hurt you." She thrust the money again toward the girl and crowded it into the half reluctant, half greedy hand. "Take it, and get out." The contempt in her voice rang still sharper. "Go, before I change my mind!"

The girl needed no second bidding. With the money still clutched in her hand she went forth swiftly, stumbling a little in her haste, fearful lest at the last moment the woman she had so wronged should change in mood and take back the money.

Freed from the miasma of that presence, Mary remained motionless for a long minute, then sighed from her tortured heart.

"A girl I didn't know," she said bewilderedly, "perhaps had never spoken to—who smashed my life like that! Oh, if it wasn't so awful it would be—funny! It would be funny!"

CHAPTER IX.

A Bridegroom Spurned.

"YOU know—Aggie told you—that Cassidy was up here from headquarters. He didn't put a name to it, but I'm on."

It was Garson speaking. Mary regarded him inquiringly, and he continued, putting the fact with a certain brutal bluntness after the habit of his class. "I guess you'll have to quit seeing young Gilder. The bulls are wise. His father has made a holler."

"Don't let that worry you, Joe," she said tranquilly. She allowed a few seconds go by, then added as if quite indifferent, "I was married to Dick Gilder this morning." There came a squeal of amazement from Aggie, a start of incredulity from Garson.

"Yes," Mary repeated evenly, "I was [illegible] was my important engagement," she added with a smile toward Aggie.

Aggie [illegible] her baby face [illegible] with worldly wise.

"Oh, gee, what luck!" she exclaimed nobbily. "Why, he's a king fish, he is. Gee, but I'm glad you landed him!"

"Thank you," Mary said with a smile that was the result of her sense of humor rather than from any tenderness.

It was then that Garson spoke. He put a question of vital significance.

"Do you love him?"

The question caught Mary all unprepared, but she retained her self control sufficiently to make her answer in a voice that to the ordinary ear would have revealed no least tremor.

"No," she said. She offered no explanation, no excuse; merely stated the fact in all its finality.

"Then you won't leave us?" Garson asked. "We're going on as we were before?" The hint of dejection in his manner had vanished. "And you won't live with him?"

"Live with him?" Mary exclaimed emphatically. "Certainly not!"

Garson was still patient in his determination to apprehend just what had come to pass.

"Does he understand the arrangement?" was his question.

"No, not yet," Mary admitted, without sign of embarrassment.

Garson was intently considering another phase of the situation, one suggested perhaps out of his own deeper sentiments.

"He must think a lot of you," he said gravely. "Don't he?"

"I—I suppose so."

Garson spoke very softly, but with an intensity that left no doubt as to the honesty of his purpose.

"I'd say throw up the whole game and go to him, if you really care."

There fell a tense silence. It was broken by Mary.

"I married him to get even with his father," she said. "That's all there is to it. By the way, I expect Dick will be here in a minute or two. When he comes just remember not to enlighten him."

"Mr. Gilder," Fannie announced.

"Any one with him?"

"No, Miss Turner," the maid answered.

"Have him come in," Mary ordered.

Garson made hasty excuses and went out on the heels of the maid. Aggie, however, consulting only her own wishes in the matter, had no thought of flight, and, if the truth be told, Mary was glad of the sustaining presence of another woman. She got up slowly and stood silent, while Aggie regarded her curiously. A moment later the bridegroom entered. He was still clean cut and wholesome. Some sons of wealthy fathers are not after four years' experience of the white lights of town. And the lines of his face were firmer, better in every way. It seemed, indeed, that here was some one of a resolute character, not to be wasted on the trivial and gross things. He caught Mary in his arms with "Hello, dear!" smothered in the kiss he implanted on her lips.

Mary strove vainly to free herself.

"Don't, oh, don't!" she gasped.

Dick released his wife and smiled the beatific smile of the newly wed.

"Why not?" he demanded, with a smile.

"Agnes!" It was the sole pretext to which Mary could turn for a momentary relief.

The bridegroom faced about and perceived Agnes. He made a formal bow and spoke quietly.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Lynch but"—a smile of perfect happiness shone on his face—"you could hardly expect me to see any one but Mary under the circumstances. We were married this morning."

"Just one," Dick pleaded.

Aggie accepted the news with fitting excitement.

"Goodness gracious! How perfectly lovely!"

"You bet it's lovely!" Dick declared. He turned to Mary, his face glowing with satisfaction.

"Mary," he said, "I have the honeymoon trip all fixed. The Mauretania sails at 5 in the morning, so we will"—

"Where is your father?" the bride asked, without any trace of emotion.

"O Lord! I had forgotten all about dad. I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll send dad a wireless from the ship, then write him from Paris."

"What was your promise? I told you that I wouldn't go with you until you had brought your father to me and he had wished us happiness."

"Mary," Dick said reproachfully, "you are not going to hold me to that promise?"

"I am going to hold you to that promise, Dick."

"All right. You pack up what things you need, girlie—just a few, because they sell clothes in Paris. And meantime I'll run down to dad's office and have him back here in half an hour. You will be all ready, won't you?"

"Yes, yes, I'll be ready. Go and bring your father."

"You bet I will!" Dick cried heartily. He would have taken her in his arms again, but she evaded the caress.

"Just one!" Dick pleaded.

"No," the bride replied with determination.

There was silence in the drawing room until the two women heard the closing of the outer door of the apartment. Then, at last, Aggie relieved her pentup emotions in a sigh that was near a groan.

"Oh, gosh!" she gasped. "The poor simp!"

Garson, learning from the maid that Dick Gilder had left, returned just as Mary was glancing over the release with which General Hastings was to be compensated, along with the return of his letters, for his payment of $10,000 to Miss Agnes Lynch.

Mary spoke crisply to Agnes. "And now you must get ready. You are to be at Harris' office with this document at 4 o'clock, and remember that you are to let the lawyer manage everything."

"I don't see the use of all this monkey business," she protested. "All I want is the coin."

"Listen, Agnes. The last time you tried to make a man give up part of his money it resulted in your going to prison for two years."

"But that was so exciting."

"And this way is so safe," Mary rejoined sharply. "Besides, my dear, you would not get the money. My way will. Your way was blackmail. Mine is not. Understand?"

"Oh, sure!" Aggie replied grimly, on her way to the door.

"Mr. Griggs," Fannie announced. There was a smile on the face of the maid, which was explained a minute later, when the visitor was shown into the drawing room, for his presence was of an elegance so extraordinary as to attract attention anywhere—and mirth as well from ribald observers.

Meantime Garson had explained to Mary.

"It's English Eddie. You met him once. I wonder what he wants? Probably got a trick for me. We often used to work together."

"Nothing without my consent," Mary warned.

"Oh, no, no, sure not!" Garson agreed.

Further discussion was cut short by the appearance of English Eddie himself, a tall, handsome man in the early [illegible] paused just within the [illegible] answered to Mary's bow. That [illegible] of elegance. Mary made no effort to restrain the smile cause by the costume of Mr Griggs. Yet there was no violation of the canons of good taste, except in the aggregate. From spats to hat, from walking coat to gloves, everything was perfect of its kind. Only there was an overelaboration, so that the ensemble was flamboyant. And the man's manners precisely harmonized with his clothes, whereby the whole effect was emphasized and rendered bizarre. Garson took one amazed look and then rocked with laughter.

Griggs regarded his former associate reproachfully for a moment and then grinned in frank sympathy.

"From your costume," Mary suggested, "one might judge that this is purely a social call. Is it?"

"Well, not exactly," Griggs answered with a smile.

"So I fancied," his hostess replied. "So, sit down, please, and tell us all about it."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A centenary commission to confer with similar bodies in Great Britain, Canada or elsewhere, for the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the treaty of Ghent, was proposed yesterday in a resolution by Representative Smith of New York.

Reduce the high cost of living
Do you know that buying soap in cakes is wasting from 25¢ to 40¢ on every dollar? N.P. SOAP, the best soap you ever used, costs 15¢ a bar. It weighs more than four 5¢ cakes of ordinary soap, and more than five cakes of some brands.

WATER PRESSURE

Tremendous Force Exerted at the Bottom of the Sea.

AIR THERE COULD NOT RISE.

It Would Be Compressed to Such a Degree of Density by the Enormous Weight That the Water Would Float Upon It—Limits of Diving Depths.

From ordinary considerations it would seem that there is no limit to the depths to which a diver or a submarine boat might go. Such, however, is not the case. What prevents diving to great depths is the enormously increasing pressure of water. No diver without a suit can go over 150 feet, because the pressure on the body is then about five tons to the square foot on his body. Eardrums would be staved in, and other fearful difficulties would result.

To remedy this the diving suit was invented, but there is a limit also to its depth. At a depth of one mile the pressure due to the water alone is 165 tons to the square foot. Even if a diving suit was devised to withstand this enormous pressure trouble would be found in getting a pipe line that long and withstanding the pressure that would not break of its own weight.

In the case of a submarine boat it is slightly different. Here only the strength of the boat is the necessary thing. But to be strong the walls have to be thickened, and this adds to the weight, consequently adding to the load to be pulled through the water, and so at last the limit of the engine propelling the boat is reached. If a larger engine is procured it itself weighs more, larger quarters are needed for it, etc. So there is a well defined limit to a marine boat's diving.

Let us take the extreme depth of the sea so far found, that of five miles, and find the pressure to the square foot on the bottom. As water is comparatively incompressible, a cubic foot of it weighs practically the same on the surface as at the bottom of the sea. In the case of fresh water this is sixty-two and a half pounds. Salt water weighs slightly more. So all one has to do to find the pressure due to the water at any depth is to multiply the depth in feet by sixty-two and a half, and the answer is apparent at once in pounds.

At a depth of five miles, the number of feet being 26,400, we have that number of cubic feet to multiply by sixty-two and a half. The answer is 1,650,000 pounds, or 825 tons, to the square foot pressure. No known hollow vessel can withstand this.

While on the subject of increasing water pressure a number of interesting observations can be made in connection with air compressibility. Air is very compressible, the volume decreasing as the pressure increases. If a bottle is tightly corked it will contain air at ordinary pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch, and that is the pressure it exerts. Then tie a weight to the bottle and let it down in the sea by means of a string. On bringing it to the top again it will be found that the stopper has been forced into the bottle by the water pressure. If the bottle is filled with water and stoppered and let down [illegible] place, showing that water is not compressible to any great extent.

If by any means some air could be placed at the bottom of a sea five miles deep it would not rise to the top, for it would be denser—that is, would weigh more to the cubic foot than water—and the water would have to float on the air; hence no man knows if the bottom of our seas is wet or not.

There is only one thing that would prevent the air from becoming this dense, and that is if it was cold enough it would liquefy. However, it is almost impossible—is, in fact, impossible—for anything at the bottom of the sea to be colder than 4 degrees C., for if it got colder the water around it would become colder and larger and consequently lighter and rise, and its place would be taken by 4 degree water, which would bring the object to that temperature. So we have no argument against the suggestion, for the temperature at or below which air liquefies is between 100 and 200 degrees below zero C.

Some people seem to think that a stone thrown into the sea can sink only to a certain depth and is there held suspended on account of the pressure of water. A body immersed in fluid is buoyed up only by the weight of the fluid displaced. We have found that water is practically incompressible, so if the stone displaces a cubic foot of water that water weighs the same, or practicaly so, at the top or at the bottom of the sea. So the stone would be buoyed up only by that constant force and would be carried down by its weight. Thus the difference in the forces would be always downward, and the stone would sink to the bottom.

In fact, if the stone is at all compressible the tendency is for it to get heavier per unit volume as it goes down, for we have the same weight in a smaller space. It will be remembered that this is what happens to the air if we take it in a rubber bag under the surface of the sea. The volume gets less and less, consequently weighing more and more per unit volume and displacing less and less water and being buoyed up less and less until at last a place is reached where the air weighs more volume for volume than does the water and it will not rise.—Lawrence Hodges in Chicago Record-Herald.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Importance of Sleep.

A very frequent cause of nervousness in many persons is loss of sleep. It gives rise to headaches and neuralgia and is mainly responsible for other distressing ailments. The man or woman whose sleep is unduly disturbed as the result of of heavy mental work, by night watching at the bedside of the sick or through irregular hours of employment should endeavor to secure a little refreshing sleep whenever possible in order to make up for the loss sustained, for not only will headaches and other ailments develop from sleeplessness, but the nervous system will soon become considerably deranged as a consequence. So be careful upon this point.

WIZARD BURBANK'S ADVICE.

Go to the Farm, Young Man, and Your Future Is Assured.

Luther Burbank, by experience and accomplishment doubtless the best qualified man in the world today to make such a statement, says the great opportunity for our boys and young men is in agriculture. He points out that after the young man has spent eight years at hard study of medicine, the law or engineering, he has not made a success; he is only prepared to commence the battle for it. Whereas, to add but one kernel of corn to each ear grown in this country in a single year would increase the supply 6,000,000 bushels. One improvement in the potato is already paying back $17,000,000 a year. Everything we eat and wear comes out of the ground. With less than half our population raising things, should there be any wonder that the cost of living has increased 78 per cent in fifteen years? To quote from Mr. Burbank:

"What the world needs urgently and now is men who can increase the forage from our present acreage, so that 16 cents will buy a pound of the choicest sirloin, as of old, instead of a pound of rump, as now.

"What the world needs is not theory or agitation or college lore. There are plenty of these, and at a cost of $180,000,000 per annum in money and who knows how much time they have succeeded in increasing our crop yield only a bare 3 per cent.

"What the world needs is men who can do to agriculture and to horticulture what Edison did to electricity, Carnegie to steel and the Vanderbilts, Hills and Harrimans to transportation develop their efficiency."—Popular Mechanics.

A CURIOUS EXPLOSIVE.

More Powerful Than Guncotton, Yet Safe In Careless Hands.

One of the new high explosives is so inert under ordinary conditions that it is perfectly safe and entirely practical to make billiard balls of it and play a game with them. It can safely be compressed to a greater degree than any other explosive now in use, so blocks of it can be compressed hard enough for billiard balls. A compressed block can then be sawed into small blocks using a steel handsaw. The small blocks may then [illegible] perfectly round balls have been made.

On the billiard table any ordinary knocks will not rouse the latent power of the explosive. If a careless player happened to drop a lighted match on one of the balls after lighting his cigarette it might catch fire, when it would burn rather slowly. Yet it is much more powerful than guncotton and, unlike guncotton, it does not deteriorate. Rifle bullets have been fired into a block of it at a distance of about sixty-five feet without causing it to explode. Explosion is obtained by using a special form of detonator. The new explosive is made largely from coal tar derivatives treated with other chemicals.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Biblical Bargain.

Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren" reminds a newspaper correspondent of this story. The Sunday school class had been reading the Bible narrative, and the minister had come to examine the scholars. The replies to all his questions had been quick, intelligent, and correct. Such as:

"What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Quite correct. And for how much?"

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad brothers?"

No answer.

"What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?"

Then a bright little fellow stretched out an eager hand.

"Well, my little man?"

"Please, sir, they sold him too cheap."

Sir George's Ruse.

Some years ago a cavalry regiment in York, Eng., kept a badger in a barrel, and a party of officers told Sir George Wombwell that their badger was very difficult to draw. "Oh," said Sir George, "I have a six months old puppy that I bet will draw him." The bet was made, and the following day Sir George appeared at the barracks not with a sharp terrier but a lanky and thin retriever pup which was greeted with roars of laughter by the officers. Quite unperturbed by their mirth Sir George turned to his man and said, "Put him in, John." John put the retriever in the barrel, not head first as was expected, but tail first. The badger seized the tail, and the dog rushing off drew the badger with him, and was half-way across the barrack square before the officers realized how cleverly Sir George had won the bet.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

VACCINATION NOT THE CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS

In Opinion of Medical Health Officer at Hamilton

Hamilton Spectator.

Discussing the strange death of Miss Etta Forsyth and her sister, Mrs. Alice Griffin as reported yesterday Dr. Roberts, M.H.O., who is perhaps one of the best authorities on vaccination in the city, having given this particular question much special attention and study, said this morning that the deaths of these two women, in his opinion, were not due to vaccine poisoning.

"Is it possible for vaccine poisoning to cause death so many months after vaccination?" was asked.

"Absolutely impossible," was the reply of Dr. Roberts. "In cases where death occurs from vaccination, it is always shortly after. I never knew of such a thing as vaccine poisoning, but there have been cases where foreign substances have come in contact with the vaccine and caused death. There are some deaths from vaccination because of foreign substances getting into the vaccination wound, after the vaccine has been applied, than from direct vaccine poisoning. In the cases of Miss Forsyth and Mrs. Griffin, I examined their arms at the time they were vaccinated, and never looked at a cleaner or more successful vaccination than them. It would also be impossible for wound infection from foreign substances in these cases and death not result until so long after. Had either Miss Forsyth or Mrs. Griffin suffered from vaccine poisoning, they would either have recovered or died long before they did."

Coroner Dr. Parry yesterday sent the stomach of Mrs. Griffin to Toronto for analysis. When asked if the body of Miss Forsyth would be exhumed for vaccination, he said he did not think so, but this would depend largely on the result of the analysis of Mrs. Griffin's stomach. In the meantime, there are no new developments, and until the inquest is resumed on Monday night, there is not likely to be.

FAVORS ANOTHER TERM FOR MAYOR W. H. BRADBURN

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In view of the very efficient services rendered to our city by our present Mayor, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, and the unfinished condition of some very valuable works now in progress and in which he has taken a very active and intelligent interest, it would be of great advantage to our city if he could be induced to continue to serve the city as Mayor for another term.

While there are others who have served the city faithfully, and would no doubt fill that honorable position with credit to themselves and satisfaction to all our citizens, yet under the present circumstances steps should be taken to induce Mr. Bradburn to deviate from the usual custom and continue for another year, and he should be elected by acclamation again.

Yours truly,
J. C. SHOOK.

CHRISTIAN SPIRIT IN HER SONG

But Miss Jessie McNab Did Not Always Sing Gospel Songs

The soloist at Knox church for this week Miss Jessie McNab, of Toronto has to be known to be fully appreciated. She has many interesting things to tell about herself though they are not for publication. She believes is prayer for one thing and that is one of her abiding convictions. Another is her faith in gospel song to reach the hearts of people. That she did not always believe these two things is soon discovered in conversation. Once she was a highly trained opera and concert singer. Now all her time and talents are spent in Christian service. Yonge st. Mission Toronto has something to say about the change. A night spent in Bible searching brought the completion of the change. And now she is drawn into extreme situations, prisons, asylums, down town institutions, are her special sphere, but her own home grounds on St. Clair Ave. Toronto, are often open for service and people come from the ends of the city. Miss McNab has a powerful voice, and what makes the voice tell is the life behind it.

FORTY-FIVES

Challengers After a Contest With K. O. C. Players

Ever since the Knights of Columbus defeated Charlie Murty and the rest of the T.A.S. crew at forty-fives, they have cast challenges on every side. There is a little aggregation which is known as the West End Pleasure Club in this city, who it is reported, are in pretty fair condition, so they have arranged for a game with the "K.C.'s" for next Tuesday evening, the losers to present a barrel of flour to the St. Vincent's Orphanage. With Messrs. McFadden, Merrell and Ball on the line-up, the W.E.P.C. should put up a grand battle.

CROWNS LOSING LUSTER.

Modern Monarchs Becoming More Ornamental Than Useful.

While European democracy continues its process of relegating to the position of spectacular ornaments its crowned heads, interest in the personalities of these picturesque individuals continues to be one of the features of the social order today, particularly on the continent.

The modern monarch has come more and more to stand merely as the symbol of the continuity of national life, the emblem of the people's distinctive nationality and sovereignty. Even if in a few scattered instances he pretends to regard himself as ruler by divine right, his people no longer look upon him as such.

Even the great Hohenzollern, William II., has recently publicly insisted that his sole object as monarch has been and will continue to be not the glorification of his dynasty, but the welfare of the German people.

As each passes off the human stage his successor, born and reared in a more democratic atmosphere than himself, becomes more than ever the representative of his people. The rising generation of young royalties, if a republic in form does not actually prevent their reigning, will sit in the chairs of constitutional power democratic at heart.—Review of Reviews.

Popper and the Cello.

David Popper, the world's most noted violoncellist and composer for that instrument, celebrated his seventieth birthday in Budapest recently, says the Musical Courier. He is the Liszt of the cello, having saved its repertory from degenerating into trashy supersentimental morceaux and tawdry transcriptions and variation arrangements. Popper widened the scope of cello technique, ennobled its character and made a lasting place for the knee fiddle in the rank of real solo instruments. Popper teaches at the Landesakademie in Budapest and is the musical idol of all Hungary, although he is by birth a Bohemian.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

The National Art Gallery at Ottawa is to be open on Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

Hon. J. J. Foy announced last evening that the Provincial Government had decided to subscribe $10,000 to the lake disaster fund.

Ships of the big fleets in port at Fort William are flying flags at half-mast, out of respect to sailors lost in the recent storm on the lakes.

Sir Robert Peel used to live in one of the Whitehall Gardens houses about to be swept away for the new offices of the Board of Trade, and even when Premier continued to reside there among his beloved pictures, only transacting his official business in Downing street. So late as 1894—45 years after Peel's death—a charge used to figure in the British Estimates for an annuity to the man who swept the crossing in Whitehall traversed by Sir Robert on his way from Whitehall Gardens to No. 10 Downing street.

Powerful Pumps.

Pumps powerful enough to lift water to the top of the Woolworth building, rearing a crest of fifty-seven stories and overlooking all the rest of New York, were recently tested and found to register 350 pounds pressure in the basement of the building, the tallest in the world. This is said to be twice the pressure necessary to bore a hole through the strongest brick wall. At the top of the structure a nozzle pressure of twenty-two pounds was obtained.

BELLEVILLE LADS TOLD TO DEPART

P. C. Reid Arrested Them at the C.P.R. Station

Two would-be knights of the road of trouble giving their names as Clarence Ricketts, aged 17, and Herman Lyttle aged 19, claiming Belleville as their last place of abode, appeared before acting Magistrate Rush this morning. They pleaded not guilty and were told to make haste for their home in Belleville. On being asked why they came here, they said they had come here for the purpose of looking for work.

"Do you want to go back to your home?" asked the Magistrate.

"Oh, we are not particular," responded the youths.

"How did you get here?" inquired the Chief.

"Well, we walked most of the way, and rode the rest."

The boys were arrested last evening by P.C. Reid at the C.P.R. station in the act of trying to catch a train. Two others were with them, but they managed to make their getaway.

"Don't let it occur again," was all the sympathy that Wm. Torrance got from the Magistrate, when he paid the usual $2 for his little spree.

NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held in Canada. Poultry entries number over 3,500, with pigeons, canaries, fantails, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300 each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production. 23

For the Children

Lady Mary Greville, Who Is Kind to Animals.

© by American Press Association.

Little Lady Mary Greville, the demure maiden pictured, is shown distributing catalogues at the entrance to the "country fair in aid of our dumb friends," which was recently held in a London suburb. As its name indicates, the fair is given to raise funds to help animals. In a great city like London there are always large numbers of stray cats and dogs wandering about without means of subsistence except what they may pick up in the streets. It is to help these poor unfortunate beasts that the Dumb Animal society was organized and is maintained.

Lady Mary takes a great interest in the society and its work, as she is very fond of animals. Most children like animals, but they are often careless and sometimes abuse them, unthinkingly perhaps, but the poor creatures suffer just the same. It is the mark of gentle breeding and a sweet disposition to treat our dumb friends with kindness.

A Little Story.

On her birthday a great duchess called her little grandsons to her and told them a story of a Roman emperor who made it a rule that no one should leave him in a sorrowful frame of mind.

"One day," said the duchess, "the emperor was very busy with his own affairs, and so the day passed and he had done no good to others. When evening came he grew sad, and, sighing, he exclaimed: 'My friends, I have lost a day! I have neglected my fellow men.'"

When the duchess had finished her story she sent the two grandsons out to play. At the palace gate a poor woman spoke to them.

"My good gentlemen," she said, "won't you assist me? I am poor and have had all sorts of misfortune."

Ernest ran on to his play, [illegible] touched by the old woman [illegible] remembering his grandmother's story, gave the poor old soul a coin.

"Now I have not wasted my day," he thought as he ran to join his brother.

That boy was Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's consort.

Concerning Nails.

All of you have heard of fourpenny nails, sixpenny nails, etc. The suffix penny in this connection does not mean penny, but is a corruption of the word pound.

When we speak of a fourpenny nail we mean nails of such a size that a thousand of them will weigh four pounds. An eightpenny nail weighs eight pounds a thousand, and so on. It is an old English term, and its original form was "four pound," "eight pound," "ten pound," etc. Carpenters and other artisans got into the way of slurring over these terms and pronouncing them fourpen, sixpen, etc., and this corruption in turn was modified by turning the shortened suffix pen into penny, and so it stands today, a clear case of turning a pound into a penny.

JUDGMENTS IN THE COUNTY POLICE COURT

Quite a boom was in evidence yesterday in County Police Court circles, when Magistrate Edmison rendered five judgments which have been pending for sometime.

In the case of Chas. Calder and Geo. Barr of Norwood, charged with peddling without a license, they were each fined $5 with costs of $3.07. Isaac Puffer, constable of Norwood was the informant.

The defendants in the Harvey assault case, which was aired in the Court a few weeks ago were both heavily fined. Geo. Brownlow charged with assaulting Chas. Kreger was found guilty and was fined $5 with costs of $13.36. Peter Graham, on a similar charge was fined $5 with costs of $19.71.

The charge against Graham for using grossly insulting language to the complainant Kreger, was dismissed without costs.

SOLDIER, AUTOMATONS.

Latest Device to Heighten the Terrors of Warfare.

Yet another terrible engine of war is likely to be added to the equipment of modern armies if the invention of an engineer named Aassen of Copenhagen fulfills expectations. This engineer has perfected an invention which he calls a "soldier automaton," an automatic machine for replacing the line of skirmishers for defense purposes. Briefly it consists of a cylinder, which is buried in the ground and which, like submarine mines, may stay there for years without being damaged. A signal station a distance of four or five miles away is connected with the cylinder. By pressing a button an electric current is transmitted, and the cylinder shoots up until it is about two feet from the level of the ground, firing at the same moment 400 shots in a horizontal direction.

The value of such an invention in repelling invaders is obvious. It means that one of these cylinders can take the place at any point of 400 soldiers, and if a number are buried in proper systematic order over a certain stretch of country a continuous hail of bullets can be fired at an invading army without the latter seeing a single enemy.

A number of these cylinders, in fact, makes a line of skirmishers, whose operations may inflict terrible damage on the enemy. The shots take effect at a distance of 3,000 yards, and the inventor calculates that only 10 per cent of the enemy would be saved after an attack of these automatic troops.

The "skirmishers" would be placed in rows behind each other, to be used successively for resisting various attacks, and, as the cylinders are hidden in the ground, no enemy can know where the line is before the firing starts.—Exchange.

The fee for a marriage certificate with stamp is 64 cents.

HER PROPOSAL

A Story of Fisher Folk

By F. A. MITCHEL

The coast of Maine is dotted with villages, snugly located in the little coves which dent the islands, forming a continuous archipelago from Portland to the bay of Fundy. The men in these villages fish all the year round, except for a short season in midsummer, when they use the motorboats for taking out sailing parties on various excursions, for which they receive good pay.

In one of these villages lived two fishermen whose ownership and management of a boat gave them the title of captain. They were Captain Steve Williams and Captain Enoch Brown. Williams was older than Brown, but they were stanch friends. Both of them knew so well the rocks and shoals of the coast in which they were used to fish that they could sail around them or between them in the darkest night.

They set their nets just before darkness fell upon the ocean and took them in soon after dawn. It was a hard life, this being exposed to the winds and waves when others were asleep and sleeping while others were awake, but so long as they were young they did not mind it—that is, when the weather was fair. When it was stormy they did not go out to fish, but many a night a change would come, and, being out, they were obliged to endure the exposure till they could make the cove from which they had started.

Captain Steve Williams was married, and many a time when storms arose while he was out in his boat his wife would lie awake dreading with every shriek of the wind that it might be blowing her husband on some sunken rock. She would clasp her little daughter, Edith, tightly to her breast and mutter a prayer for the man plying his perilous vocation.

Captain Brown had no wife to pray for him. He had passed the heyday of youth and had not married, though he could have won almost any of the [illegible] clear [illegible] that bespoke courage and honesty. But the winds and the spray had begun to plow furrows in his cheeks, and a few gray hairs were beginning to appear in his sandy hair.

When Edith Williams was a little child she was sensible of there being a great trouble in the family. A man came to the house and took her father away with him, her mother clinging to her husband, weeping. Edith did not see her father for some time; then he came home, and the trouble seemed to be over. It occurred when she was at an age in which children forget, but she never forgot the scene of her father's being taken away. And there was another scene she remembered, her father holding one of Captain Brown's hands while her mother held the other, and they were talking to him with great earnestness.

But both these scenes, though not forgotten, grew dim in her memory as she grew away from them. Perhaps they were dwarfed by others that were present with her. Her father, who was never the same man after the misfortune that had come to him, began to dread going out at night on the black ocean to gain a livelihood for those dependent upon him. And his wife dreaded to have him go as much as he dreaded going.

Edith wished that the fish would go into the nets during the day as well as during the night. She wished that her father could devote himself to some other calling. And yet when now and then he would make a great haul and dispose of it for a large sum it would not seem so dreadful after all—at least he would not so consider it himself.

And so the battle for life with the winds and the waves went on. The two captains weathered every tempest, every fog, in which they were caught. At last a little germ so small that it could be seen only with a microscope got into Captain Williams' system and effected what the angry breakers rolling over some half hidden rock were powerless to do. The fisherman died quietly in his bed.

He had wrung from the sea enough to pay for the home in which he lived, besides a fund for an income by which, living economically, his wife and daughter might keep the wolf from the door. But his wife could not live without him. There was now nothing to worry her, but when the wind howled at night, from force of habit, she would waken and think of the little boat out on the dark, heaving ocean, the solitary man in it feeling his way like a blind person. While she was sinking away, at the slightest sound she would start, inquiring if it were not the melancholy foghorn or a gun from a sinking ship, and at the last she was sure she heard the thin clang of a distant bell buoy.

Edith was now alone. There were friends and acquaintances in plenty, but they were like persons in another boat, liable to drift away at any moment. One, and only one, seemed left of those she had been accustomed to regard a part of the household, Captain Brown.

A few days after the death of her mother Edith was sitting in the living room of her home. She had taken up some sewing more for occupation than anything else, and in her loneliness tears were dropping on her work [illegible] Captain Brown. He had [illegible] knocking. She smiled at him faintly through her tears. He was all that was left of the three who had composed her little world. He sat down before her and looked at her pityingly with his gray eyes.

"Edith," he said, "I've come to say something to you. Your father and mother being gone, you have no one to rely on."

"Yes; I have you. Father often told me that if he were taken away from me I could count on you for anything."

The fisherman winced. He had something on his mind, something he had dreamed without hope of its realization. He had long wished for Edith's love, the love of a woman, not a child, for a man. Now that she was left alone there seemed a possibility that he might induce her to look upon him as a suitor. But he had been twenty years old when she was born, and she had been accustomed to think of him as something akin to a father. Her reception of the opening of the proposal he intended discouraged him.

"But what is it you have to say to me?" she added, seeing that he was drawing back within himself. Her question was accompanied by a reassuring smile. It brought him courage.

"I don't see how you can live here alone," he said, "and you have no relative to come and live with you. I was your father's friend. He was like a brother to me, and I've missed him since he left us pretty nigh as much as you have."

She interrupted him. Whether it was to stave off what she saw was coming or from a sincere desire to know the truth he could not be sure.

"Tell me," she said, "what was the trouble that came to the family when I was a little girl, and what was your connection with it."

"Your father told me that if I felt it would be safe to intrust you with the secret after you had become a woman and he had gone I had his permission to do so."

"Intrust me! Did father doubt that I might safely be intrusted with any secret?"

"Not as a woman; only as an irresponsible child. I will tell you all I ought to tell you, for there is a reason for my not saying what I have intended to say. There was a man, a miserly wretch, who held a mortgage on this house. Your father was having hard luck with his nets about that time and couldn't pay the interest. The old skinflint wrote him that he was going to foreclose the mortgage. Your father went to see him about the matter and there were high words between the two. The next morning the miser was found murdered."

Edith leaned forward to catch every word, a look of dread on her face.

"Your father was arrested charged with the murder. Nobody doubted that he was guilty, and since a number of criminals had shortly before got off by the inefficiency of the law a number of men determined in this case to be the law themselves. I got wind of the move and, taking my gun, went to the jail to help the sheriff protect your father. Nearing it, I saw the men advancing to attack it. Taking position behind a tree, I fired several shots at them."

The captain paused.

"Well?" queried Edith.

"I killed one of them."

"Go on."

"They supposed my shots came from the jail. They all went away. You are the only person now living who knows that there is blood on my hands."

She reached for the hand on which there was blood and asked him to go on.

"Not long after this the police ran in a criminal with some money and other property on him that had belonged to the murdered man. He confessed to the murder, and your father was released."

With a sigh of relief Edith drew away and, resting her head on the high back of the chair in which she sat, covered her face with her hands. Her companion waited for her to recover from her emotion. Presently she withdrew her hands and said:

"Go on."

"There's nothing more to tell," the captain said. "I wanted to give myself up and take the consequences of the killing I had done, but your father and your mother dissuaded me. They said it was perfectly legitimate and by it I had saved your father's life, for it turned out that the sheriff was unprepared to defend him and was ready to give him up to the men who had brought with them the wherewithal to execute him. I suppose this is true, but I think I would have felt better all these years if I had confessed."

"Never mind that now. What was it you were going to tell me before this digression?"

"I can't do it."

"Then I will."

She threw her arms about his neck and said: "You will need some one to take the place of those who doubtless did what they could to make you feel satisfied that you did right in defending an innocent man even though you took a life in doing so. I will be that person."

The story was told, though it was the woman who told it. And now another wife lies at night thinking of a fisherman out on the black waters under the dome of heaven waiting for the fishes to come into his net. When the moon glints the waves she sleeps calmly, but when she hears the wind rising or the deep moan of the fog horn she shudders.

A WEIRD PROCESSION.

Snake Charmers Follow Celebrated Performer To His Grave.

Five hundred snake-charmers, sounding weird notes on their pipes, formed the unusual yet picturesque procession that followed to his grave Katch Sarak, a man of big renown in his business, who died in terrible agony as the result of a cobra bite received while practicing his profession in the neighborhood of Garden Reach, India.

"Guru," or master, he had become dubbed by the people amongst whom he lived, such was his influence over poisonous reptiles. His services were sought recently by a neighbor who had missed many fowls from his compound. Going at dusk one day, the snake-charmer discovered a cobra of unusual size amongst the birds, so formidable, in fact, that he postponed his attempt to capture it until daylight, when he was successful in securing it.

Instead of dispatching the snake at once, he took it to the local bazaar for the edification of the natives. On attempting to extract its fangs, the cobra wriggled free and darted at its captor, who was bitten on the fingers. The "guru's" supposed godlike qualities proved of no avail. Consternation reigned amongst the crowd as he lay in awful agony; the news of his plight spread swiftly through the bazaar, and more than a hundred other snake-charmers scurried to the scene; but all their efforts, all their devices, their earnest prayers, were of no avail against the powerful poison. Within ninety minutes Katch Sarak was dead.

With great ceremonial Katch Sarak's pipes, snake-basket, earthenware jars, and the other impedimenta of his craft were borne before him to the cemetery, where he was laid to rest amidst the heartrending wail of the pipes of his colleagues.

THE SPORTING WORLD

BIG TIME AT BRINTON CARPET CO. FACTORY

Trophies Were Presented to the Champion Bowlers

Employer and employe joined in a concert at the factory of the Brinton Carpet Company, last night, and had a big time.

The affair was arranged to do honor to the bowling champions of the factory by presenting them with the trophies won in the competitions on the bowling green, provided by the Company.

It was a jolly gathering and the winners were given a great reception when they received the trophies.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Ross, the good left wing, of last year's Peterboro Intermediates is now located at Orillia and will play there this winter, providing Orillia is represented in the intermediate series of the O.H.A.

Jerry Coughlin, rover of last season's senior Petes, is now located at Ingersoll. Jerry should prove a valuable addition to the team of the latter town this winter.

The T. R. and A. A. senior hockey champions of the O.H.A., are rounding out a team, and despite the loss of Capt. "Ach" Hunter and Addison expect to be able to put a formidable septette on the ice. They have secured Gooch, the clever point player of the Toronto Canoe Club, and "Pete" Thornton, the good left wing man of the Orillia junior champions. Gordon Bricker will play the nets for the black and white, and the probable line up is as follows:

Goal— Gilbert, Bricker or McGiffen.
Point— Gooch.
Cover Point— Heffernan.
Rover — McLean, H. Mecking, "Mauk" Mackenzie.
Centre— Gordon Mecking.
Left wing— Thornton.
Right wing— Brown.

BILL CROWLEY MAY GET HAT

Bill Crowley last night kicked over 227 and is high man for the hat this week.— Calgary Herald.

The Useful Pin.

We are so used to having the handy pin around while sewing and dressing that we can scarcely imagine how the ancients ever got along without this article. Yet they did, for it was only at the end of the seventeenth century that the modern pin was invented. After that time the pinmaker was allowed to sell pins openly only on Jan. 1 and 2, so that court ladies and fashionable dames alike were obliged to buy a large store on those days.

Exterminating Wasps.

Something like 3,000,000 wasps have been killed since July by Mr Fred Peck, the bee expert, of Messrs Chivers & Sons, Ltd., the jam manufacturers, of Histon, Cambridge. He seeks out the nests and injects into them a solution of cyanide of potassium, and altogether over 200 nests have been thus destroyed by Mr Peck, who has accounted for something like 8,000 queen wasps. In addition to the havoc which they bring about in the orchards, wasps also do great damage in the apiaries, and this season they have proved more destructive to bees than ever. The value, therefore, of such energetic measures as these described can be realized when it is understood that Messrs. Chivers are probably the largest bee farmers in the country, the bees, of course, being kept to fertilize the fruit trees in their extensive orchards.

SWARMING WITH INSECTS.

The Pests Are a Veritable Plague In Bolivia and Brazil.

Insect pests are a plague on the boundary of Bolivia and Brazil. "In the forests and on the smaller rivers," writes Commander Herbert A. Edwards, R. N. R., in the Geographical Journal, "life is made almost unbearable. Ants are met with everywhere; they swarm over one's person in hundreds, and most of them bite most savagely. There is one kind of red ant, which lives in trees hollowed out by themselves, whose bite is like a touch with a red hot iron. If a person inadvertently touches or leans up against one of these trees the ants swarm out upon him instantly, and his life for hours afterward is a long drawn out misery. Then there are the huge ants, called tucanderas, one and a half inches in length; they live in the forks of trees. Their bite is particularly painful, and causes the part affected to swell up as if poisoned. One of our soldiers was incapacitated for several days by a bite of a tucandera. Red ants; black ants which make broad, straight roads of their own and move about in battalions; grayish white ants, living in red colored mounds, six feet high; yellow ants—each and every one has its own particular way of making unwelcome the intruder into its habitat.

"Butterflies during bright sunshine settled on the surveyors and the instruments they were using in such numbers that survey work became an impossibility. Nor is this all. Wasps of many colors, but always with a sting; hornets, which give no mercy to man or beast; bees of all sizes, some of which swarm in one's shirt, eyes, hair, ears, mouth and nostrils seeking moisture. Every blade of grass has a tick of some sort, waiting opportunity to bury itself in some one's flesh.

"Spiders, horrid hairy creatures, with bodies six inches long, are sometimes met. One of our men was stung or bitten by one of these when out shooting; his foot where he was bitten became very inflamed and broke out into raw patches. He had to be left behind as we were on the march, and when we sent for him three weeks later he was still limping."

BOWSER A HERO.

Addressed as "Colonel," He Is Proud of Title.

TELLS TALES OF BATTLES

Seeks to Evade Lecturing on His Experiences From 1861 to 1865 Before Veterans, but Exposure Follows—Reduced to Ranks.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER came home with his head down and his shoulders hunched up.

He looked pale and dejected.

He climbed the steps in a weary way.

"Are you ill?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she met him at the door and extended a hand to help him.

He did not answer until he had passed into the sitting room and taken a seat and she had asked:

"Has some calamity happened?"

"Not exactly."

"But what is it?"

"I'm in a hole, I guess."

"How?"

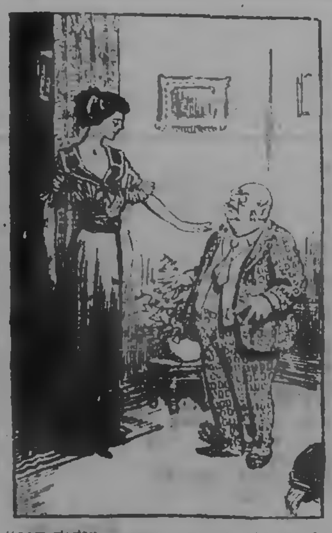
"Well, there were half a dozen old soldiers in the office the other day, and naturally the subject of the war came up, and two or three of the men began to talk about their adventures. I don't know what gave them the impression, but they took it that I was an ex-soldier and called me colonel. I liked the sound of the title and did not deny it. In fact"—

"In fact you strengthened the impression?" she said as he stammered around.

"Yes, I suppose I did—that is, I told them of the battles I was in and described some of the horrors of war."

"But what on earth did you want to do such a thing as that for?"

"Because I didn't want to be bluffed out. I know a dozen different men who pass for old war veterans, and yet they were not ten years old when the war closed. Some of them describe things so glibly as to make your hair curl."



"YOU PASSED YOURSELF OFF FOR A COLONEL!"

"Well, you passed yourself off as a colonel and an old veteran and what [illegible]

Wanted War Lecture.

"Why, one of the men, whose name is Fowler, belongs to a Grand Army post. I didn't know it then, but he came in again this afternoon and said that the post wanted me to deliver a lecture or address on my personal adventures during the war."

"And of course you declined?"

"I—I did, but he wouldn't have it that way. He said that a committee would call here at 8 o'clock this evening to extend a formal invitation. That is what's bothering me. I can't accept the invitation, and yet what excuse am I going to make?"

"You have acted like an idiot!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser. "And I don't see how you are to get out of it with any credit to yourself. The idea of your posing as a veteran and a colonel! Wild horses couldn't have dragged you into the war had you been old enough to go, and, as for the coloneley, you might just as well have claimed that you put down the rebellion single handed. I never heard of such foolish audacity!"

"Madam, don't forget who I am!" cautioned Mr. Bowser, with considerable asperity.

"Oh, I won't! You are Colonel Bowser, late of the —th, and you bear the scars of seven or eight wounds received while engaged in the business of saving your country! I am proud of you, colonel!"

At another time her words would have precipitated a crisis, if not a calamity.

"Well, I can't see the committee," he finally observed.

"That is, you have decided not to lecture on your personal experience—the fierce charge, the bursting shells, the song of the bullets, the pale faces of the dead and the groans of the wounded?"

"Y-yes, I have decided not to."

Bowser Tries to Dodge.

"Your decision is probably a wise one. You might have got General Lee commanding the Union army before you were through speaking. What do you propose to say to the committee—what excuse will you make?"

"I tell you I don't want to see the committee at all. I shan't be here when they call. I want you to receive them and say that I was suddenly called out of town."

"But they will come some other time."

"Maybe not. You can do the best to discourage them. I'll get out pretty soon and go over and hang around the drug store for an hour. Will you help me out of this scrape or not?"

"I will make the best possible excuse to the committee," she replied, "and you let this be a solemn warning to you in future. As a hero of a hundred battles you are not a success."

Mr. Bowser felt the hit and the hurt, but he made no reply. He simply laid it away among the archives to be revenged later on. Ten minutes later he was out of the house, and Mrs. Bowser was making ready to receive the expected call from the committee.

No one showed up, however, the minutes dragged away, and it finally came 9 o'clock, and she knew that Mr Bowser was safe. He didn't happen to be, however. He had been in the drug store about ten minutes, talking politics with the druggist and quite elated over something, and he had just begun to tell a funny story when the door opened and in walked the old veteran and two of his comrades. They were the committee.

Cornered In Drug Store.

"Ah, there, colonel!" exclaimed the old vet as he came forward and extended the hand of comradeship. "We were just on our way around to your house. Comrade Jones, this is Colonel Bowser. Comrade Jennings, the brave Colonel Bowser!"

The druggist was looking straight at Mr. Bowser with wide open eyes and a puzzled look on his face, and the victim squirmed and wriggled about and wished he had never heard of the war which came near disrupting the Union.

"Well, colonel," continued the veteran, "I was telling the boys about you, and it was decided to have you address us on Friday evening. Will that be convenient for you? We shall look forward to something extra good. Comrades, the colonel was wounded three times during the war, and some of the charges he made at the head of his regiment have gone down in history."

"I—I don't believe I can lecture before your post!" stammered Mr. Bowser, with face as red as a boiled lobster and a burning desire to kill the grinning druggist on the spot.

"Oh, but you must—you surely must," declared the other two veterans in chorus. "You have aroused our interest, and you must not disappoint us. What battles did you say you were in?"

"V-Valley Forge and—and Lexington?" replied the colonel in his confusion.

"And Bunker Hill, too!" roared the druggist as he slapped his leg and danced around.

"I—I don't understand," said the spokesman of the committee after a pause so painful that it could have been chopped with an ax. "Colonel Bowser, are you not mistaken in"—

"Colonel Bowser!" whooped the druggist as he pounded his leg some more.

"Yes, sir, I said Colonel Bowser."

"Colonel of what? Why, he couldn't shoulder arms with a musket! If he's been passing himself off as a veteran, then he's simply been stringing you! Bowser, what have you been up to?"

Bowser's Guilt Proved.

Mr. Bowser couldn't reply. He was too busy swallowing the lump in his throat and planning a terrible revenge against the druggist. His demeanor was proof positive of his guilt, and after a moment the veterans turned away with the remark:

"We were told that he was an [illegible] such a display of cheek is unheard of."

"Now, then," said Mr. Bowser as the men departed and the druggist continued to gurgle, "what did you want to put me in a hole for? You miserable, meddling idiot, but I could kill you where you stand!"

"Get out, you old deceiver! I never heard of such a fraud, and if you give me any chin music I'll see that it all gets in the papers!"

Mr. Bowser got out. He was Colonel Bowser no more. He had been reduced to the ranks, and he knew it. He started for home to make such a red hot time for Mrs. Bowser that she would wish she had never been born, but when he reached the gate his courage failed him.

Instead of going in and facing the matter he walked up and down in the shadows of night—walked up and down and paid no heed to the wails of the wounded and the screams of shot and shell. Mrs. Bowser saw him from a window and softly let the cat out of the house, and as Mr. Bowser walked and walked the feline walked and walked after him, and the policeman on the other side of the street stopped to look and to muse:

"Wonder what that crank has got on his mind tonight? I'll bet he's been having another row with Mrs. Bowser and got the worst of it!"

SENIOR Y.M.C.A. MEMBERS HEARD SPLENDID ADDRESS

Their Banquet Was a Big Success — Nearly Two Hundred Men Present.

Over one hundred and seventy-five men sat down last evening to one of the most successful senior banquets ever held at the Young Men's Christian Association.

The repast was provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary and the many choice edibles were attacked with vim.

Mr. J. H. Connal, President of the Association presided and some of the prominent citizens present were Dr. Moir, Ald. Gillespie, E. A. Peck, M. L.A., W. A. Logan, Ben Shortly, J. J. Turner, Jr., Dr. Walmsley, F. J. A. Hall, and others, making a most representative gathering.

In his address Mr. Connal spoke of the great work done by the Association during the past year, greatly due to the efficient services of the energetic officers in the persons of Messrs. Hainsworth, Thompson and Galley, all of whom deserved great credit for the magnificent work they were carrying on.

At present they had a membership of about 700, but in a short time the membership would be increased to 1,000. A pleasing feature of the work was the support the citizens were giving the Association.

The gathering was favored with a violin solo by Mr. Leader which was rendered in a most talented manner, while a reading by Mr. R. J. Soden proved to be most entertaining and amusing.

Ald. Gillespie, Finance Minister of the Y.M.C.A. addressed the gathering for a few minutes on the rapid growth of the Association during the past season, which was no doubt largely due to the efforts of General Secretary Hainsworth. Ald. Gillespie also extended the thanks of the Board to the ladies for their most delicious repast. Their assistance was one of the features of making the banquet such a success.

The chairman, Mr. Connal, then introduced the visiting speaker, General Secretary Hopkins, of the Central "Y" at Toronto, who gave a most inspiring and able address on the subject of "How the Y.M.C.A. meets the Challenge of the City." Secretary Hopkins who is recognized as one of the most able and powerful men in the work of the Association, congratulated the Board and the officers on having such a banquet and on their great work in the past year. He then described the commencement of the undertaking of Association work and how near he came to being sent to this city to carry on the work some seventeen years ago. He also referred to an instance in this community when all the members of the Board had resigned owing to the great difficulties which they met with, but was pleased to mention the great success of the men who had stayed with the ship. The work of the "Y" was adapted to meet the needs of the average working man. So thoroughly was the work behind established throughout the world that if the Association was to be obliterated, it would come back and reestablish itself. The work of the challenge of the city must be met by both the men and the Association. The very word challenge brought out the very best that is in a man. The greatest challenge is friendship to the lonely man when he arrives in the city with no place to go. It is one of the saddest things when a man goes into a strange city with nobody with whom to meet and become friends. Mr. Hopkins gave several vivid instances how young men had gone wrong in some cities where there was no Association. The revival of the old spirit of friendship is what we want.

If the Association demonstrates its friendship to the lonely men it will become a great power in the city. It is a calamity when a man goes out into the world unprepared for its battles and ways. The world wants to-day the man who is fit and knows that he knows he is fit. The "Y" is the place to show the man that he is fit.

The man who wins must be fit, as in a race, and the speaker gave a powerful example of a handicapped race comparing it to the race in life.

In dealing with the challenge of the wasted life, the speaker appealed to have the talents of the younger men magnified. It is the life of service that counts to-day. Touch the lives of men that need your friendship, your assistance. It will make you a power. If we get away from the visions of hopefulness the vision fo the Master will leave us. "One thousand members would be a great benefit in the social, religious and other life of the city, as a social factor," concluded the speaker as he sat down amid the great outburst of applause.

The President voiced the same sentiments as the former speaker, and said that the officers would certainly appreciate the assistance of any of the merchants that would advise them of the stranger in the city.

The banquet was then brought to a close with a prayer by the Rev. R. G. Peever.

CONCERT CO. GAVE FINE PROGRAM

High Class Entertainment Failed to Draw Patronage It Merited

The members of the Royal Concert Company were given a very cordial reception by an appreciative audience at the Grand Opera House last night.

The concert, billed as a benefit for the Peterboro Hockey Club, included vocal and instrumental numbers, impersonations and character sketches and all the members of the company acquitted themselves very creditably.

The hockey club did not benefit from a financial standpoint, but the officers have the satisfaction of having provided an evening's entertainment which won the hearty approval of the audience.

LINDSAY WATER NOT THE BEST

Lindsay, Nov. 19.—Sanitary Inspector Douglas recently took a number of samples of drinking water in town and forwarded them to the Government analyst at Toronto for inspection. The returned report is interesting, but yet alarming, as it is shown that of the eight samples submitted, which included the filtered water from the town plant, only two are free from infection, and the town water is not included in those two samples.

The address cannot fail to bring forth good results in Pittsburg, and I hope you may be able to sow the seed in a great number of municipalities before you return to your home.

With kind regards.
Very sincerely,

PANAMA'S WATER BRIDGE.

That Is What Uncle Sam's Wonderful Canal Really Is.

What the engineers of the United States government are constructing at Panama is not a canal through the Isthmus, but a bridge of water across and above it. The so called canal is a huge water bridge, the first in the world's history. It is about thirty-four miles in length, eighty-seven feet high, with a channel of water through its center varying in depth from forty-five to eighty-seven feet and in width at the bottom from 300 to 1,000 feet.

The bridge is divided into two sections, Gatun lake and Culebra cut, the latter being an arm of the former. Access to the bridge by vessels will be by means of water elevators, six in duplicate at either end, each 1,000 feet long, 110 feet wide and with a combined lift of eighty-seven feet. At the Atlantic end the elevators are grouped one above another, like a flight of three steps. At the Pacific end two pairs of elevators are grouped at the bottom and are separated from the third pair above by a platform of water in the form of a lake about a mile and a half in length. The piers or walls which hold the bridge in place are the Gatun dam and elevator gates at the Atlantic end and the dam and elevator gates at Pedro Miguel, at the Pacific end.

About nine miles of the canal will be through Culebra cut, and these nine miles constitute all that can properly be called a canal unless the sea approaches at either end be included in that designation.—Joseph Bucklin Bishop in Scribner's.

"He's Got It."

The very newest slang expression among college undergraduates, where slangy and picturesque expressions always are up with and often ahead of the times, is "He's got it." If a man has "got it" he is distinctly all right. His fellow students have put on him the seal of their unqualified approval. They have bestowed upon him the highest praise that they can bestow. There is about him an indefinite something, morally and mentally, that makes him all right—a square, clean, [illegible] is the case with most slang, the genesis of "He's got it" [illegible]—New York [illegible] Pittsburgh Dispatch.

TORONTO LONDON AND OTTAWA TO MAKE CUT IN THE POWER PRICES

The Hydro Electric Commission at an Important Session Receives Reports of Handsome Surplusses From all its 46 Municipalities—Authorizes Closing Owen Sound Contract

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The Hydro-Electric Commission at its meeting yesterday authorized a reduction of 10 and 15 per cent. in the rates now obtaining in Toronto, London and Ottawa. Toronto and Ottawa are advised of a justified reduction of 10 and 15 per cent. respectively on all light and power rates, whereas London can cut off 15 per cent. on light and 18 per cent. on power charges.

Every one of the 46 municipalities in Ontario now using Hydro showed a surplus for the past nine months. The smallest surplus is 10 per cent. and they soar in some instances to 45 and 50. None of the larger cities falls below 20 per cent. profit.

The fifth railway contract in the history of the commission thus far was completed when Hon. Adam Beck signed for the power supply of the London Street Railway. It is estimated that the amount of energy to be used in this way will slightly exceed 1,000 horsepower.

Toronto shows a surplus of 25 per cent. above the total cost; Ottawa returns 25 per cent.; London, 20 per cent.; St. Thomas, 45 per cent.; Port Arthur, 52 per cent.; Berlin, 35 per cent.; Guelph, 35 per cent.; Stratford, 40 per cent.; Galt, regardless of a 15 per cent. reduction recently on power and light rates, returns now a 30 per cent. surplus.

Waterloo, in the same district, shows a 45 per cent. surplus; Penetang, 45 per cent.; Baden, 35 per cent., and Weston, 35 per cent.

In the three cities of Toronto, London and Ottawa, the commission takes the opportunity of forwarding to the local commissions the recommendation that their surplus admits of a reduction at this time in accordance with the policy of the Government body that the surplus be used in this way. Notifications to this effect are being issued to these cities unless there should be some serious objection on the part of the local commissioners.

The commission also authorized the closing of the contract with Owen Sound, and ordered the commission's engineers to set about the plans and tenders for the work in hand at once. This stroke involves the expenditure of $650,000 in the development of power at Eugeria Falls, and the supply of the string of towns round about. In addition the proposed line will tie with the Collingwood connection, now serving Midland, Penetang and Barrie. It is thought that at least 1,200 horsepower will be used.

GROWERS ORGANIZE

Vegetable Men Plan To Co-operate to Get Ahead of the Middlemen.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—There is a possibility that the vegetable growers of the province will band together in a protective movement to guard their interests against the growing independence of the commission merchant. Some indignation was expressed yesterday at the convention of the Ontario organization now in session at the Parliament Buildings, over the treatment which some of the vegetable growers have received and the tremendous loss of money through the present system.

In consequence it is urged that in each city of size in the province a large depot be formed where a market gardener can bring his produce and place it in the hands of a central agent for disposal.

It was also shown that by standing together they are now enabled to obtain seeds for a fraction of the price formerly charged.

Hunters Are Safe.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Six duck hunters who it was feared had lost their lives in Lake Michigan, after life-savers had failed to find trace of them, yesterday found refuge north of Glencoe, where they ran their motor-boat on the beach to escape the heavy sea. Their escape was made known last night, when one of their number telephoned to his wife.

WARSHIP RESCUES THIRTY.

Steamer Scotsdyke Burned In English Channel Off Isle of Wight.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The British battleship Iron Duke effected a timely rescue of the thirty passengers and crew of the steamer Scotsdyke while the steamer was burning in the English Channel early yesterday.

The steamer, bound from Mediterranean ports for Sunderland, caught fire off the Isle of Wight shortly after midnight. The blaze started in a deck cargo of grass and spread so rapidly through this inflammable material that the crew was unable to stay its progress and it attacked the ship's bridge and a number of life boats, which were destroyed.

Owing to the heavy sea it was impossible to launch the few remaining lifeboats. The panic-stricken passengers and the crew were forced to retire to the stern of the steamer.

The battleship Iron Duke was fortunately carrying out trials in the channel during the night, and when the burning steamer was sighted, sailors from the warship put off in boats to the rescue.

The forepart of the steamer was a mass of flames when the boats reached the scene, and the helpless persons aboard were huddled together aft.

The Iron Duke played her searchlights upon the stern of the doomed ship while the rescue crew took all hands safely off.

GANGSTERS IN BATTLE.

[illegible] Club House.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—One of the most spectacular gun battles among gangsters in this city in recent years was fought at the doors of a club house on the lower East Side late Tuesday night. Three men were seriously shot, many others were wounded, and seven were arrested after the police reserves finally dared to break up the fight.

Gangsters crouching behind trees, ash barrels, and other obstructions, opened fire on the club house. Men within sprang to the doors and windows and answered the attack. Fifty shots were exchanged, while detectives blew their whistles for aid. When the revolvers were emptied the police charged the club house. They met with no resistance. The gangsters in the street fled.

SAILORS MUTINIED

British Freighter Returns to Port With 12 Men Imprisoned

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—The British freighter Santa Rosalie of the Maple Leaf Line, which cleared on Tuesday night for Swansea and Dunkirk, returned to port yesterday with 12 of the crew of 41 locked in the forecastle and nine armed men from the U. S. revenue cutters Golden Gate and McCullough on guard at the hatchways.

Capt. Thomas Pritchard said that shortly after he had put to sea nine of his firemen threw down their shovels, asserting that when they signed in England they had agreed to work shifts of four hours with 20 hours off, but in point of fact had sometimes been on duty 16 hours at a stretch. Capt. Pritchard anchored for the night eight miles out.

Yesterday morning the engineers and oilers got up steam enough to get back to port, but when the captain ordered the anchor weighed three of the sailors joined the mutinous firemen. The captain and his officers got up the anchor.

MOURNED HAMILTON SAILOR WALKS INTO HIS HOME

IN TIME FOR "HIS FUNERAL"

While Family of John Thompson Were Grouped Around Corpse Which They Identified as His, the Real Man Enters and Turns Sorrow to Joy—Remarkable Resemblance Between Two Men

HAMILTON, Nov. 20.—To walk into his home where the members of his family were gathered about a casket that was supposed to contain his dead body, which had been cast up by the waters of Lake Huron, following the storm of last week, was the remarkable experience that befell John Thompson, 422 North John street, last evening. His appearance turned the house of mourning [illegible] the emblems of death which were in the room along with the body that was brought back from Goderich by the father Tuesday. The living son's entrance into the house where he was mourned as dead was a great shock, as the members of the family were unprepared for such a happening, but it was such a shock as they could easily bear.

On Monday Thomas Thompson received a message from his daughter at Sarnia that her brother John was aboard the steamer James Carruthers when it sank last week on Lake Huron. He at once left for Goderich, where a number of bodies from the Carruthers had been washed ashore and were in the morgue. He reached that place late at night, and was at once shown a number of bodies that lay there awaiting identification. He noticed that the toes on the foot of one of the corpses were crossed, as were his son's, and decided to further examine it. On the arm was a tattoo mark with the initials "J. T." This was identical with one on his son's arm. On the nose was a mark similar to one his son bore, and besides this there was a similarity in the teeth; his son has lost one eye tooth and two lower teeth, and these teeth were also missing from the mouth of the corpse. Lastly there was on the leg of the corpse a scar from a burn similar to a mark on his son.

With so many remarkable points of resemblance, in addition to the general appearance of the body, both in stature and features, he was convinced that it was his son. The only difference was in the hair, his son's being very dark, and that of the corpse inclined to a brown shade, but it was explained that the action of the water might cause this, and in view of all the other points of resemblance this was not seriously regarded.

Mr. Thompson made arrangements for the conveyance of the body to this city, and it arrived yesterday. After being prepared for burial it was taken home, and arrangements were made for its burial this morning. Many floral tokens were sent by friends of the family, and a number of spiritual bouquets were laid on the coffin for prayers for the repose of his soul.

About five o'clock last evening John Thompson walked into his home after having read that he was dead, and looked at the remains that were supposed to be his. The resemblance between his face and that of the corpse was striking even then, and it was not difficult to understand how the father and other members of the family were deceived. The son informed the members of his family that he had read, while in Toronto, [illegible] till yesterday, having in the meantime sent word to the family that he was alive.

He explained that he did not sail on the Carruthers, but left here on the Canada, which he left when it reached the Welland Canal. From there he made his way to Montreal, and then went back to Toronto, where he read the report of his death.

Indian Murderer Gets Fifteen Years in Penitentiary

VANCOUVER, Nov. 20.—Imprisonment for fifteen years was the sentence passed by Justice Morrison yesterday on George Wilson, the Kimsquit Indian, who was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the deaths of Chas. Wilson, Emma Wilson and George Paul on the night of Sept. 10. The convicted man had only five weeks before been released from the penitentiary on a charge of wounding Emma Wilson, when he was arrested for shooting her.

Stikine Joe, an accomplice of Wilson, who was found guilty of manslaughter of Watchy Gus and recommended to mercy by the jury, was sentenced to five years in jail.

Schmidt's Trial Postponed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—After having been called for trial yesterday, the case of Hans Schmidt, slayer of Anna Aumuller, was put over by consent of both sides until Nov. 25.

Notwithstanding his confession of the murder, Schmidt will make a fight for life, insanity being his defence. Portions of the murdered girl's body were found in the Hudson river early in September, but the greater part, including the head, has never been found.

Carried Off Hotel Cash Box.

SARNIA, Nov. 20.—The police are making a search for the thieves who rifled the telephone box at the Hotel Northern. The phone connections were cut and the instrument, as well as the cash box, was carried off by the thieves. The Hotel Northern is next door to the police station and not more than twenty feet away from the police cells. No trace of the guilty parties has so far been found.

STUDENTS ON A RAMPAGE

Larkin's Meeting in London is Scene of Wild Disorder

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The first appearance as an orator in London of James Larkin, head of the Transport Workers' Union of Dublin, or King Larkin, as he is now dubbed by his adherents here, led to wild scenes of disorder at Albert Hall last night, where several thousand people had gathered to hear him.

When Larkin was liberated a week ago from Mountjoy Prison, where he was serving a seven-months' term for sedition, he announced that he was going to England "to raise the fiery cross," and he predicted a general strike throughout Great Britain. There was much interest therefore in what he might say last night.

A large body of students from the colleges connected with London University made an organized attempt to upset the meeting, and fierce rioting both outside and inside the hall occurred.

A large force of police was requisitioned, and free fights occurred.

Many persons were injured before the meeting was able to proceed, for the students successfully stormed the entrance and gained admission to the floor of the hall. There, further fighting took place, and sticks and umbrellas were freely used. Fireworks were let off amid scenes of pandemonium, and for a time there was danger of panic. The organist continued playing, however, and the audience began singing socialist songs, to which the students responded by singing "God Save the King" and "Rule Britannia."

When order was partially restored, Larkin went on with his speech, which was mainly devoted to a denunciation of the Government in connection with the Dublin strike. The leader of the Transport Workers showed himself to be master of a rough discursive style of eloquence.

STEAMER AGROUND

Mapleton Goes Ashore on Drummond Island in the Fog

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 20.—In the heavy fog Tuesday night the steamer Mapleton, upbound, went ashore on Drummond Island. Word was sent to the owners from Detour yesterday morning and a tug was ordered from the Soo. The Mapleton is loaded with cement for Fort William. She will have to be lightered.

Nearly all steamers recently released from groundings in this vicinity are still here. The Hartwell is lying at the Algoma Steel Co.'s dock, unloading her cargo of ore. The Hutchison expects to get away to-day. The Nottingham will also leave to-day, if steamers can be procured to tow her down.

The Pontiac left yesterday afternoon for Duluth.

It is probable that the Major will be abandoned by her owners as soon as her cargo of coal is discharged. Examination reveals that her injuries are too serious to consider repairing.

Convict Legally Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A man [illegible] wife may remarry without divorce or annulment proceedings, according to an opinion handed down by Supreme Court Justice Maddox in Brooklyn yesterday.

In so deciding he issued a writ of mandamus directing the marriage license bureau to grant a license to Mrs. Mary Gargan, a school teacher. Her husband, John, was sent to Sing Sing for second degree murder with a maximum sentence of life. She will now marry William Weisheimer, a lithographer.

The court held that even though Gargan were pardoned his marital rights would not be restored.

Gen. Weyler Resigns Governorship.

MADRID, Nov. 20.—Capt. Valeriano Weyler of Cuban fame, yesterday resigned the governorship of the Province of Catalonia on the ground that he was a Liberal in politics and disagreed with the policy of the present Conservative Spanish Government.

The general is very popular in Catalonia and attempts were made to induce him to withdraw his resignation, but without success.

Insuring Government Employes.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The Government has decided to take out industrial accident policies for its employes in the grain elevators at Port Arthur.

Saving, Though Millionaire's Son.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Walter Scott Hughes, student at "Tech" and son of Wm. H. Hughes, a millionaire importer, of Milton, is setting an example of economy. He walks seven miles from his home to college. Recently he bought at a five and ten cent store pans and pots to cook his own lunches. Hughes gives away, however, more money to student philanthropies and lends more to friends than any other student.

Sixth Arson Conviction.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The sixth conviction in the "arson ring" prosecution was obtain here yesterday when Isaac La Bow was found guilty of hiring John Danies, a confessed incendiary, to set fire to La Bow's furniture store. Joseph Clarke, a public fire insurance adjuster, who was tried with La Bow, was acquitted.

MEXICAN INSURRECTOS ARE GROWING IN STRENGTH

British Warships Are Ordered to Vera Cruz Without Delay But Washington Rather Welcomes the Move Foreign Residents of Mexico City Are Banding Together for Their Own Defence

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—With the fall yesterday of Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas, the Mexican rebels, though not concertedly, now control or dominate fifteen out of thirty states and territories in the troubled Republic of Mexico. The states dominated by the rebels, however, cover nearly three-fourths of the entire area of the country and contain over two-thirds of the nation's population. Among the states controlled by the rebels are the richest in the republic.

It is impossible, of course, to enumerate accurately the status of each state, but those now dominated by the Constitutionalists, as the rebels call themselves, follow: Sonora, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Tamaulipas, San Luis Potosi, Durango, Lower California (Territory), Sinoloa, Zacatecas, Queretaro, Michoacan, Pueblo, Lower Vera Cruz, Tabasco, Chiapas.

Gen. Zapata, who refuses to have himself considered as a part of any revolutionary movement other than his own, holds forth in Pueblo and Lower Vera Cruz. Gen. Villa, after his riotous success in the capture of Juarez and the capture of Victoria, displays evidence of independence of Carranza, but Villa has not yet announced himself openly as favoring a break with Carranza.

News that three big British cruisers had been ordered to proceed from West Indian ports to Vera Cruz created some comment in official circles, where it was recalled that recent London despatches had indicated that the British Government would entrust the interests of their subjects in Mexico to the United States. It was pointed out, however, that the Washington Government had welcomed the appearance of foreign warships in Mexican waters, and that the gathering of British, German, Japanese, and French vessels off the coast might indicate to Gen. Huerta a growing lack of confidence on the part of the powers in his ability longer to maintain himself and insure the safety of foreigners in Mexico.

Foreigners Planning for Defence.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—Speculation as to what President Wilson intends to do in the face of the Mexican difficulty was increased yesterday by the knowledge that the American charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy, had received new instructions from Washington to wait at his post for further instructions and that important matters were under consideration.

The foreign colonies in the Mexican capital are preparing to defend themselves in the event of disturbances in the city. Both Sir Lionel Carden and Admiral Von Hintze, the British and German Ministers, respectively, have suggested to their nationals the advisability of perfecting some sort of defence organization.

No such advice has been given to the Americans, but committees are quietly working out a plan of defence, embracing the American, British, German and Austrian residents.

Britain Sends Warships.

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, Nov. 20.—The British cruiser squadron in West Indian waters Tuesday night received peremptory orders to proceed to Vera Cruz, and the vessels sailed at midnight.

The British cruiser squadron consists of the three armored cruisers Suffolk, Berwick, and Lancaster, and is commanded by Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, whose flagship is the Suffolk. The three vessels are of the same type, displacing 9,800 tons. They each carry an armament of fourteen 6-inch, eight 12-pounder, and three 3-pounder guns.

Great Britain decided to send the warships to Mexican waters from Barbados in order to protect British subjects should the necessity arise. The decision was arrived at by the British Government as a result of the general news published in the press of the United States as to conditions prevailing in Mexico, and of the advance of the Constitutionalists in the vicinity of the Vera Cruz Railway.

AN INCENDIARY AT TRENTON

Jury Say Building Was Deliberatly Set on Fire

TRENTON, Nov. 20.—The fire which occurred at the Baby Carriage Factory being unmistakably of incendiary origin the Council ordered an investigation. The jury brought in a verdict of that the building was deliberately set on fire and recommended the Council to make a thorough investigation.

BAZAAR OF LADIES' AID IS IN PROGRESS

Market Hall is Transformed by the Ladies of St. James' Church

The bazaar being held in the market hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of St. James' Church is found to be a grand success. To-day's dinner was the first meal served, and while there wasn't a very large number present, it was fairly encouraging for the first day. Where are tables set for some 200 people and no doubt that number will be exceeded to-night and to-morrow. The kitchen and dining room is under the supervision of the president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Wilson, and she is ably assisted by other members.

Besides the very artistic decorations which adorn the walls and ceiling, the booths, which are situated to the left of the main doors, have a very attractive appearance. The three booths encountered on entering are adorned with fancy work all prepared for the bazaar by Miss C Green's Young Ladies' Bible Class, Miss Leader's Girls' Own Class, and by some of the members of the Ladies' Aid. These booths are in charge of Miss Green and her class, Miss Leader and her class and Mrs. Robinson.

The next booth is an exceptionally large one, and is divided into two sections. One part is a lunch room where luncheon is served at all times. The other is a lunch counter where fancy baking is sold. The baking for this booth was done by the Ladies' Aid, and the booth is in charge of Mrs. Rawlins, Mrs. Woods, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. McIntyre. Beside this large booth stands the candy booth which is tended by Mrs. (Rev.) Clarry, Mrs. Brown and Mrs Winch.

The last booth contains all the various articles that go to make up a toilet outfit, including talcum powder, shaving soap, etc. This booth is looked after by the Y.M.B.C.

The bazaar will be continued to-night and all day to-morrow, closing to-morrow night. There will be a grand concert to-night given by various members and selections by the band.

BRITISH CONSULATE

Those who listened to Mr. J. Joyce-Broderick at the Canadian Club last evening would realize, if they had not done so before, what an immense advantage Canada had in the commercial world by being under the British flag. There is little doubt but that, next to the missionary, the British Consulate has been the greatest disseminator of British ideas, and certainly the pioneer of British commerce in remote places of the earth.

He is the King's representative, and protects the interests of the subjects of the King, whether they be English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh, Australian, Canadian, Indian, African—he is their guardian. His residence is the citidal of refuge for every citizen of the British Empire whenever he needs guidance or protection in his travels or sojourn in foreign countries.

The words of Mr. Broderick, which are printed in another column, are worthy of close study by all commercial men who are interested in the development of Canadian industries. The resources of Eastern Ontario, to go no further afield, have not been fully realized, and where attempts have been made to develop these, the efforts have been so weak or amaturish that faith has been lost in the vast possibilities that lie practically under our very noses.

If Canadian capitalists do not take up this development, Americans will; and in fact they are already doing so at many points. The annexation of Canada has already begun in [illegible] minerals are [illegible] exploited by Americ[illegible] [illegible]ers and manufacturers and the profits, which are in some cases enormous, are going over the line. This is not as it should be, Canada and its wealth should be reserved for Canadians, and when we waken up to this drainage of our resources we will perhaps do something to stop it—if it is not too late.

WHINING POLITICIANS

The Montreal Telegraph says Conservatives ought to be glad that the charges of corruption in the recent Chateauguay election are to be investigated in open court. Corruption is not a charge that any party should be proud of, and no doubt the Conservative party had its Judases. That the Liberal party has been free from sin is due, of course, to its super-divine origin. While admitting the possibility of corruption on the Conservative side in elections, the Conservatives have generally accepted their licking with a good grace. But the Liberals have invariably refused to believe that anyone should vote against them save from some ulterior motive, or because they were low-down, intellectual and moral degenerates. They have whined and yelped like whipped curs at every defeat, and raised such a racket that every old woman has looked out of the window to see what poor animal was being ill-used.

Let us have clean elections, but let us have less puling and whining in public. We are men, and not children quarreling over our games and toys. The impression one gets from listening to the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is that of a spoilt boy, beaten at a game of marbles, sitting in the roadway and howling to the passers by: "He didn't play fair. He stole my Chateauguay—boo-oo!"

PLUMAGE

The Daily Ontario makes the following sage remarks on fine feathers and their value in the public life of Birdom:

"In wearing the feathers of birds on their hats, the ladies should consider not only the pain that the bird undergoes in extracting them but the humiliation it suffers afterwards. Maybe some energetic, intelligent bird has been an honor to the community for several years, and perhaps as a reward for his unselfish acts they have elected him notary public. The time has arrived when he might strut about and 'be somebody' when out comes his tail feathers, making him the laughing stock of the town."

All of which is very true and contains a parable. How much after all depends upon plumage in society. How much plumage is borrowed—and how much more is stolen! Most of us are very plain birds, and some of us do not spread ourselves enough when we are abroad.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In these notes yesterday we referred to two auto accidents in which a boy and girl were the victims. To-day we have to record another which occurred in New York in which Dr. Ross, the Presbyterian divine, was knocked down and killed. The auto is no respector of persons. Some day we shall wake up and realize that these auto accidents are not essential to civilization and that they can be stopped.

Stefansson the Arctic explorer has managed to get himself lost sooner than was expected. There must be some strange fascination about those white silences.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—At the C.P. R. live stock market offerings this morning were 2100 cattle, 2000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 500 calves. A firm feeling prevailed in the market for all grades of cattle owing to the continued good demand for shipping cattle from American buyers. Bulls sold at from $4.25 to $4.50 and cows at $3.40 to $3.50 per 100 pounds for canning. Local buyers took butchers' stock freely at prices ranging from $7.25 to $7.50 for best, while fairly good stock brought $6.50 to $7, and the lower grades $5 to $6 per 100 pounds. Butchers' cows brought from $4 to $5.50, and bulls from $4.75 to $6 per 100 pounds.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for small meats. The supply of sheep and lambs was somewhat larger than on Monday, and the demand was good. Prices were firmly maintained at the recent advance, with trading active. Western lambs sold at $7.50 to $7.75 and eastern at $7 to $7.25, while sheep brought from $4.50 to $5 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves was quieter than it has been lately, owing to the smaller receipts. Grass-fed stock for shipment to the United States sold freely at 3 3-4 to 4 1-4c, and milk-fed for local consumption at from 5 1-2 to 7 1-2c per pound. In spite of the stronger advices from Toronto on hogs an easier feeling developed in the local market today on account of the increased offerings and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60, and straight lots including rough stock at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

English Eddie wasted no time.

"Now, look here," he said rapidly. "I've got the greatest game in the world. Two years ago a set of Gothic tapestries worth $300,000 and a set of Fragonard panels worth nearly as much more were plucked from a chateau in France and smuggled into this country."

"Are them things really worth that much?" [illegible]

"Sometimes more," Mary answered. "Morgan has a set of Gothic tapestries worth half a million dollars."

Griggs went on with his account.

"About a month ago the things I was telling you of were hung in the library of a millionaire in this city." He [illegible] desk and leaned forward, lowering his voice almost to a whisper as he stated his plan.

"Let's go after them. They were smuggled, mind you, and no matter what happens he can't squeal. What do you say?"

Garson shot a piercing glance at Mary.

"It's up to her," he said. Griggs regarded Mary eagerly as she sat with eyes downcast.

Mary shook her head decisively. "It's out of our line," she declared.

"I don't see any easier way to get half a million," Griggs said aggressively.

"If it were fifty millions it would make no difference. It's against the law."

"Oh, I know all that, of course," Griggs returned impatiently. "But if you can"—

"My friends and I never do anything that's illegal. Thank you for coming to us, Mr. Griggs, but we can't go in, and there's an end of the matter."

"But wait a minute," English Eddie expostulated. "You see, this chap Gilder is"—

"Gilder?" Mary exclaimed questioningly.

"Yes. You know who he is—the dry goods man."

Mary, however, had regained her self control, and her voice was tranquil again as she replied:

"I know; but, just the same, it's illegal, and I won't touch it. That's all there is to it."

"But half a million!" Griggs exclaimed disconsolately. "There's a stake worth playing for. Think of it!" He turned pleadingly to Garson. "Half a million, Joe!"

"English Eddie" Griggs.

The telephone rang, and Mary excused herself. The instant she was out of the room Griggs turned to Garson anxiously.

"It's a cinch, Joe," he pleaded. "I've got a plan of the house." He drew a paper from his breast pocket and handed it to the forger, who studied it with intent, avaricious eyes.

"It looks easy," Garson agreed.

"It is easy. What do you say?"

"I promised Mary never to"—

"But a chance like this! Anyhow come around to the back room at Blinkey's tonight and we'll have a talk. Will you?"

"What time?"

"Make it early, say 9."

"I'll come," Garson replied half guiltily. And in the same moment Mary re-entered.

Griggs rose and spoke with an air of regret.

"It's 'follow the leader,'" he said, "and since you are against it that settles it."

CHAPTER X.

Garson's Noiseless Gun.

SOMETHING of what was in his mind was revealed in Garson's first speech after Griggs' going.

"That's a mighty big stake he's playing for."

"And a big chance he's taking!" Mary retorted. "No, Joe, we don't want any of that. We'll play a game that's safe and sure."

The words recalled to the forger weird forebodings that had been troubling him throughout the day.

"It's sure enough," he stated, "but is it safe?"

"What do you mean?"

Garson walked to and fro nervously as he answered.

"S'pose the bulls get tired of you

Inspector Burke.

putting it over on 'em and try some rough work?"

"Don't worry, Joe. I know a way to stop it."

"Well, so far as that goes, so do I," the forger said, with significant emphasis.

"Just what do you mean by that?" Mary demanded, suspiciously.

"For rough work," he said, "I have this." He took a magazine pistol from his pocket. It was of an odd shape, with a barrel longer than usual and a bellshaped contrivance attached to the muzzle.

"No, no, Joe," Mary cried. "None of that—ever!"

"Pooh!" The forger exclaimed. "Even if I used it, they would never get on to me. See this?" He pointed at the strange contrivance on the muzzle.

"What is it? I have never seen anything like that before."

"Of course you haven't. I'm the first man in the business to get one, and I'll bet on it. I keep up with the times." He was revealing that fundamental egotism which is the characteristic of all his kind. "That's one of the new Maxim silencers. With smokeless powder in the cartridges and the silencer on, I can make a shot from my coat pocket, and you wouldn't even know it had been done. And I'm some shot, believe me."

"Impossible!" Mary ejaculated.

"No, it ain't. Here, wait, I'll show you."

"Good gracious, not here!" Mary exclaimed in alarm. "We would have the whole place down on us."

Garson chuckled.

"You just watch that dinky little vase at the table across the room there. Tain't very valuable, is it?"

"No," Mary answered.

In the same instant, while still her eyes were on the vase, it fell in a cascade of shivered glass to the table and floor. She had heard no sound, she saw no smoke. Perhaps, there had been a faintest clicking noise. She stared dumfounded for a few seconds, then turned her bewildered face toward Garson, who was grinning in high enjoyment.

"Neat little thing, ain't it?" the man asked, exultantly.

"Where did you get it?" Mary asked.

"In Boston, last week. And between you and me, Mary, it's the only model, and it sure is a corker."

That night in the back room of Blinkey's English Eddie and Garson sat with their heads close together over a table.

"A chance like this," Griggs was saying, "a chance that will make a fortune for all of us."

"It sounds good," Garson admitted, wistfully.

"Well," urged Griggs, "what do you say?"

"How would we split it?"

"Three ways would be right," Griggs answered. "One to me, one to you and one to be divided up among the others."

Garson brought his fist down on the table with a force that made the glasses jingle.

"You're on," he said, strongly.

"Fine!" Griggs declared, and the two men shook hands. "Now, I'll get"—

"Get nothing!" Garson interrupted. "I'll get my own men. Chicago Red is in town. So is Dacey, with perhaps a couple of others of the right sort. I'll get them and we'll turn the trick tomorrow night."

"That's the stuff," Griggs agreed, greatly pleased.

But a sudden shadow fell on the face of Garson. He bent closer to his companion and spoke with a fierce intensity that brooked no denial.

"She must never know."

Griggs nodded understandingly.

Mary had gone to her bedroom for a nap. She was not in the least surprised that Dick had not yet returned, though he had mentioned half an hour. At the best there were many things that might detain him—his father's absence from the office, difficulties in making arrangements for his projected honeymoon trip abroad—which would never occur—or the like. At the worst there was a chance of finding his father promptly, and of that father as promptly taking steps to prevent the son from ever again seeing the woman who had so indiscreetly married him.

Yet somehow Mary could not believe that her husband would yield to such paternal coercion. Rather, she was sure that he would prove loyal to her whom he loved through every trouble. At the thought a certain wistfulness pervaded her and a poignant regret that this particular man should have been the one chosen of fate to be entangled within her mesh of revenge. There throbbed in her a heart tormenting realization that there were in life possibilities infinitely more splendid than the joy of vengeance. She would not confess the truth even to her inmost soul, but the truth was there and set her atremble with vague fears.

She had slept, perhaps, a half hour when Fannie awakened her.

"It's a man named Burke," she explained as her mistress lay blinking. "And there's another man with him. They said they must see you."

By this time Mary was wide awake, for the name of Burke, the police inspector, was enough to startle her out of drowsiness.

She got up, slipped into a teagown, bathed her eyes in cologne, dressed her hair a little and went into the drawing room, where the two men had been waiting for something more than a quarter of an hour—to the violent indignation of both.

"Oh, here you are, at last!" the big, burly man cried as she entered.

"Yes, inspector," Mary replied pleasantly, as she advanced into the room. She gave a glance toward the other visitor, who was of a slenderer form, with a thin, keen face, and recognized him instantly as Demarest, who had taken part against her as the lawyer for the store at the time of her trial, and who was now district attorney. She went to the chair at the desk and seated herself in a leisurely fashion that increased the indignation of the fuming inspector. She did not ask her self invited guests to sit.

"To whom do I owe the pleasure of this visit, inspector?" she remarked coolly. It was noticeable that she said whom and not what, as if she understood perfectly that the influence of some person brought him.

"I have come to have a few quiet words with you," the inspector declared. Mary disregarded him, and turned to the other man.

Milady's Mirror

Fine Skin Tonic.

Exercise is a splendid skin tonic. A brisk walk, no matter if in the rain, will freshen the complexion, even as it freshens the flowers, and a simple aperient will do wonders for a muddy skin. It remains for all women to preserve such beauty as they have and to cure the defects which are peculiar to them or that time has wrought. Every skin is different and must be treated accordingly, and it takes a reasoning woman to experiment carefully and find out the proper method of treatment for her skin.

Lack of sleep ages a woman possibly more than anything else. Most women who are inclined to be nervous require from eight to nine hours. Six or seven hours of rest suffice for others. The hours before midnight contain the magic wherein beauty is dispensed freely. One hour before 12 will do more good than two afterward.

Sleep without a pillow, if possible, or a very small one of couch size.

The feet should be higher than the head. This makes the flow of blood over the heart even. Sleep on your right side, with the limbs outstretched and the arms down at the side rather than over the head, which, it is said, encourages bad dreams.

A clam shell placed inside the kettle will prevent the formation of lime.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Toothbrush.

The daily treatment of the teeth consists of washing and brushing. The toothbrush is a very important instrument, which should be sterilized both before and after using. As soon as the bristles wear or begin to drop out it is time for a new brush. You really need a new brush once a month. In selecting your toothbrush remember that it is not simply to rub or polish the enamel or remove the food from between the teeth, but it is also intended to stimulate the gums. Therefore it should not be too stiff.

Proved He Wasn't Dead.

M. Augustin Jeourel, who has just received the military medal for gallantry at Gravelotte during the Franco-Prussian war, has been forty-three years in convincing the authorities that he is alive. He was badly wounded in a bayonet charge and was registered as killed on the roll of the regiment. When he regained consciousness he found himself in a German hospital. When he applied to the minister of war for the military medal he was informed that he was dead, killed at Gravelotte by a Prussian bullet.

Boy Miners In England.

More than 10,000 boys under sixteen years of age were injured in mines in Great Britain last year in such a way as to disable them for more than a week. There are about a million coal mine workers altogether, one worker in every seven being killed or injured last year.

BIG MONEY IN ALSIKE

Farmer Receivse Cheque at $1081.03 for His Crop

There must be something in the cry of back to the farm, when a tiller of the soil can harvest a crop of alsike, deliver it to his customer and take a trip to the bank with a cheque for $1,081.03.

Such is the experience of Mr. John Curtin, who has a farm one mile from Lindsay. Mr. Curtin is recognized as a successful grower of alsike. His yield of alsike clover seed just received by Mr. George Mather, averaged when cleaned, about six bushels to the acre, and it was probably the largest crop ever marketed in Peterborough.

AN INTERVIEW WITH MRS. WELLS

Give the Young People Social Work She Says

Toronto Star.

Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, the Los Angeles policewoman, doesn't believe in the thou-shalt-not method of education, legislation, and law enforcement. She holds that a positive constructive command is worth columns of police-negation, and that then when you take the red hot poker away from the baby, you've got to supply something equally shiny in its place.

"Do I approve of tango teas?" said Mrs. Wells, as she talked to The Star before taking luncheon with the Local Council of Women. "I wish you wouldn't put the question that way. I work among women who do things, women who are interested in alleviating social conditions which are found to be unjust and oppressive. Such women are too busy to dance in the afternoon."

ELIMINATE THE TANGO.

"The reason a girl flies from one excitement to another is because of her exuberant energy," Mrs. Wells said, "this isn't to her discredit, nor can you expect eighteen to direct its own activities into constructive channels. But if the mother, the social worker, can get hold of this little dynamo of power and sunshine the world will not only be the better off, but the girl herself will have the same pleasure together with ever so much more satisfaction. An effort is made to enlist the sympathies of the college girl, but I don't think enough attention is paid to her after she leaves school."

Mrs. Wells is on her way from Buffalo, where she recently addressed the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs and the Consumers' League. This latter organization, in existence for 25 years, aims to provide right factory conditions for the worker, granting its coveted white label to those manufacturers that observe its regulations.

WEARINESS GENERATES POISON

"There is every opportunity to give teas and exhibits as exclusive as one could wish, with the Consumers' League as the central idea," Mrs. Wells said. "This wouldn't be the pure waste of time and energy that the objectless social function has become, and the young people would have just as good a time. There are also infinite vistas for the student of sociology in such books as Josephine Goldmark's 'Efficiency and Fatigue,' where the reader gets to know that weariness, increased beyond the normal wholesome tire that craves food and rest, generates an active poison in the blood that injures both the worker and his work."

SOME YARDS NOT CLEAN

Sanitary Inspector to Get After the Big Firms

"Things are very quiet in my line at present," remarked Sanitary Inspector Spence this morning to a Review reporter.

"The complaints of the citizens are still coming in, regarding the garbage collectors, and they certainly keep me rather busy," Mr. Spence added.

During the past few weeks the milk has been found to be very good and the Inspector is of the opinion that in the future the consumers will have no cause for complaint, as for some time past the milkmen have been supplying a good quality of the lacteal fluid.

"How are the yards," was the next query. "Well, I am going to get after some of these big firms and make them clean up their yards and put in some eave troughs. The water pours down off the roof into the yards, making a most filthy yard and clogging the drain service."

The typhoid fever epidemic has reached an end as only one more case has been reported. All the patients down with the fever are doing nicely.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual report on the sanitary conditions in the city during the past year will be presented at the next meeting of the Board of Health. Owing to the numerous other duties including the garbage system, Mr. Spence says that he has been unable to do so much in regard to the interior inspection of the houses as last year. All houses in the city will be thoroughly inspected this coming winter.

Afterwards the gathering adjourned to the basement of the church, where the ladies served refreshments.

RHEUMA Acts on Kidneys, Liver and Blood the First Day—and Out Goes Uric Acid Poison

Rheumatic sufferers astonished;;;

Anybody can afford to pay 50cts. to get rid of terrible Rheumatism, Sciatica or Gout, and that's all RHEUMA costs at Warne Drug Co. and they say if it doesn't do all that is claimed for it, money back.

It's wonderful how speedily this simple remedy takes hold and how the sore muscles limber up and the swollen joints come down to normal. Make no mistake. RHEUMA costs but little, but it's the best remedy you can find to drive Rheumatic poison from the system and bring back health to misery-racked bodies.

"I had Rheumatism for a long while, and tried many medicines, but was not cured until I used RHEUMA [illegible] RHEUMA too, high- [illegible] stiff and [illegible] remedy, as I believe it will effect a permanent cure in any case." — C. B. Lanham, Sattes, W. Va., April 27, 1912.

BECOMES CHIEF CLERK

CIVIL SECRETARY TO GOVERNORS-GENERAL IS PROMOTED.

Arthur F. Sladen, Who Has Been Right Hand Man to Lord Minto, Earl Grey, and the Duke of Connaught, Now Combines Former Office With That Left Vacant by Retirement of Charles Jones.

Arthur F. Sladen, who has been appointed chief clerk of the Governor-General's office, is the eldest son of the late Col. Sladen, of the Royal Artillery, Ripple Court, Kent, England, and was born at Woolwich in 1866. He was educated at Haileybury College and the Royal Military College, England. He entered the Royal Artillery in 1884 as a lieutenant, but resigned two years later and engaged for a time in fruit farming and entered as a clerk in the Governor-General's office in 1891.

ARTHUR F. SLADEN.

He has served as private civil secretary under Lord Minto, Lord Grey and the Duke of Connaught and will continue to act in that capacity as well as become chief clerk in succession to Charles Jones, who has been superannuated.

In 1891 he married Miss Katherine Hume Powell, the second daughter of the late Sheriff Powell, of Carleton County. In 1911 Mr. Sladen was created a C. M. G.

He is a member of the Rideau Club, the Ottawa Golf Club and is very popular both in official and social circles at the capital.

Her Relatives Object.

Sarah Bernhardt is in trouble about a legacy of $50,000 left to her by an English woman admirer, Miss Lily Scorer. Miss Scorer had been infatuated with Mme. Bernhardt's genius for many years, and every week, wherever the great actress might happen to be a bunch of carnations, her favorite flower, was sent by Miss Scorer.

Mme. Bernhardt used to see her friend three or four times a year, and on these occasions Miss Scorer, who habitually dressed in black, wore a white costume and prepared herself for the interview as for a most sacred religious rite.

A few weeks ago Miss Scorer died leaving everything, including a freehold house in St. John's Wood, to Mme. Bernhardt. The will is being contested by cousins of the dead woman on the ground of mental incapacity.

On hearing of the bequest, Mme. Bernhardt immediately approached the relatives of the testator and offered to let them retain the freehold house and give $2,000 to the testator's servant, but their reply was a demand that she [illegible]

Use of Pronouns In Rural England.

People in the midlands use pronouns in a very perverse fashion. I once overheard a woman describing a quarrel between two other women, and her final comment was literally as follows: "If 'er'd said to 'er what 'er said to 'er 'er'd 'ave killed 'er or 'er 'er." Which, being translated. "If she had said to me what she said to the other woman I'd have killed her or she'd have killed me." Another example of this dislocation of the pronoun was heard by a friend of mine. A woman was calling to her children, and a group of youngsters passing by stood to listen. One of them said: "'Er bain't a-callin' we. Us don't belong to she!"—Manchester Guardian.

Watered Milk.

"Farmers," said the fair city visitor, "are just as dishonest as the city milkman."

"How d'ye make that out?" asked the farmer's wife

"This morning," said the girl, accusingly, "with my own eyes I saw your hired man water the cows just before he milked them."—Exchange.

THE SERVICES IN KNOX CHURCH

A Modern Application to the Prodigal Son

The meetings in Knox Church are drawing to a close and with each night there is shown an increased interest. To-night and Friday night will end the series. Last evening before a good congregation Mr. Woodside unfolded the story of the Prodigal Son, and as he made it live with new and modern application it made its old time appeal to all present. The Botherhood Choir is to assist in the closing meetings and this will add great strength to the musical part of the services.

HEN LAID 201 EGGS

Another egg laying record is reported from Oregon. In a pen of fifty hens averaging around the 200 egg-per-year mark, and exceedingly industrious biddy laid 291 eggs in twelve months. Two other members of the flock are reported close to the record hen, one of them having a good chance to set a new record with already 278 eggs to her credit and almost a month longer to go. The average hen lays 70 eggs per year—hardly enough to pay for her feed, say nothing about care. The surprising part of it is that she is allowed to continue her place in the flock while other individuals are perhaps done twice as much as the rest. Records in themselves are worth very little, but the lessons they suggest are very valuable to the intelligent and practical farm man and woman. We cannot all have 300-egg hens, but we can have considerably better than the average if we make up our minds to it and go after them by the proper method.

CO-OPERATIVE STORE MEETING WITH SUCCESS

President Begley Says They Get All the Goods They Can Handle

Mayor Carter of Guelph Tells of the Co-operative Movement

The entertainment held by the Co-operative Society in the W.O.W. Hall last night was a splendid success. The hall was packed to the doors and considerable enthusiasm was created by the address of Mayor Carter, of Guelph. Several vocal and instrumental numbers were given to the enjoyment of the big audience, and after the address refreshments were served.

President Joseph Begley, was chairman and in a short address he urged that the members of the Society give the store a better patronage. There had been a steady fight made against the store, he said, and the opposition was fighting on the quiet. "When they came out in the open, they did us considerable good," remarked the President.

But they were overcoming the obstacles and were going to keep on winning. Without the backing of the members, the directors could do nothing. "You must come to the store oftener. We are getting all the goods we can handle. We may not buy to the best advantage, still we're getting the goods, and if you stay with us we will be able to buy equally as well as other merchants."

In introducing Mayor Carter, the President said he had been a co-operator all his life, and his father also had been a co-operator.

"Its surprising what a few men in earnest can do," said Mayor Carter in his opening remarks. Then he proceeded to deal with the subject of Co-operation in a general way. He paid a tribute to the wives and mothers, and said the men were not a patch on the women who had to spend the little money that was given them. He doubted very much the result, if the men had to do the financing. If the store was to be a success it would be due to the women.

As to debt, he said he would sooner live on oatmeal and herrings than go into debt. "If you want to be a real man or woman," he urged, "keep out of debt."

He told of how a miners' strike had been won for the men because they had co-operative stores. He claimed that the Englishmen and Scotchmen, the latter especially had millions and millions of money, while some of the people before him were in debt. The ideal point in co-operation was to keep out of debt.

Five honest men had as much right as 500 men to go into business, and, said the speaker, "you don't want clever men, but honest men."

Mayor Carter brought out many points in a spirited manner and some of his remarks were in reference to the success of the co-operative store in Guelph. He told of the fights that had been won, and he said that the workingmen in Peterborough could do the same if they remained loyal to their store.

Consider the coal question when you buy a furnace. The coal required to heat a home soon costs much more than the original cost of the furnace, and a little thought will show how to reduce this item fully one-seventh.

The Hecla Furnace saves coal by preventing waste. The heat cannot escape up the chimney. The fire-pot has steel flanges (our patent) which radiate the heat very rapidly—so rapidly that the fire-pot never gets red hot. The heat goes to the living rooms and the smoke flue is always cool. By actual test this steel-flanged fire-pot saves one ton of coal in seven—and it is guaranteed not to burn out.

By all means see this furnace. Get our book on healthful heating. We can prove this saving, and we can show you also how the Hecla is proof against leaking gas or dust. Write to-day.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. COOK, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

At the Complaint Desk

An Interview That Had a Curious Sequel.

By KATE AUSTIN.

For the third time Marian Macrea rose from the uncomfortable settee that faced the complaint desk and approached the young woman seated behind the wide window, who was talking to the checker.

"Of course it gave her a good chance to let us all know what nice white arms she has, but my mother 'd see me in my grave before she'd let me go to a ball in any such costume as that."

"Will you kindly ascertain whether they have found my parcel yet?" interrupted Marian, tapping the desk lightly with the tips of her gloved fingers.

The young person flung her an impatient look.

"What parcel?"

"The one about which I inquired at intervals for the past half hour." [illegible] girl in bored tones.

"You took my name twice and telephoned the delivery department, and I am waiting for their report. Why do you not call them again and see whether the parcel has been located?"

"Say, do you think I want to get the delivery boys down on me? If they find it they'll tell me quick enough"—

"If"— echoed Marian, her delicate face flushing under the girl's cool impertinence.

"Well, I'll take your name and address and drop you a postal when we find it."

"Indeed, you will not. I want it now," said Marian, and she walked away from the window with head high and nostrils quivering.

"Wonder if she's going down into the subcellar to get it," giggled the young person to the checker. "It is funny how some swells think they can come in here and run this store. I guess she doesn't know we've got a system here."

Then while the girl continued her account of the fancy dress ball Marian crossed to the main aisle, found a floor walker and asked to be directed to the superintendent of employees. Five minutes later she was ushered into the presence of a smooth faced, square shouldered chap who looked as if he had received his training on the foot ball gridiron rather than as stock boy in a big department store.

Richard Burnside had risen from the lowest ranks in the store where he was now superintendent, studying practical business methods by day and physical culture and English branches at the Y. M. C. A. rooms by night.

Now he stood beside his desk, Marian Macrea's card bent between his fingers. He looked the slender, graceful figure over with the keen eye of a man accustomed to seeking good material for his staff and decided that she must be a reporter or magazine writer hunting information about the condition of the working girl. He had met many such since he had become superintendent.

"What can we do for you, Miss Macrea?" he inquired, offering her a seat.

"I merely called to ask you whether your complaint department had been organized for the convenience of your customers or to browbeat them so effectually that they will endure almost any inconvenience rather than make complaint?"

Richard Burnside sat down rather suddenly. This was not just what he had expected.

Very deliberately, but convincingly, Marian told her story, from the indifference of the clerk who had first waited on her to the impertinence of the young woman at the complaint desk. When she had finished Burnside leaned forward, his hands clasped between his knees, his face boyish no longer, but seamed deeply with lines of anxiety.

"Miss Macrea, you have been treated outrageously, and so have many of our customers, and I, the superintendent of this store, cannot find a remedy, because I cannot handle women employees. I can handle the boys in this line because I know boys, but the indifferent, the insolent woman employee is beyond me."

He glanced up to meet Marian's sympathetic glance. Impulsively he told her of his humble beginning, the pride with which he had accepted his new work and his many vexations and trials with incompetent help.

"I have had five girls at that complaint desk, each less satisfactory than the one before her. If I could just find a girl with judgment, discretion and good manners—but you can't expect to find such a girl for $12 a week, can you?"

His big gray eyes were lifted to Marian's brown ones.

She laughed a queer, chuckling little laugh that seemed to fairly bubble up from her slender white throat.

"Do you think I would fill the bill? I would like to earn $12 a week."

"You?" gasped Burnside, his glance traveling from her neat boots to her trim tailored hat.

"Why, yes. When I came in here I never thought of such a thing, though I have been wanting a position of some sort. I believe I would know whether a woman had a just complaint or was trying to cheat the firm and I have always been complimented [illegible] patience [illegible] invalid for several years. Try [illegible] consider the proposition I can furnish references."

"I don't give a fig for references. You're engaged. Can you begin Monday? I'll put that girl back where she belongs—in the mail order department."

And that was how Marian Macrea walked out of the Barnes Bros.' store with a job in her pocket and an odd little smile playing around her lips.

Three months passed. Burnside was no longer worried about the conduct of the complaint department. In fact, he argued that the reason he dropped in to talk complaints over with its presiding head was merely as a relief after other worries. It was a pleasure to see a department run so smoothly. And all over the big store the same atmosphere was beginning to assert itself. There were weekly talks to the women clerks, at which reports from floorwalkers and complaining customers were offered; little lectures on the smoothing out of tangles and the adjustment of differences were given. The sales girls took a new view of selling goods and handling customers, and none knew that these talks were all planned out in a charming little uptown apartment, where the superintendent and the head of the complaint department gravely discussed store problems while the invalid mother forgot her own pains in listening to the new interests of her daughter.

Then came the great day when James Barnes, Sr., returned from his trip around the world. Richard Burnside had no need to give account of his stewardship. Others had done so in letters that encircled the globe, and so one bright spring morning the head of the house sat in his superintendent's office saying the sort of things that warm an employee's heart when there came a tap at the door, and a girl with soft brown hair and eyes entered the office, her hands filled with report slips.

"Mr. Barnes, I want you to know Miss Macrea, the very capable"—

But Mr. Barnes, quite apoplectic, was sparring for wind.

"Marian, what in the world! If you wanted something to do why didn't you go in for settlement work?"

Richard Burnside felt the little office spinning around as Marian crossed the room and patted the apoplectic forehead soothingly with her slender white hand.

"Dear Uncle Jimmy, do not have a stroke. With the head of the firm globe trotting and everything mother and I had in the world in this store, I felt I had a right to come in here and see that our small investment was safe. You couldn't expect Jimmy or Howard to do it when one has a new motor and the other a new yacht."

Ten minutes later Marian laid her reports on Burnside's desk and turned to leave. He held the door open for her, and as she flung him a cheery smile she stopped suddenly. His face looked old. His eyes were heavy, as if they had watched something very lovely and dear pass out of his life. She paused irresolutely and glanced over her shoulder. Mr. Barnes, Sr., was just passing through the opposite doorway into the mail order department.

"You will be up tonight, as usual? I want to talk over the question of a new rest room for the girls."

Richard Burnside's face went a shade paler, and he spoke in a voice he had never used to her before.

"Certainly, if you wish it."

"Of course I wish it." She tried to speak gayly, but her voice trembled. "Don't you understand? I want everything to go on just as it has before. Oh, why do you make it so hard for me?" His face was still stern, but she persisted. "I—I want you to tell me—what—what I would not let you say the other night—because now I know it was all for myself—don't you understand?"

She passed out like a flash and drew the door shut behind her. Richard Burnside leaned heavily against it, breathing hard, but the light of youth had come back to his eyes.

SPEEDY PITCHING.

Rapidity With Which Walter Johnson's Fast Ball Travels.

Tom Hughes, a veteran pitcher on the staff of the Senators, recently threw some interesting side lights on the work and ability of Walter Johnson, the mighty twirler who received a loving cup containing several hundred dollars in nice new ten dollar bills not long ago as a token of appreciation from the Washington fans.

"Johnson has so much speed," said Tom, "that he actually wears out three catchers' mitts in the course of a season. Study this statement over carefully and you'll see the big point. Don't worry about the gloves, for new ones can always be obtained, but think of Catcher Ainsmith, the man who usually catches Walter and is compelled to stand up to the plate and stop these miniature cannon balls. How his hands must sting each spring until he gets them broken in and toughened to the work!"

According to Hughes, there is a man in Hartford, Conn., who is employed by the ordnance department of the government and is an expert in computing the speed of projectiles. This man has estimated that Johnson's fast ball travels at the rate of 126 feet a second. Believe me, that is some tall traveling.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

AEROPLANE WING SHAPES.

One of the Big Problems In Developing Flying Machines.

Wind shields on automobiles arranged to deflect the wind upward so that the driver will not receive the full force of the wind even when his eyes are above the level of the top of the wind shield, are common enough, but this principle of wind deflection has now been applied ingeniously to an aeroplane. The effect sought is to make a reduced air pressure above the aeroplane wings or planes, and consequently to increase their lifting power. The front of the wing is so curved that the wind shoots up above the plane instead of sliding along its top.

It is the idea of one of the great number of foreign scientists who are now studying wing shapes. His laboratory tests and a limited number of practical tests have convinced him that a very considerable increase of lifting power can be gained in this way. So he is now preparing to make complete tests with a practical machine. It is on this question of wing shapes that the future development of aeroplaning largely rests.

Birds have an enormously greater lifting ability in proportion to the power they exert than do aeroplanes, due undoubtedly to the shapes of their bodies and their wing forms.

The efficiency of the gasoline engine has enabled men to overcome the inefficiency of aeroplane shapes and wings, but the prevailing tendency in flying now is to give less attention to increasing the power and more attention to shaping the wings so they will lift as much as they should, and so that they will give better stability when flying through the air.—Saturday Evening Post.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish."

B. A. KELLY.

In hundreds of letters received by the Fruit-a-tives Company, the same expression is used "Fruit-a-tives is the best kidney remedy in the world". At any rate, these tablets have proved the best to the hundreds of men and women who have been cured by taking them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. From places where the first class fare is less than $2.50, a return ticket will be issued for single fare plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the province, except the territory west of Azilda on the C.P.R. round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held over 3,500, with pigeons, canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers, fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses, live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production. 23

TEAMS ARE WANTED FOR JUVENILE HOCKEY LEAGUE

Manager Pete Gettas of the Boston Exploits says that he will place a fast team on the ice this winter and he would like to hear from officers of other clubs who would like to enter a Juvenile League.

Mr. J. J. Thompson physical director of the Y.M.C.A. expects to form a league in which weight qualifications will figure. The games would be played at the Street Railway rink

At the annual meeting of the Preston Hockey Club, it was decided to place teams in the O.H.A. intermediate and junior series. The action of last year's officers in nominating A. T. Kinder tor the O.H.A. was confirmed.

Hamilton has artificial ice and the hockey players have commenced to practice already. There will be two hockey clubs there this year. The Hamilton Hockey Club will be represented with two O. H. A. teams intermediate and junior, while the Centenial Club will put out an intermediate line-up.

Chas Lavery, who formerly played with Teddy Mariott's junior Simcoes, is now living at Whitby and will play with the intermediates of that town this winter.

The Whitby intermediates, who made such a creditable showing in the O.H.A. last winter, have all of last year's players available for the coming season.

The regular season in the Winnipeg Hockey League opens on Thursday, December 18, and the exhibition games now arranged by T. R. and A.A., with the Winnipegs and "Vics" teams will take place during the week following.

Walter Fair, the rover of last year's Oshawa Juniors, and who played on the junior All-Star team last winter, has since joined the ranks of the benedicts. Fair is over age this year and will play with the intermediates, who expect to put a formidable seven on the ice.

Although the new rink at Whitby is rapidly nearing completion, whether or not the teams will play in it will be decided at a meeting to be held on Friday night. If satisfactory arrangements cannot be made with the local rink management, the Whitby team will play their home games at Oshawa, which is only four miles away.

The Last of the Andamans.

The Andaman Islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal, where Great Britain has maintained a penal settlement since 1858, originally had a considerable native population These island savages are of great interest to science for various ethnologic reasons, and the news that they are rapidly dwindling away—contained in the census of 1911—should lead to some attempt at conservation In the case of two groups that have come partially under the influence of civilization an original 3,500 individuals have decreased to 455. In fact the only tribe that seems to be holding its own is that of the savage Jarswas, who have not as yet been tainted with civilization. The gradual extinction of the Andamanese is attributed to three causes: increased infant mortality among the children of parents who have come under the influence of civilization, and that due to measles; decreased birth-rate following the introduction of venereal disease; and fatal exposure among the sick who come in to the hospitals to be treated, and temporarily live a life of clothes-wearing. Upon their return to the jungle these are discarded, and the resulting exposure is fatal to a weakened body.

Chose Better Company.

Amelia E. Barr, in her autobiography, tells of her experience in looking for a "church home" in the big city. She enjoyed a sermon by a famous preacher and wrote to ask about joining his congregation. An officer of the church called. After the polite preliminaries he said: "Dr. C. would like to know the name of your banker." "My banker," she replied in amazement. "I have no banker." "You see," he continued, "ours is a very extravagant church—I mean in good works—and our members must be looked to for large subscriptions. Dr. G. is acquainted with your name, and thinks highly of you, but he is afraid you would not be able to give as—as liberally, as our church expenses demanded." Mrs. Barr looked at him silently while he floundered in explanations. Finally she said: "You had better make no more explanations, sir. I understand that only the rich can be members of Dr. C.'s church. The Lord Christ also is therefore ineligible. I will remain outside with Him."

AN ESSAY ON NAILS.

They Are of All Sizes, Shapes, Varieties and Habits.

A nail is a short piece of iron which a man uses to aim at while he is hammering his thumb.

Nails come in various sizes. A tack is a baby nail which is fond of standing upon its head in the dark when you are turkey trotting around your room in bare feet, trying in vain to locate an electric button. An adult nail is two or three inches long and comes in boxes which are sent to you by express, upon which you have to pay the charges, which have already been collected by the express company at the other end. Not being able to find the hammer, you vainly endeavor to extract this nail and others of its kind from the box, both with and without prayer, until you finally succeed in wrenching the top off the box with superhuman strength while your wife looks on with superb disdain.

Nails are also used to build houses, as sinkers on fish lines and, when applied internally to the feet, to promote and foster lockjaw.

They come in vast quantities in hardware and department stores, but when you want just one to drive into the bathroom wall during your wife's absence to hang a razor strop on you might as well look for a needle in a haystack or a square deal in a state legislature.—Life.

SHIPPING A SKELETON

It Required Very Careful Handling

By OSCAR COX

Mark Hudson was station agent at Pembuton Junction. Mark was in the freight house one morning looking over the boxes and bales scattered about when he heard a wagon drive up outside and stop. A young man about eighteen years of age entered and said:

"I've got a box out here I'd like to ship to Hallowell. You want to be mighty particular about it because it contains something breakable."

"That's all very well so far as I am concerned, but I can't answer for the case after the box leaves my keeping."

"I've marked instructions on the lid," replied the youngster. "Come out and have a look."

The agent went out with the shipper and saw a box about five and a half feet long, two feet wide and eighteen inches high.

"Corpse?" he asked.

"No, but it's the next thing to it; it's a skeleton."

"A skeleton! Isn't that a queer thing for you to be shipping from this point?" exclaimed the agent suspiciously.

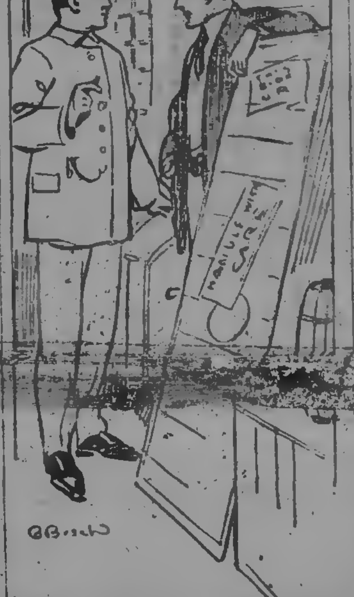
"Well, yes; it would be without an explanation. I saw an ad. in a newspaper the other day for a skeleton. I knew they had one they didn't need in the physiology lecture room of our college. I'm a Merton student, and I bought it. I've sold it to the advertiser and have made some money on it—that is, if I get it there without breaking any of the bones."

Merton college was six miles distant from the junction. There was a co-ed institution connected with it.

The box was lying on its bottom, and tacked to the cover was a card on which were written the instructions:

Breakable. Keep this side up most of the time. Stand on end occasionally for awhile.

On one end was another card stating that when the box was stood on end that end was to be up. In no case was the other end to be up. Hudson looked at the box meditatively and read the directions.



"CORPSE?" ASKED THE MAN ON THE CAR.

"What's the use of being so careful with a skeleton?" he asked. "If it isn't packed properly I don't want to ship it, or if I do it must be at the owner's risk. If it is packed properly it should stand ordinary handling."

"I'll tell you," said the shipper, assuming a faraway expression. "Those bones were once the framework of a beautiful girl."

"How do you know that?" interrupted the agent.

"That's the tradition in college," resumed the youth. "Now, in packing it I couldn't divest my mind of what it had been in life. It seemed horrible to put the poor creature in cotton or excelsior or anything like that. I couldn't do it. I've put her in just as she would like to be put in if she were alive, lying peacefully upon her back, or when that end is up and this one down she stands like a beautiful statue—the Venus de Medici, for instance."

The speaker was so affected that he wiped moisture from his eyes with his handkerchief.

"I don't think," said the agent, "that I'll receipt for the article. If I should make myself responsible for a medical Venus or anything like that and there should be a breakage, with claims against the road for big damages, I'd get fired."

There were a few moments of deliberative silence between the two, after which the shipper said:

"I expect you're right about it. I wouldn't assume the risk if I were you. If some galoot of a handler should stand the box wrong side up it might break the skeleton's neck. That would knock off a big sum from its value. Besides, consider what it once was. How would you like to have a sister of yours sent off in a box and stood wrong end"—

"Oh, give us a rest on that part of the business. I understand that you've got a piece of merchandise to be shipped at the ordinary rates."

"You haven't any feeling," the other continued. "I can't resign all that remains on earth of what was once a delicate girl to such hands as yours. I'm going along with the box myself, so that I may see it is handled tenderly. Will you take it on those terms?"

"Well, yes. I don't mind if you'll take the responsibility."

The agent took hold of the box and was proceeding to remove it when he discovered that it weighed something like a hundred pounds.

"That's the heaviest skeleton I ever handled," he remarked.

"How many have you handled?" asked the shipper.

"I don't know that I ever handled any."

"Then how can you tell what one of them should weigh? Take hold of that end and I'll take this. Now she goes." And the box was carried into the freight station and stood up on the right end. Then the agent went to a desk and, taking a blank receipt, asked the young man his name.

"John Smith," was the reply.

"Any middle name?"

"No."

"Where to?"

"Hallowell."

Hallowell was a town some twenty miles distant.

"You don't need the name of the person the skeleton was when alive, do you?" asked Mr. Smith.

The agent turned from his writing and, looking the shipper in the face, said:

"Young man, will you be offended if I say something plain to you?"

"No; drive on."

"You're the biggest fool that ever came into this station."

"You've hit it right, pard. I entered college ten years ago, and I'm a freshman yet. I've been turned back with nine classes. I was to have been graduated with the class of '04. Now I am at the foot of the class of '11."

"Oh, give us a rest. I've something to do besides chinning with an idiot. There's your receipt. I'll put the box on the next train that comes along, at 12:05. That's an hour."

"Isn't there a train before that time?"

"No."

At this point a carriage was driven up to the passenger entrance of the station, and Dr. Bidwell, president of Merton college, and Dr. Arabella Caxton, [illegible] who had charge of the passenger and freight [illegible] proceeding to the ticket office when Mr. Smith stopped him and said.

"See here, old man; don't talk about that skeleton I'm shipping. These two prexys were opposed to the sale, and they might not like to see it go."

"Oh, I mind my own business," replied the agent and went on his way, while Mr. Smith put himself out of sight among the boxes in the freight house.

"Have you seen anything," Dr. Bidwell asked the agent, "of a young man and a young girl going off on any of the trains?"

"No; I haven't," was the laconic reply.

Dr. Bidwell turned to Dr. Caxton and remarked, "Do you suppose they have gone from the upper station?"

"They may," replied Dr. Caxton.

"When does the next train pass?" the agent was asked.

"At 12:05."

After a consultation the two presidents decided that Dr. Bidwell should go to the upper station and Dr. Caxton should remain and watch the 12:05 train. Other college officials were taking care of other routes. Dr. Bidwell drove off, leaving his colleague in the waiting room. When the 12:05 train came along the agent wheeled Mr. Smith's box on a truck to the baggage car, and it was lifted inside.

"Corpse?" asked the man on the car.

"No; skeleton."

"Mighty heavy skeleton."

Meanwhile Mr. Smith, when sure he was not observed, swung himself on to the rear platform of the last car of the train.

When the train was receding in the distance and President Caxton was leaving the station Mr. Smith made his way to the baggage car and saw that the box rested in a comfortable position for its contents till Hallowell was reached, then superintended its removal into the freight house of that station. Calling for tools, he opened the box and handed out as pretty a structure of bones with appropriate flesh as had ever been shipped by that or any other railroad.

"Can you direct me," he said, "to a parson?"

"Certainly," said the astonished agent. "You'll find one right under that spire you see over there," pointing. "The parsonage is next the church."

The girl, a student of the woman's college of the university, clung to Mr. Smith, whose real name was Jim Stevens, a sophomore, and the two hurried to the clergyman's house and were there united in the bonds of matrimony.

That ended the curriculum of both Mr. Stevens and his wife as college students. The affair created considerable commotion in the men's and women's colleges, and the faculties of both institutions seriously considered the separation of the two on the ground that they furnished too favorable opportunities for elopements.

[illegible] hardly left [illegible] to see his friends and acquaintances by appointment. Woe betide the too intrusive stranger. It is said that one day an enterprising man called, duly armed with a letter of introduction, and the servant was nearly yielding to the impulsive stranger when the painter of "Dante's Dream" leaned over the bannister and said in a firm mellifluous voice "Tell the gentleman that I am not at home."

Scores British Medical Schools.

Sir William Osler has startled the British medical schools by proposing a revolutionary change in the system of examination and education for medical and surgical diplomas.

The present system consists of perpetual lectures, exhaustive written examination papers, and no credit, or very little, is given for hospital work during the course. Sir William says:

"Lectures should be reduced to a minimum, or abolished altogether. The day of lectures is done and should give place to other methods better fitted to modern requirements.

"We should burn the anatomical fetish to which we have sacrificed too long, to our great detriment. I would give credit for work done throughout the course and cut out written papers, as it is easy for an examiner to judge of the value of a student's training by the way he handles a patient, for which 15 minutes at the bedside is worth three hours at the desk."

BRITISH CONSUL'S MESSAGE TO CANADIAN CLUB MEN

J. Joyce Broderick Explains the Consul Service and Speaks of Canada's Industrial Prospects—J. H. Burnham Speaks of Imperial Defence

The majority of Peterborough's intellects met last evening at the Y.M.C.A. rooms, under the auspices of the Canadian Club, to dine and listen to he message of Mr. J. Joyce Broderick, the ex-British vice-Consul in New York, who is making a tour of Canadian cities prior to entering upon his new appointment as British Consul at Amsterdam.

Mr. G.C. Wainwright, the President of the Club, occupied the chair and was supported by Sheriff Hall Mr J.H. Burnham, M. P., and Mr E.A. Peck, M.P.P. and other distinguished men of the city. A very enjoyable and profitable time was spent. The Club is to be congratulated upon its enterprize in procuring speakers of such a wide range of experience and influence and it will be rewarded by creating a broader outlook among us and extending our interests and operations as a commercial centre. The subject of Mr. Joyce Broderick's address was of special interest to manufacturers and business men — "The British Consular Service and its Relation to Canada."

Mr. Wainwright spoke a few words as to the state of the local Club, which he was glad to say was in a healthy condition, and he was full of hope and anticipation for a good year. He then introduced the speakers for the evening, who he said they were glad to have with them, as one who had occupied a high position in the service of the Empire.

MR. JOYCE BRODERICK'S SPEECH

Mr Broderick claims to be an Irishman, and he began by saying that he wished the gods had not denied him that facility of expression with which they had so lavishly endowed many of the sons of the island of blarney, from which he came. He told a story of a man who, in describing the process of execution by electricity in the United States, said "You sits comforcably in the chair and then they trun on the elocution" You are all sitting comfortably in your chairs, said Mr. Broderick, waiting for the elocution to be turned on, but I hope with no dire effect.

Speaking of the duties of the consulate, the speaker said some people believe that the British consluate exists for the benefit of manufacturers of the British Isles. This [illegible] large extent. as [illegible] British [illegible] British [illegible] to assist commerce. He said he was making this tour in order to be able to more efficiently present the claims of Canada in the various countries to which he might go.

On the subject of the development of Canadian industries, Mr. Broderick said it would be some time before these industries would turn out sufficient for home consumption. But he belived that in the near future Canada will be a manufacturing country, and in a compartively short space of time will be able to enter the arena of world competition

The speaker then gave an instructive and entertaining account of the history of the Consulate, which he said had always been an arbitrator in matters of dispute between traders at different ports throughout the world. He said that the first Consulate dates back to the time of the ancient Egyptians, when it was more of a priestly office. The first British Consul was an Italian, and in earlier times the office was more remunerative than it is to-day. Consuls have peculiar privileges, such as freedom from arrest, from taxes and from military service.

The British Consulate has more and more of recent years interested itself in the commercial welfare of the Empire. But Consuls cannot take the place of individual representatives, said Mr. Broderick, he is not a salesman. He cannot create trade, but he can indicate the manner in which trade might be created.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIES.

Reverting to Canada's prospects as an industrial country, he said Canada's expansion would proceed at a greater rapidity than that of the United States. Her facilities for manufacture were greater. She had greater water powers and would therefore be able to compete with the States in the markets of the world.

He said that a greater interest had been taken in Canada since the arrangement which had been made between Canada and the British Government, and the British Consuls the world over were using their influence on behalf of the Dominion. But the efficiency of the Consulate system as a manchine would be the greater the more it was used and the higher speed at which it was driven.

A MESSAGE TO PETERBOROUGH.

"I am here to-night," said Mr. Broderick, "authorized by the British Government to urge you as a city of business men to make use of our resources whenever you may deem it to your advantage to so. I am sorry that this short explanation did not fall to the lot of somebody more able to present it than I. But I hope that you will remember my invitation that whatever part of the world I may be in I hope to be of service to you."

Long and loud applause followed Mr. Broderick's interesting and instructive address.

J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.

Mr J. H. Burnham moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, and in an eloquent speech he said:

I am sure that nothing gives me greater pleasure than moving a vote of thanks to one upon an Empire and as Mr. Broderick is. We are in Canada on the very point of a crisis with respect to our revelations to the Empire. Differences of opinion over a naval service have thrown us into the utmost confusion. At all hazards, I should say, and with all possible speed the Navy Quest[illegible] should be taken out of politics, [illegible] it will rend our [illegible] to the Empire. [illegible] Geo. Brown, one of the great[illegible] most independent-minded of Canadians withdrew from all political political and party strife when the Canadian provinces showed signs of coming together in a confederation. To his ptariotism and greatness of soul more than to that of any other man in Canada was due the fact that Canadians were able to bury their mutual jealousies long enough to make a notion of themselves. Unless some such spirit is shown very speedily amongst the various parts of the Empire and the leading men of those parts all hope of imperial co-operation will be gone forever. Once a flag is hauled down by a people history shows it does not go up again. Are we to renounce all hope of an imperial understanding in Canada? It looks perilously like it. Our only hopes lives in a revival of the ancient spirit which we inherited and which I hope we have not lost

In offering the vote of thanks to the speaker, the chairman remarked that if Mr. Broderick could extend his visit to Peterborough we would show him that we were not behind in manufacturing industries.

The gathering rose and sang 'God Save the King."

THEATRICAL

The Dream Maiden was presented at the Grand Opera House last night under some disadvantages. The company was late in arriving in the city from Belleville and the curtain did not ascend till nearly nine o'clock.

The company, according to report, has experienced considerable trouble. Several of the principals left the show at Brockville, and there was nothing else to be done but give their work over to understudies.

Magnificent scenery is carried by the company, and the costumes likewise are of a very high order. There are a number of catchy songs and the comedy is bright.

However, the audience can be thankful that the usual time for the finale was delayed, for had the curtain gone down at 10.30 or 10.45, they would have had to face a particularly heavy downfall of rain.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT COLLEGIATE

The entrance prizes, Nicholls scholarships, acheltic cups and medals, will be presented to the winners. The friends of the students are cordially invited to be present.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We wish to tender an apology and at the same time offer an explanation to our patrons for the extremely poor performance put on at the Grand last evening.

The Dream Maiden Co. was highly recommended to us and at the time it was booked there is no doubt but that it was an excellent organization. The company was formed on an extravagant scale as regards scenery costumes and talent, but when ready to start out it was found that all the best New York theatres were booked considerably ahead and consequently [illegible] the company [illegible] found [illegible] could be placed in a suitable New York theatre. However, the play being brand new and unknown, it was a difficult matter to finance the big production especially when playing the one night stands, when the railroading and advertising made the expenses run so high. Consequently during the seven weeks the company have been out the management lost some $12,000 The business through Michigan, where the company toured ed before striking Hamilton, was extremely bad and the performers had considerable money for back salaries coming to them on arrival there. The claimax was, however, reached in Ottawa, where they played last Friday and Saturday. Miss Audrey Maple the leading lady, quit the company, as well as seven of the ten extra musicians the company carried. Other members dropped out in quick succession until only fort-six of the original company of seventy-one remained, and some of these refused to go on last night. All this was unknown to us until yesterday evening at 5 o'clock when we secured the information over the long distance 'phone. In the meantime in order to land the company here we were obliged to put up their railroad fares with the Grand Trunk, and also pay their hotel bill in Ottawa. It was now too late to attempt to encell the show as it meant the company would hav been left without anything and our patrons disappointed.

When we issued a special letter to our patrons we sincerely believed that we were going to give them something extra good and sincerely regret that it turned out the reverse.

We would not knowingly recommend an attraction which we knew was not of a meritorious character.

PROTEST AGAINST ALLEGED ILL TREATMENT OF POLITICAL PRISONERS IN RUSSIA

Over Forty Thousand Persons Have Been Sentenced In Russia For Political Offences Since 1905 and 3,000 Executed—Notable British Names Appear on the Protest—Many Victims Suicide.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—This morning there is being published throughout Europe a protest against the alleged ill-treatment of political prisoners in Russia, and which bears the signatures of politicians, artists and men of letters of European repute. It says that since the Czar's manifesto in October, 1905, promising liberty to the people of Russia, over 40,000 persons have been sentenced for political offences. Of these over 3,000 were executed and more than 10,000 were thrown into horrible "katroga hard labor prisons."

The tercentenary of the Romanoffs has scarcely affected the political prisoners, their terrible sufferings have not been mitigated, the prisons are overcrowded to such an extent that it is impossible for them to rest even on the bare floor, absolute starvation and the most barbarous treatment are their daily portion and they have become victims of all kinds of epidemics. Very often the prisons have become the centre of infection for the surrounding district. Those sentenced for long terms of imprisonment, chiefly politicians, are in actual fact confined to a cruel form of slow death.

A veritable epidemic of suicides has developed amongst the prisoners, says the protest. The unhappy prisoners see in suicide the only way of escape from the most tragic fate of those tens of thousands of political exiles, of whom most are departed to Siberia without a trial, but simply by the arbitrary action of the Administration. Most of them are sent to the frozen waste, where they are unable to obtain the necessary food, clothing and housing, and they perish.

Among the signatories of the protest who join together to gather and publish the facts so that the world may know the trend of opinion are the following: Lord Lytton, J. W. Edgewood, M.P., Ramsay Macdonald, M.P., Sir Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, Jerome K. Jerome, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Prof. J. B. Bury, Laurence Irving, Sir Victor Morley and Maurice Hewlett.

Minister Thinks Technical Commission Was Too Low

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has stopped the salaries of Dr. J. W. Robertson, chairman of the technical education commission, and J. W. Bengough, the secretary. In the opinion of Mr. Crothers the commission should have had the report complete in his hands long ago. The commission was appointed nearly four years ago.

Dr. Coleridge Nominated.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 21.—South Oxford Conservatives yesterday afternoon at Mount Elgin nominated Dr. J. B. Coleridge of Ingersoll as their candidate for the Legislature. NATIONALISTS ORGANIZING.

Citizen Soldiery Forming To Offset the Ulster Program.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A cable from Dublin to The Tribune says:—

The world will soon see the formation of an Irish National volunteer movement, which will have for its object the organization of a citizen force ready to uphold the authority of the crown and government in Ireland. This is the natural development of the situation in Ulster, where Unionists have been drilling and organizing themselves to resist oppression and attacks upon their liberties, and the example thus afforded is to be followed by the Nationalists in other parts of the country. They also have determined to put themselves in a position to be able to resist oppression and attacks upon their liberties.

Like many other Irish movements of a national character, this one has taken its origin among Ulster Protestants. Its two leaders are Sir Roger Casement and Capt. James Robert White, both of whom took part in the Ulster Protestant home rule meeting some days ago. Capt. White is a son of the late Field Marshal Sir George White. It is his intention to make common cause with the men now on strike in Dublin.

Split In Cabinet?

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Premier Asquith's compromise offer to the Opposition leaders on the home rule bill is being delayed, according to The London Daily Mail yesterday morning, by serious dissension within the Cabinet regarding the solution of the question. Winston Spencer Churchill, Lloyd George, Sir Edward Grey, and Viscount Haldane, The Daily Mail says, favor the exclusion of Ulster from the bill. Augustine Birrell, Reginald McKenna, and Walter Runciman, would make Ulster accept Home Rule.

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 21.—It took the jury [illegible] minutes to arrive at a verdict [illegible] guilty in the charge [illegible] manslaughter, against [illegible] Darragh. FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 21—Number 1 train on the C. P. R. from Montreal for Vancouver, known as the Imperial Limited is reported wrecked at Heron Bay on the north shore of Lake Superior, about one hundred and fifty miles east of here. Officials admit the train is wrecked and the engine went into the lake but give no further particulars. Rumor is making a big disaster of it.

The Canadian Pacific state that a rock falling on the track caused the accident. Besides the missing fireman there are no casualities. The fireman, named O'Connor, belonged to Schreiber.

SANK HEAD FIRST?

Shipping Man Has Theory of Leafield's Disappearance.

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 21—The explanation of the disappearance of the Algoma Central steamer Leafield, as offered by a local shipping man, is that when she climbed a huge wave and went over the summit, the space between the forward decks became filled with water. Already loaded heavily with steel rails, she continued head first after going down the other side of the wave and dived straight to the bottom of Lake Superior without any of the crew even having a chance to put on lifebelts.

Although the tug Arbutus left yesterday for a week's search, practically no hope is entertained for the boat or any of the crew now missing eleven days.

PRAGUE, Austria, Nov. 21.—Jules Vedrines, the French aviator, flew yesterday from Nancy across Germany without descending, and landed near here at 2.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The distance covered was about 400 miles. It is understood that Vedrines intends to continue on to Constantinople.

HAWKES TO RUN.

Canadian League Leader Will Contest South Lanark For Federal Seat.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—"You may say that my election address will be circulated in the constituency to-morrow, and when a man circulates his election address it means that he is out for nomination."

In these words did Arthur Hawkes confirm the report that he would be a Parliamentary candidate in the forthcoming bye-election in South Lanark. Mr. Hawkes' policy is "Canada First, and Common-Sense Politics," thus representing his appearing in the field as an Independent. Ten thousand addresses are being distributed. They are of two grades, one for minors, one for voters. Mr. Hawkes speaks at Smith's Falls on Monday night.

Ne Temere In Liverpool.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(C. A. P. The man is a Roman Catholic, but for some years has attended a Protestant church. His wife is a Protestant. The case has aroused considerable interest, and legal proceedings are threatened if the young couple are interfered with or openly aspersed.

Boyce, M.P., Dr. Thompson, M.P., and scores of others. Sir Wilfrid spent the day quietly at home.

He received many callers who wished to convey their congratulations in person. On Monday next he goes to Hamilton, where he will address two meetings, while he has numerous other engagemnts to fill before the reopening of the session.

TO CORNER MARKET.

U.S. Fruit Syndicate Shutting Ontario Out of West.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—A direct charge that many of the wholesale jobbers of western Canada are in league to boycott Canadian, and particularly Ontario-grown, fruit was made at yesterday's session of the fruit-growers' convention by Mr. Robert Thompson, managed of the St. Catharines Cold Storage & Forwarding Co. Mr. Thompson declared that "most of the jobbers there are controlled by an American syndicate, which is not in sympathy with Canadian growers, and which wishes to corner the market for fruit shipped in from the United States. We are, to a great extent, at the mercy of this syndicate, for even now they buy Canadian fruit, re-label it, and sel it as American in order to build up the trade in United States stuff."

This adverse combination was, in the opinion of the speaker, quite as much the cause of the loss of the western trade to the Ontario grower as was the careless packing with which the latter is charged. The packing done in Ontario orchards was vastly improved, he said, and the three hundred box lots in the Transportation building would compare favorably with boxes packed anywhere in the world. He took issue with the pessimistic tone of the presidential address, and prophesied that the Canadian market would continue indefinitely to absorb all the fruit produced in Ontario, provided common sense is used in the distribution. Mr. Thompson warned the growers against spasmodic production, according to the whims of the market. "The man who gives up when prices are low, and plants and produces heavily when prices are high, will always be the under dog," he declared.

TIMBER SUFFERED.

Ontario Reserves Damaged by Storm Say Hunters.

THESSALON, Ont., Nov. 21.—Woodsmen and hunters now coming out of the timber country in and adjacent to the Mississauga forest reserve report that a vst amount of damage had been caused by the recent great storm to the standing timber. While there is a difference of opinion as to the extent of the damage done, all who have been in the back townships admit that it is tremendous. One man estimates the amount of fallen timber at not less than forty per cent.

Not only will the loss from fallen timber be great, but it greatly increases the danger from fire during the next season and for summers to come unless steps are taken to prevent it. Lumbermen in the limits bordering on the reserve will have much extra work in clearing roads which have been badly obstructed. One lumberman reports that seventy per cent. of his particular limit is now down. The Ontario Government will do well by taking immediate steps to investigate the extent of damage and decide what should be done to eliminate as far as possible the fire risk, he declares.

FORMER PRESIDENT OF ONTARIO AND WEST SHORE TESTIFIES

Road Was To Be Built by Huron Construction Co., But Mr. Moyes Remembers Very Little About It—He and Engineer Had Power To Sign Checks For Company—Directors Were Ignored.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Mr. John W. Moyes, erstwhile President of the Ontario & West Shore Railway Co., came before the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board yesterday to tell what he knew of the construction of the road and the proceedings by which the work had been abandoned and four municipalities have now to pay interest on $384,000 of bonds issued under their guarantee. The inquiry was instituted early in the year, but Mr. Moyes' absence from the city and the later death of Mr. S. C. Smoke, has permitted only preliminary hearings being held up to the present time. Mr. Moyes was the only witness yesterday, and his examination will continue to-day. He was unable to throw much light on the affairs of the railway company, and declined to commit himself in the absence of documents.

Mr. Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., appeared for the town of Goderich and the Township of Ashfield, and Mr. P. A. Malcolmson for Kincardine and the Township of Huron.

The principal fact elicited by the inquiry was that the portion of the railway now constructed was built by the Huron Construction Co., under an agreement with the Ontario & West Shore Railway Co. Mr. Moyes did not know the proprietors of the Huron Construction Co., he had no copy of the contract agreement, and could not tell where the figures were upon which certificates were issued upon the funds held by the Toronto General Trusts Corporation from the sale of the guaranteed bonds. At the same time, Mr. Moyes held a power of attorney from the Huron Construction Co. to sign and endorse checks, drafts, bills of exchange, etc.

It also came out that Mr. Moyes and Mr. Roberts, an engineer associated with him, had the purchasing of the right of way, steel and other supplies. Mr. McIntyre then tersely remarked, "Then did this ghostly company ever materialize?"

By the contract the Huron Construction Co. was to receive all the bonds of the railway company and a substantial proportion of the stock. The guaranteed bonds amounted to $400,000, and the construction company was to hand over a completed road from Goderich to Kincardine. At this time all the funds from the guaranteed bonds have been paid out, and construction has ceased.

Money was paid out by checks signed by himself or Mr. Roberts by authority of the agreement, and Mr. Roberts' salary, although he was primarily engaged by the railway company, was paid by the construction company under the agreement.

An important point developed was that the mayors, reeves, or wardens of the different municipalities were ex-officio on the board of directors of the railway company, but they never appeared to have been notified of any meetings.

ORVILLE WRIGHT'S NEW AEROBOAT.

NEW WRIGHT AEROBOAT

The new Wright aeroboat made its first appearance recently on the Miami River, near Dayton, Ohio. Under the expert hands of Mr. Orville Wright, who has been flying the craft, it showed higher efficiency and stability than has previously been attained with this type of craft. With only a sixty-horse power engine, the aeroboat demonstrated its ability to lift three or four persons, and showed a speed of nearly sixty miles an hour. In numerous flights up and down the river, both in winds and in calm, the new aeroboat surprised spectators by the ease with which it rose from the water in a short run of only a few hundred feet.

PRESIDENT HUERTA WARNS CONGRESS TO BEHAVE

Closely-Guarded by Picked Troops, Police and Plainclothesmen, Mexican Dictator Appears Before Legislators Chosen at Recent Elections and Explains Why He Put Their Predecessors In Jail.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—His face showing none of that whimsical humor which sometimes characterizes him, President Huerta last evening appeared before the new Mexican Congress and read his message. Few Mexican Presidents have read at the formal opening sessions of Congress shorter messages, and few have confined themselves so entirely to one subject. It was nothing more than a terse explanation of his motives for dissolving the old Congress, most of the members of which are now in the penitentiary accused of sedition.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies met in joint session, and Congress was formally declared convened at 5.30 o'clock in the evening. President Huerta came to the Congress through lines of troops, and the small crowds which gathered were not demonstrative.

There were no extraneous frills to the session. It was more in the nature of a little business meeting of the President and the men converted into lawmakers during the recent so-called elections. The message Gen. Huerta bore to them was, in its essence, an admonition. The incident he related to them of the previous Congress was one by which it was intimated they might be guided in their conduct as Congressmen.

Acknowledging the plaudits and vivas on the Congressmen and spectators, as he moved down the aisles by a series of military salutes, Gen. Huerta looked a stern figure. Like the Congressmen, he was in evening clothes, the only touch of rank being the tri-color across his breast. In a half circle behind him on the platform, sat his staff, resplendent in gold lace and full dress uniform, and grouped just below on the floor of the House, were members of the Cabinet.

It was a carefully selected audience. Tickets were necessary to pass into the building, and a fair part of the space was occupied by police and plainclothesmen. There were few empty chairs. In the entire audience there were perhaps ten women, but none representative of the city's fashionable element.

A technical violation of the law created comment. Gen. Huerta's staff filed in wearing sidearms. The swords in evidence at the sides of the members of Gen. Huerta's staff appeared to emphasize the fact that his is a military administration.

Outside the building throughout the session a strong force of soldiers guarded all the approaches; patrols rode the street for several blocks around, and still other troops were stationed in small detachments further out. None of these, however, had trouble with the crowds.

Japanese Cruiser Sails.

YOKOSUKA, Japan, Nov. 21.—There was a popular demonstration of farewell at the departure of the Japanese cruiser Idumo for Mexican waters. In spite of a raging storm a steamer accompanied her to the mouth of the bay and a band played national airs. Among those on board were several distinguished naval officers headed by Admiral Baron Minoro Saito, Minister of Marine.

The captain in command of the cruiser, Capt. Keizaburo Moriyama, is regarded as one of the most able officers of the Japanese navy. He is said to be very tactful and capable of handling any international question which may possibly arise. He speaks English and French. The cruiser will proceed by way of Honolulu to Manzanillo.

CONCRETE ROADS FOR THE COUNTY

Warden Garbutt Forcasts Introduction of This Class of Road

At Thursday's session of the County Council, Warden J. H. Garbutt made his report on the Good Roads question, which has been in the limelight for some time. Owing to the fact of the Highways and Roads Commissioner having not made his report, the Council at present are at a standstill until the report is made.

"What do you think of the concrete roads as dealt with in the lecture last evening?" asked a Review reporter of Warden Garbutt.

"It was fine, and owing to the ever-growing traffic, we no doubt will have to have such roads in the future." The public are becoming rather tired of the wear and the expense of keeping up our present system. It has certainly cost considerably in the past, and is getting more so every year."

VISIT HOUSE OF REFUGE.

This afternoon the Council held a meeting at the House of Refuge, which has been alterated and improved considerably during the past season, and the Council are anxious to review the work done at their instigation. To-morrow morning will see the close of this session, which is the last one of the year for this present Council.

THE REEVESHIP.

Warden Garbutt is being mentioned as Reeve for the township of Smith. Interviewed by a reporter Mr. Garbutt stated that he had been asked by a large number of the farmers and residents of Smith to stand again this year, but as yet he had not decided what action he would take in the matter.

WARDEN'S APPRECIATION.

At the close of this morning's session the Warden addressed the Council [illegible] courtesy shown to him during his term as Warden of the County. Many improvements had been made during the year, and on the whole the year has been a most successful one.

THE NEW DAM AT FENELON FALLS

Operations Have Been Closed Down for This Season

FENELON FALLS, November 21—Work on the new dam has been closed down for the year. The central portion of the new structure is practically completed. It consists of seven cement piers, between which stop logs are raised or lowered in grooves in the sides of the piers by means of a windlass which runs on a track on the cement top that extends across the piers, and can be used at any point necessary. The two end sections of the dam will, it is expected, be completed next summer.

There is no better way of cleaning vases having such long and narrow necks that one cannot reach the bottom with a dish mop or cloth than to put in the vase a generous supply of tiny bits of newspaper. Add a little borax and some hot water. Shake vigorously. A surprise awaits you in the amount of sediment that will be removed.

POLICE WOMEN

The difference between Mrs. Stebbins Wells and Mrs. Pankhurst is the difference between destruction and construction. Mrs. Pankhurst would pull down everything. Mrs. Wells would build up. Not a word was uttered about the franchise last night at the Collegiate Institute, no one was carried out yelling 'votes for women," but something revolutionary went on nevertheless, and most of those present agreed at the close that, whatever may be thought about women getting a ballot paper, they should certainly be conceded a police uniform—not necessarily the helmet and the truncheon.

A great many points were covered by Mrs. Wells, and she dealt at some length with the problems of young life in the city which have been discussed recently in the Review. Doubtless, a police-woman in Peterboro would fill a vacant niche. But while we agree that a woman can do very often what a man cannot do, we believe the man can do more than he does, or thinks he can do.

The question of girls being out after hours is, first of all, a parents' problem. But there is one important phase of these street dangers which is entirely overlooked, which needs, not a woman, but a man to deal with. Too much has been said about the girls—what of the men who are said to prowl in wait for their victims? If a wild beast is at large, the first business is surely to [illegible] at large in our city, let the policeman get after them, and if they do not shoot them let them see that they are securely caged and gibbeted.

We are beginning at the wrong end of this problem. There is too much talk and too little quiet work done. Our Chief must have a larger staff and, perhaps, a woman to see that they do their duty. The police force has been single too long, it is time it got married there is nothing like a wife to keep a man at his job.

THE NAVAL PROBLEM

Our local contemporary replying to the Review's criticism of the Globe, as regards its Jekel and Hyde attitude on the naval problem, says that there is no inconsistency in advocating the building of two navies one day and condemning the all naval enterprize the next. This paper goes on to say, "there is a mighty difference between the construction and maintenance of one or two naval units and a mad haste in building naval armaments to the extent of the exhaustion of national resources—building not for self-defence but from aggression and mutual distrust and rivalry." Please note the words "one or two naval units"—the editor is not quite sure of his figures.

Now if we had space, and thought it were worth while, we could convince our contemporary from its own words that the Liberal policy of a Canadian navy was a foolish, wasteful and disastrous one. That by the building of even one Canadian unit we are entering upon a sea of trouble from which we shall never release ourselves.

To put even a small fleet upon the Pacific Coast is an act of aggression, or it will be so regarded by the far-eastern nations.

The Examiner's incompetance to deal with or even understand the naval situation is revealed in the following sentence: "Canada needs a small navy to defend her great and constantly growing commerce and to police her magnificent expanse of coastal waters." The last seven words in this passage are mere rhetorical verbiage and have no practical meaning.

As for the defence of the Pacific Coast, while Canada is part of the British Empire, Vancouver is safer now than if we had fifteen battle ships patroling the Pacific. Japan is the only nation Canada has to fear in the way of aggression from the Pacific, and while England and Japan are bound by the treaty that was drawn up some few years ago there need be no fear in that direction. But the placing of a fleet of war ships on the Pacific may and will be regarded as a direct challenge to Japan, or at least as a distrust of her. If Canada once gets into the vortex of competition on the Pacific, whether for aggression or defence she will be in exactly the same position as the European nations to-day.

We are not necessarily opposing the idea of a Canadian navy, although we think it a serious proposition. We merely urge the seriousness of the undertaking upon all our fellow Canadians. We should know just what we are setting out to do. It is no insult to the average Canadian to say that he is entirely unacquainted with naval matters, and therefore incapable of pronouncing judgment upon the present problem. He must first of all go through a process of education before he decides what is the best policy to persue.

This is the wise policy of Mr. Borden in contributing $35,000,000 to the British Navy. It was not the institution of a policy of contribution, it was a small acknowledgement of our debt to the Empire and to the Empire's Navy. The ships that were to be built with the money would belong to Canada and subject to recall when Canada could man them and use them for specific purposes. At present Canada can neither build nor man warships. That is a fact which some Liberals cannot digest, and [illegible] will never be [illegible] for agreement between the two parties. It is true we are advancing in ship building, but we are not able to build Dreadnoughts and will not be able for some time. All this talk of "Canada Ca'n't" is mere party cant, and is not used by men who know the facts, or who want to settle the question by a practical policy.

The following authenticated figures show the strength of the Japanese Navy and they may help certain Liberals to grasp the situation: The Japanese Navy has 18 Battleships, 13 Armored Cruisers, 2 protected Cruisers 1st class, 14 2nd class, 5 3rd class, and 4 unprotected cruisers, 3 Torpedo vessels, 57 Torpedo boat Destroyers—2 building. Torpedo boats: Division-al, 1st and 2nd class 57 in all. Submarines 12, and 3 building.

This information is taken from Whitaker's Almanac for this year, and shows what Canada would be "up against" in the Pacific, to use a vulgar but expressive phrase. Furthermore it ought to be added that the Naval bill of Japan for last year was ten million sterling, or $26,000,000.

No doubt our contemporary will have some argument to keep it from looking these facts square in the face and will ask, "Are we to be beaten by little Japan?" or something of that sort of thing; or it will remain silent rather than tackle such a stiff proposition. We are not concerned as to proving whether Mr. Borden or Sir Wilfrid Laurier are right or wrong; what we want is to present a true statement of the situation. If the Examiner can enlighten us we will be very grateful.

In using the paper lanterns for decorative purposes, it will be well to put a little sand or a few pebbles around the candle; this will prevent swaying and so reduce the chance of the lantern taking fire.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 20.—Wheat—The steady American cables and the strength in Winnipeg yesterday caused few offers here at the opening and values were ¼ higher. Following the opening there was a further advance of ¼ on the scarcity of first-hand Manitoba offers, strength in spot here, forecast of light Russian shipments this week and a continued good Continental demand for cargoes. There is a growing firmness in European new crop offers, with the weather generally unfavorable and marketing lighter. The continued favorable weather in Argentina checked the advance, and as a result prices reacted ⅛ from the high, with prices at 1.30 p.m., ⅛ to ½ higher than yesterday.

Corn—Opened unchanged to ¼ higher, and later advanced ⅜ to ¾, with heavy covering in January as a result of Argentina shorts excited. The forecast is for lighter Argentina shipments this week. Spot market here is strong and Danubian offers are firmly held. Later there was realizing with the market excited, with a decline of ¼ to ½ on the mild weather in the United Kingdom, reducing consumption and favorable European crop advices. At 1.30 p.m. prices were ⅛ up from yesterday.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Fair business in winter wheat for export helped December up 1⅛c net today, but May closed unchanged and July ⅛c off, on lightness of country offerings. Corn closed steady, a shade higher to a shade lower. Oats, because trade was light, finished unchanged to a shade lower. Free local selling eased lard and ribs 2½c to 7½c, but May pork, on rather liberal buying, gained 2½c.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"How do you do, Mr. Demarest?" she said evenly. "It's four years since we met, and they've made you district attorney since then. Allow me to congratulate you."

Demarest's keen face took on an expression of perplexity.

"I'm puzzled," he confessed. "There is something familiar, somehow, about you, and yet"—

"Can't you guess?" Mary questioned. "Search your memory, Mr. Demarest."

The face of the district attorney lightened.

"Why!" he exclaimed, "you are—it can't be—yes—you are the girl, you're the Mary Turner whom I—oh, I know you now."

"I'm the girl you mean, Mr. Demarest, but, for the rest, you don't know me—not at all!"

"Young woman," Burke said, peremptorily, "the Twentieth Century limited leaves Grand Central station at 4 o'clock. It arrives in Chicago at 8:55 tomorrow morning." He pulled a massive gold watch from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at it, thrust it back, and concluded ponderously: "You will just about have time to catch that train."

"Working for the New York Central now?" Mary asked blandly.

"You'd better be packing your trunk," the inspector rumbled.

"But why? I'm not going away."

"On the Twentieth Century limited this afternoon," the inspector declared in a voice of growing wrath.

"Oh, dear, no!"

"I say yes!" The answer was a bellow. "I'm giving you your orders. You will either go to Chicago or you'll go up the river."

"If you can convict me. Pray, notice that little word 'if.'"

The district attorney interposed very suavely:

"I did once, I remember."

"But you can't do it again," Mary declared with an assurance that excited the astonishment of the police [illegible]

"How do you [illegible]" [illegible] blustered.

"Because if he could he would have had me in prison some time ago."

"Huh!" Burke exclaimed gruffly. "I've seen them go up pretty easy."

"The poor ones; not those that have money. I have money, plenty of money—now."

"Money you stole!" the inspector returned brutally.

"Oh, dear, no!" Mary cried with a fine show of virtuous indignation.

"What about the $30,000 you got on that partnership swindle? I s'pose you didn't steal that!"

"Certainly not," was the ready reply. "The man advertised for a partner in a business sure to bring big and safe returns. We formed a partnership with a capital of $60,000. We paid the money into the bank, and then at once I drew it out. It was legal for me to draw that money—wasn't it, Mr. Demarest?"

The district attorney admitted the truth of her contention.

"Well, anyhow," Burke shouted, "you may stay inside the law, but you've got to get outside the city. On the level, now, do you think you could get away with that young Gilder scheme you've been planning?"

"What young Gilder scheme?"

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise!" the inspector cried roughly. "The answer is, once for all, leave town this afternoon or you'll be in the Tombs in the morning."

"It can't be done, inspector."

Mary opened a drawer of the desk and took out the document obtained that morning from Harris and held it forth."

"What's this?" Burke stormed, but he took the paper.

Demarest looked over the inspector's shoulder, and his eyes grew larger as he read. When he was at an end of the reading he regarded the passive woman at the desk with a new respect.

"What's this?" Burke repeated helplessly. Mary was kind enough to make the document clear to him.

"It's a temporary restraining order from the supreme court instructing you to let me alone until you have legal proof that I have broken the law."

"But it can't be done," shouted Burke.

"You might ask Mr. Demarest," Mary suggested pleasantly, "as to whether or not it can be done. The gambling houses can do it and so keep on breaking the law. The race track men can do it and laugh at the law. The railroad can do it to restrain its employees from striking. So why shouldn't I get one too? You see, I have money. I can buy all the law I want. And there's nothing you can't do with the law if you have [illegible]. Ask Mr. Demarest. He knows."

"[illegible] you beat that?" [illegible] rumbled. He regarded [illegible] a stare of almost reverential wonder. "A crook appealing to the law!"

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

"Miss Turner," the district attorney said, with an appearance of sincerity, "I'm going to appeal to your sense of fair play."

"That was killed four years ago."

But Demarest persisted. Influence had been brought to bear on him. It was for her own sake now that he urged her.

"Let young Gilder alone."

Mary laughed again.

"His father sent me away for three years—three years for something I didn't do. Well, he's got to pay for it."

By this time, Burke, a man of superior intelligence, as one must be to reach such a position of authority, had come to realize that here was a case not to be carried through by blustering, by intimidation, by the rough ruses familiar to the force.

"Don't fool yourself, my girl," he said in his huge voice, which was now modulated to a degree that made it almost unfamiliar to himself. "You can't go through with this. There's always a weak link in the chain somewhere. It's up to me to find it, and I will."

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

"Now," she said, and there was respect in the glance she gave the stalwart man, "now you really sound dangerous."

Fannie appeared at the door.

"Mr. Edward Gilder wishes to see you, Miss Turner," she said. "Shall I show him in?"

"Oh, certainly," Mary answered, with an admirable pretense of indifference, while Burke glared at Demarest, and the district attorney appeared ill at ease.

CHAPTER XI.

Gilder Meets Bride.

THERE entered the erect, heavy figure of the man whom Mary had hated through the years. He stopped abruptly just within the room, gave a glance at the two men, then his eyes went to Mary, sitting at her desk, with her face lifted inquiringly. He did not pause to take in the beauty of that face, only its strength. He stared at her silently for a moment. Then he spoke, a little tremulous from anxiety.

"Are you the woman?" he said. There was something simple and primitive, something of dignity beyond the usual conventions, in his direct address.

Mary's acknowledgment was as plain as his own question.

"I am the woman. What do you want?"

"My son."

Mary guessed that his coming was altogether of his own volition, and not the result of his son's information, as at first she had supposed.

"Have you seen him recently?"

"No."

"Then, why did you come?"

"Because I intend to save my boy from a great folly. I am informed that he is infatuated with you, and Inspector Burke tells me—why—he tells me—why—he tells me"— He paused, unable for a moment to continue from an excess of emotion.

Inspector Burke filled the halting sentence.

"I told you she had been an ex-convict."

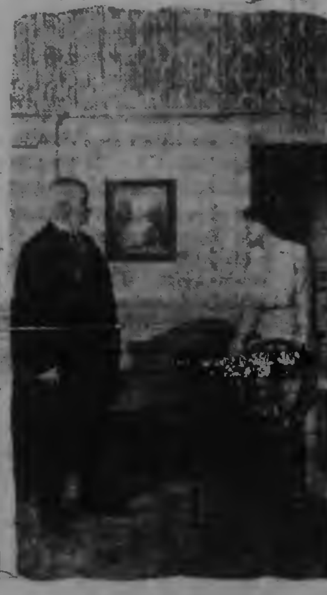
"Yes," Gilder said, after he had regained his self control. He stared at her pleadingly. "Tell me, is this true?"

Here, then, was the moment for which she had longed through weary days, through weary years. Here was the man whom she hated, suppliant before her to know the truth. Her heart quickened. Truly, vengeance is sweet to one who has suffered unjustly.

"Is this true?" the man repeated, with something of horror in his voice.

"It is," Mary said quietly.

For a little, there was silence in the room. At last, Gilder spoke with the sureness of a man of wealth, confident that money will salve any wound.



"Are you the woman?"

"How much?" he asked, baldly.

Mary smiled an inscrutable smile.

"Oh, I don't need money," she said, carelessly. "Inspector Burke will tell you how easy it is for me to get it."

"Do you want my son to learn what you are?" he said.

"Why not? I'm ready to tell him myself."

Then Gilder showed his true heart in which love for his boy was before all else.

"But I don't want him to know," he stammered. "Why, I've spared the boy all his life. If he really loves you—it will"—

At that moment, the son himself entered hurriedly. In his eagerness he saw no one save the woman he loved. At his entrance, Mary rose and moved backward a step involuntarily, in sheer surprise over his coming.

The young man went swiftly to her, while the other three men stood silent. Dick took Mary's hand in a warm clasp, pressed it tenderly.

"I didn't see father," he said happily, "but I left a note on his desk at the office."

Then, somehow, the surcharged atmosphere penetrated his consciousness, and he looked around, to see his father standing grimly opposite him. But there was no change in his expression beyond a more radiant smile.

"Hello, dad!" he cried, joyously. "Then you got my note?"

"No, Dick, I haven't had any note."

The young man spoke with simple pride.

"Dad we're married. Mary and I were married this morning."

Mary kept her eyes steadfast on the father. There was triumph in her gaze. This was the vengeance for which she had longed, for which she had plotted, the vengeance she had at last achieved. Here was her fruition, the period of her supremacy.

Gilder seemed dazed by the brief sentence.

"Say that again," he commanded.

"Dad, Mary and I were married this morning."

"I married your son this morning," Mary said in a matter of fact tone. "I married him. Do you quite understand, Mr. Gilder? I married him." In that insistence lay her ultimate compensation for untold misery. The father stood there wordless, unable to find speech against this calamity that had befallen him.

MONEY LENDERS.

Stories of Their Queer Clients and Their Little Ways.

People who, like Lord Newton, are sworn enemies of the professional money-lender will be pleased to hear that his business is not all beer and skittles, nor even billiards and champagne, says London Tit-Bits. For every genuine client the usurer receives ten applications from would-be borrowers whose one idea is to "do" him. This may seem far-fetched, but the information which follows was obtained from a person who has had a long experience in the money-lending business—his particular role being to make the inquiries which are a necessary preliminary to completing a loan. In passing, it may be noted that these inquiry fees are nicely calculated on the estimated capacity of the proposed client to pay, and range from five shillings to a couple of guineas. When there is a rush of proposals for loans a smart inquiry clerk can gather in £20 to £30 a day in fees, and very often not a penny of money will be lent in any of the cases.

It is only fair to Shylock, however, to state that would-be borrowers are in many cases such outrageous tricksters that inquiries are absolutely necessary. It is no uncommon thing for a borrower to enter on the proposal form the name of some friend as surety—said friend, being approach on the subject, indignantly repudiating the very idea of becoming surety for anybody on a money-lending proposition. Attempted impersonations is of daily occurrence. One applicant for a loan represented himself as the manager of a flourishing business in London. Inquiries showed that this enterprising person was only a junior clerk, and under notice to leave in the bargain.

A most elaborate fraud was once successfully brought off by a smart borrower, and his victims numbered eight of the money-lending fraternity. He wanted a certain fairly large sum on a bill of sale. The furniture offered as security was all his own, and, everything being in order, the money-lender was only too pleased to complete the transaction. The cunning borrower had, however, conducted negotiations with eight West-end usurers simultaneously, and, knowing that all money-lending transactions are registered, he made eight appointments to receive the money on the same day. This scheme necessitated the closest calculation, but it was completely successful, and the eight-fold debtor sailed for a sunnier shore.

Money-lenders are always ready to do business on a bill of sale, and this readiness, as in the case just recorded, often leads to loss. A City Shylock was once approached by a charming lady of excellent manners, and covered with jewelry, for a loan on the security of the contents of a large country house in one of the Home Counties. Combining business with pleasure, the money-lender [illegible] afternoon in the country and an inspection of the security offered. At the house in question he met an urbane and hospitable gentleman—whom the jewelry-adorned lady introduced as her husband. All was going well, and the loan would indubitably have been completed, when in the nick of time the money-lender found out that the house and all its valuable furniture belonged to a family who were traveling on the Continent, and that she of the jewelry and her "husband" were two of the upper servants who had been left in charge. The rest of the domestics had been given a day's holiday by the artful pair.

Making Stone From Mud.

The latest triumph in building material is the manufacture of "stone" out of "mud" that has almost the solidity and strength of concrete. Buildings constructed from this material really are adobe structures, but their durability is said to be almost equal to that of brick and the softer stones.

This material comes from the ferruginous schist of the mountain side and is screened through grizzlies and tamped into forms like those used in the making of concrete blocks.

England's Sinless Village.

A sinless village has been discovered in England. It is Blackwell, a snug little colliery town in the Derbyshire hills. "I know of no more model village than Blackwell," says the general manager of the local collieries. "There is no sin or wickedness here." The village policeman enjoys a perpetual holiday. A new man has just been engaged. The last one left his job through boredom. "I am wasting my life here," he said. It is all due to J. T. Todd, general manager of the collieries. Mr. Todd is a born leader of men and this, combined with the fact that he can at will dismiss evildoers, practically the whole population being employed at the colliery, is the secret of his power.

THE ROAD TO THE RIGHT.

YOU'VE met at least one of those few good old souls, who are constantly getting the worst of it when shopping, who don't believe in advertising. A hundred disappointing and instructive experiences have failed to teach him their plain lesson.

When he bought his first watch he was beguiled into buying one without a known name or a trustworthy guarantee. That watch—a poor timekeeper—cost him dearly by reason of missed appointments and missed trains, and for frequent repairs. Yet he paid the price of a good watch.

It is the same story with regard to his underwear, his shoes, and his fountain pen.

This good old soul's case is not unique. Many of us, if the truth be confessed, resemble him; we allow ourselves to be sold merchandise with an unknown brand or trade mark instead of buying merchandise which is well known to us through the medium of advertising. In slang language, we get "stung" pretty often.

In most of these cases we have ourselves to blame, for "the road to the right" thing to buy has been made plain by advertising.

There is no good reason for passing by the known thing, soundly guaranteed, to buy a dubious article, which, quality for quality, cannot be cheaper than the known, branded article.

"It is better to be sure than sorry."

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

SCORES OF GIRLS WANDER ABOUT THE STREETS WHEN THEY OUGHT TO BE HELPING MOTHER

Children not Given Sufficient Work to do in These Days Says Mrs. Wells

The Collegiate Hall was crowded to its limits last evening with men and women, chiefly women, to hear Mr. Stebbin Wells plead the cause of women police officers.

Mayor Bradburn occupied the chair and welcomed Mrs. Wells, who comes from Los Angeles, U. S. A. He said that if we did not take up these problems of city life in the early stages of our city's growth they would grow beyond control.

Mrs. Stebbins Wells is well known on both sides of, what she termed, the "imaginary line," and she has travelled over the continent advocating policewomen. She began her address by saying that the policewoman had come to meet the needs of a community composed of men, women and children. Women and children will not always come to a policeman for information or assistance, whereas they will not hesitate to come to a policewoman.

PREVENTION.

"Prevention" is the big word in all our modern methods, said Mrs. Wells, we have taken care of the wreckage too long, we must now prevent social wrecks. The policewoman is an emphasis on "Prevention." No matter how good a policeman may be or how much he may desire to carry out the law, he is handicapped. In the case of the Curfew Law he is at a disadvantage in its enforcement. She cited cases where policemen have escorted young girls to their homes after the legal hours and who have been abused by parents for so doing. The public does not realize the jeopardy in which a policeman is placed by trying to enforce this law, for people are only too ready to believe anything that is said against a policeman. But the policewoman is placed in a different position, what is the policeman's jeopardy is the policewoman's strategic opportunity. Mrs. Wells went on to illustrate this point from her own experience with girls and with parents, and she said that she always insisted that no girl should be left to go to places of amusements such as picture shows and skating rinks without being accompanied by her mother or some responsible person.

HAVE YOU DONE THE CHORES?

Comparing the new with the olden days, she said that, while she believed the world was growing better, she thought that children were not given sufficient to do in these days. In years gone by when life was much harder there was more for the young people to do in the home. There was the water to get, the chores to be done, the wood to cut, and circumstances helped us—but today we have to devise means of keeping our boys and girls busy. We have to fortify them against idleness, they will form the habit of irresponsibility if we do not teach them the habit of responsibility. Work is the world's salvation. "Scores of girls wander about the streets who ought to be helping mother at home."

Mrs. Wells said she hoped Peterborough would not become a great city. But that it would grow to a reasonable size so that it would develop those social and intellectual advantages essential to city life. Don't be too ambitious, she said, to become a great city, for you will gather into your arms all those evils and problems which beset the great cities of this continent.

Mrs. Wells speaking of the home said that parents were apt to be impatient with their children and often sent them out on the streets to be rid of the noise and worry of their presence. She said children could not be still, it was their nature to be restless and energetic and parents ought to provide means to work off this energy in a useful or interesting manner and not thrust them out upon the streets or send them to picture shows and skating rinks to get rid of them.

NO BIG POLICEMEN.

Speaking of the duties of police women, she said that they do not make arrests, as this was not necessary, most arrests in these days are done by summons. Muscular strength is not so much a qualification in these days even among policemen. "Nothing that I have had to do in the three years of my service as a policewoman would be unworthy of any lady in this audience." Mrs. Wells said too much was expected of our policemen that every citizen ought to consider himself a guardian of the community, and that every citizen had the right to arrest in a case of wrong-doing in his sight. "The degree of the enforcement of the law is in proportion to the vigilance of the community." You have only nine policemen in your city of twenty-two thousand people. 'Don't flatter yourselves," said Mrs. Wells, 'that you are so perfect a people that you don't need any more."

OUR WORRIED CHIEF.

"Your Chief has to worry and worry, and gets very little sympathy for worrying, although he stands it pretty well, for he does not look as if he worried." said the lady officer, amid much laughter.

"Sometime something will happen," she went on, "and then there will be a burst of indignation, and the blame will be put upon the police. Give your Chief more men, and by all means give him a policewoman."

Mrs. Wells dealt at some length with the liquor question and the social evil problem. She said these [illegible] would be no Police Problem at all. She said that in ten years' time the moderate drinker would be regarded as the excessive drinker is to-day. We must fight the social evil as we are fighting other diseases, such as tuberculosis. We teach children to avoid small-pox. Why not these more important dangers. We should not put our children off with irrelevant or curt answers when they ask questions about life. The child will know, and if we refuse it, it will get its knowledge from another source; we send our children out unequipped with the knowledge of life.

MR. DUMBLE AND THE LAMBS.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Wells' address the meeting was thrown open for questions. Magistrate Dumble arose and asked the speaker what provision was made for boys and girls to play in American cities. Mrs. Wells replied that there were special play-grounds with specially trained supervisors, both men and women. Mr. Dumble thought Peterborough women should take this matter up and force the Council to provide proper playgrounds, where boys and girls might work off their superfluous energy like the lambs in the field.

Mrs. Wells is a voluminous talker and kept the great audience interested for about two hours.

The meeting was an immense success, the hall being packed, while a large number of people had to be turned away. Thus showing that the citizens of Peterborough are awakening to the importance of taking in hand the problems with which Mrs. Wells dealt, so far as they affect our growing city. The Council of Women have made their presence felt.

EPIGRAMS FROM THE ADDRESS OF MRS. ALICE STEBBINS WELLS

The policewoman has come to meet the needs of a community composed of men, women and children.

We have taken care of wreckage too long, we must now prevent social wrecks.

What is the policeman's jeopardy is the policewoman's strategic opportunity.

Don't be too ambitious to become a great city, or you will gather into your arms all those evils which beset great cities.

Muscular strength is not so much a qualification in these days, even among policemen.

The degree of the enforcement of the law is in proportion to the vigilance of the community.

You have only nine policemen in your city of 22,000 people. Don't flatter yourselves that you are such a perfect people that you do not need any more.

Some time something will happen and then there will be a burst of indignation and the blame will be put upon the police.

But for the saloon and the social evil there would be no police problem.

"BOY" PROVED TO BE MARRIED MAN

Magistrate Was Wrong in His Guess at Prisoner's Age

Long experience in the magisterial chair has provided Magistrate Dumble with the faculty of sizing up the prisoners who come before the mill of justice, but His Worship was a little out this morning when a man giving his name as Fred Sullivan, appeared in court on the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

"How old is this boy?" asked the Magistrate. "He must be under age."

The "boy" turned out to be a married man, 26 years of age. He has a son aged five.

A fine of $2 was imposed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Mrs. Wells preached to a big audience at the Collegiate Institute hall, last night. She said many good things but particularly that nature was a manifestation of God. Now, if nature is a manifestation of God, it cannot be a manifestation of Satan and we should remember that when we are dealing with ~~our~~ view of life and eternity, God, not man, made the world and man has very little to do with it.

This is the Church of Christ Scientist view and it is not very far wrong.

Yours truly,
"READER."

The Offending Word.

Here in Canada we have some typical words which do not seem even slang to us, and which may sound very ridiculous or even annoying to other people.

A Toronto man tells about sitting in a Winnipeg hotel and hearing an Englishman in conversation with a typical Westerner. They appeared to be good friends, but apparently the man from the Old Land had been goaded to the edge of endurance by the people with whom he had conversed during the day. At last the Westerner made some remark which caused the following outburst, "So you use that word 'proposition' too. Well, I tell you I do not want to hear it again to-day. If you say it again I shall leave you. I shall call the waiter over to carry my glasses away, and take all the remainder of my drinks alone."

Mr. G. Galley, to Attend Boys' Work Conference

Boys' Secretary Galley of the Y. M. C. A., left to-day for Brockville, where he will attend the annual Boys' Work Conference. Representatives from the different Sunday Schools, however, will attend. The conference starts to-morrow and will continue for three days. Delegates from all over Ontario and Quebec will be present at the conference.

New Winter Coats for Women at a Fraction Over Half Price

Perhaps the biggest and best thing to be seen in the store on Saturday is this fine collection of Misses' and Women's Coats.

By taking a large number of them, we secured so great a reduction in the wholesale cost, that we present to every woman who needs a Coat, some very fine values at about half their regular price.

Thus quality and cheapness are side by side in these outer garments, which are divided into three groups at $9.75, $14.75 and $19.75. The sizes are 16, 18, 20 and 34, 36, 38, 40.

Those at $9.75

In this assortment the Johnny Coat occupies a prominent place. And there is also the general utility Coat and the storm Coat, the materials being heavy checks, tweeds, etc., some of the styles having trimmed backs, others the belted effects.

There are many with fancy collars, many with the convertible collar, and a choice is given between straight or cutaway fronts.

From $15 to $18 is the actual regular price of this line.

The $14.75 Coats

They are made of splendid Tweeds, Zibelines, Chinchillas, Boucles and Brocaded Matelasse, in a pleasing range of colors which includes greys, browns, blues, black and green mixtures.

Nothing short of $22 and $25 would purchase the degree of perfection in style and workmanship, one finds in these Coats, some of them having smart collars and facings of velvet, others the modish cutaway front, kimona sleeves and convertible collars. This line is of exceptional merit.

The Coats Priced $19.75

Beauty of design and workmanship are combined in these superior garments, with the best of seasonable materials.

There are those of reversible Golf Cloths, the thick, warm Tweeds, and rich Boucles with glossy curl.

They are mostly half lined with satin, and are cut upon the very latest and most popular lines.

The splendid value is better understood by the fact that some of these Coats are worth $35. While none would sell for less than $25 in the usual way.

HAVELOCK HAS TO PAY DAMAGES

Town Laborers Were Negligent And Plaintiff Got $30

At Division Court proceedings in Havelock, Judge Huycke awarded Thos. Forsythe $30.00 and costs in his suit for $50 damages to his lot. When the case came up it appeared that the damage suit was brought for destruction of vegetables in Forsythe's garden, caused by cows that obtained access owing to the town laborers neglecting to put up a fence they had removed when engaged at work on the plaintiff's King street lot. It was also proved in Court that the Council had actually agreed with Forsythe to hand him over a street and sidewalk if he would deed the lot in question to the town. Forsythe [illegible] but the council backed down when they realized the indignation of the ratepayers at their fool scheme to provide the plaintiff with a street and sidewalk at the town's expense. F. D. Kerr of Peterboro appeared for the town, and Mr. Goodwill of Peterboro for Mr. Forsythe. The case will probably cost the town $60.00 in all, and it should be a lesson to all councils to keep within the law in their dealings with the people's money.

HE CELEBRATES BOTH OCCASIONS

John Walsh, drunk in a public place pleaded guilty at this morning's session of Police Court. In court John claimed he was going to the woods, but His Worship claimed that John always got drunk before going to the woods, and also had a big one after he returned. Walsh had only fifty cents to do him. "Get out of the city at once," was the order of the court.

LOCAL MAN IS TRYING TO LOCATE BROTHER AND SISTERS

May Phillips Has Lost Trace of Them — May be in Rochester

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 20.—J. R. Pollock, of 214 Antrim street, Peterborough, Ont., has communicated with Police Chief Quigley, of Rochester, relative to assisting him in locating in Rochester two sisters and a brother of one May Phillips, who now resides in Peterborough, Ont., but who formerly lived at 71 Stone street, Rochester, with her aunt and uncle, whose name was Fitzpatrick. [illegible] Phillips went with her aunt to St. Thomas, Ont., in which town the aunt died, and then the girl went to Peterborough, where she has since lived.

May Philips was about 8 years old when she left Rochester, and had been separated from her sisters and brother some time prior to that. Her eldest sister's name was Lucy, but May Phillips does not know the name of her other sister or her brother. If relatives of the young woman reside in Rochester, they are asked to communicate with the Rochester police or write to Mr. Pollock at Peterborough, Ontario.

QUICK SALES IN REAL ESTATE

H. J. McCannon is Doing Well in Real Estate Operations

Mr. H. J. McCannon is having singular success at his real estate agency in Banks' store. In two months and a half, Mr. McCannon sold 22 houses which is quite a record.

Only recently, a customer listed a lot with him at a special price for that day. Mr. McCannon found a purchaser and the deal was consummated by night. He had another property on Stewart St., listed in the morning and a cash offer wired to the owner in Edmonton that same evening. The next day brought an acceptance of the offer.

Mr. McCannon's experience as a building contractor and the enviable reputation for good service and fair dealing, gained by him, has no doubt played a prominent part in his success in the real estate market.

MR. WOODSIDE IN FRONT RANKS OF PREACHERS

He Will Give His Closing Address at Knox Church To-night

To-night will probably see the close of the special services in Knox church. Rev. Mr. Woodside leaves on the early morning train for his own work in Brantford, where he has a very large congregation. From his effective addresses this week he can easily rank among the strong preachers of the country. Last night he [illegible] attempted [illegible] home to individual experiences in a way that made the large congregation do some personal heart searching. Miss McNab sang two solos during the service which was followed by a brief prayer service.

A men's choir, which will assist at to-night's service of praise, made the singing part of the service go with a swing. To-night's closing meeting commences at 7.45.

Savages and News.

The mystifying rapidity with which native races obtain news of distant events has for long been a matter of discussion. For example, the British defeat by the Zulus at Isandula was well known to the Kaffirs of Cape Town hours before the receipts of the official telegraphic dispatch, and there are very many instances of a like kind. Now we have another reminder of the same fact in the refusal of the British Secretary for the Colonies to inform Parliament as to the whereabouts of the Camel Corps which is engaged in operations against the Mad Mullah in the wilds of Somaliland. Any information that might be divulged, said the Secretary, would be known by the Mullah almost instantly. But by what means does the black man transmit his information more quickly than the white man can send it by telegraph? It is no longer superstitious to suggest telepathy, but is it possible that savages know more of this than we do? Is it possible that any one knows more about anything than we do?

Keeping Children Still in School.

Sir John Cockburn, speaking to teachers at the London Day Training college, said speech was called into function by the movement of the hand.

"If you want to reach the brain you must do it through the hand, and if you disregard the use of the eyes and hands in education you are placing the brake on all mental development of the child. The command to 'keep still' in a school is the greatest cruelty you can possibly impose on children, for to make children keep still for any length of time very often produces deformity."

SHOULDER IS HURT AGAIN

Young Girl Who Jumped From Second Storey Window Leaves House

Some time ago reference was made in the columns of the Review to a twelve-year-old orphan girl, whose strange tactics astonished residents of that locality. It will be remembered that when kept upstairs by her foster-parents to await the coming of the officials to take her to the Shelter, she jumped from an upstair window and escaped. In doing so she broke her shoulder bone, but she went to school and remained away until that night, when the [illegible] The break was [illegible] and the doctor warned her to remain in bed, as the slightest jar would perhaps injure her again. It was thought that this accident would bring her to her senses, but did it? Her erratic actions were only partially subdued, and she left the house again. Her foster-mother went immediately and brought her home, but the child had in some manner injured the shoulder again. Medical aid was at once called, and now her condition is extremely serious.

Not considering the anguish and trouble this child has caused them, this kind couple express their wish of keeping her even if they have to get another child to keep her company. People of this calibre are not found every day.

Some people boast that they never boast.

Shadowed

By RUTH GRAHAM

During that period when the late Russian revolution was brewing Sonia Katrovich, a young wife of twenty, lived in St. Petersburg at her home with her husband. They were both members of a secret propaganda embracing many persons whose object it was to scatter printed matter intended to awaken the people to their wrongs and incite them to rebellion. There were a number of depositories for this literature, and the home of the Katrovichs was one of them.

The police learned of the whereabouts of one of these depositories and, as was their custom, instead of raiding it at once, set a spy upon it with a view to learning what persons went there, assuming that all visitors were members of the propaganda. One morning Mme. Katrovich went to this depository that the police were watching to take some revolutionary literature there. The place was a single room on the third floor of a building occupied for various purposes. Having finished her visit, Sonia opened the door suddenly and just in time to see a man dart up the stairs leading to the next story above. She did not see his face nor his clothes sufficiently to mark him, but she knew instinctively what had happened. The depository had been discovered by the police and she would be shadowed to her home. Retaining her presence of mind, she continued on her way, knocking at different doors as though looking for some one. Receiving a negative answer to her question, she passed down and out of the building.

Either she must outwit the spy or both she and her husband must spend the rest of their lives in Siberia. She must not go home, and she must contrive to make her husband aware of what had happened. To gain time she visited certain shops. The first shop she entered a man followed her inside and looked over articles with the pretense of buying. Sonia suspected him, but was not sure that he was her shadower till he followed her into another store.

After Sonia had visited several stores she felt at liberty to enter one kept by [illegible] Petrof, a member of the propaganda, without [illegible] him. Calling on him for some gloves she [illegible] him of the situation that he might at once get word of the danger to her husband and he might remove the literature.

When she left the store the man who watched her approached her.

"Conduct me to your home," he said.

"What means this?" she asked, affecting surprise.

After awhile he admitted the truth, and she told him that she had gone to the building for the purpose of finding a former servant of hers, but had been misinformed as to the address.

"I have no objection to taking you to my home," she said, "and I will easily prove to you that I am loyal to the government. But I warn you that I have some very good friends who are influential with the government, and I will not be put to any inconvenience."

At this the man assumed a more respectful manner and lifted his hat politely.

"I am looking for a certain kind of goods," continued Sonia, "that I need and shall be obliged to visit one or two stores, then I will take you home with pleasure."

Sonia, being of the better class, was enabled to assume an importance that affected the official. She went into several more shops and kept clerks hunting for the goods she wished. At last she feigned to find exactly what she wanted and on paying for it gave the address of her home, to which it was to be sent. The police official noted the location, pricking up his ears as she gave it.

It would not suit Sonia's game to keep the man too long. She must take some risk. It was nearly two hours after she had left the menage with Petrof that she told her captor that she was ready to go to her home, and she led him there in a perfectly straight course. But it was all she could do to bear up under the suspense. If her husband had not received her message there was that in store for them far worse than death. As she went up the steps of her house she almost fainted, but with an effort she opened the front door. No one was to be seen. She opened a door leading into another room where her husband sat at a desk writing.

"Well, dear," he said without looking up from his work, "you have been gone quite awhile." Then, raising his eyes and seeing his wife's attendant, he appeared surprised. Sonia knew that had he not been warned he would have doubtless turned pale.

"Yes," she said. "I have been delayed in finding the goods I need for my gown."

She then explained her having an attendant who needed to be satisfied that they were loyal to the czar.

"That is very easy," said her husband. "I am at this moment writing a paper on the necessity of the Russian people remaining loyal to the government."

He handed the unfinished paper to the official and bade him search the house, from which everything incriminating had been removed. But so well had the game been played that the officer was satisfied and went away without taking any further action.

Bells of St. Paul's.

Apropos of the renovation of the dome and cross of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, it might be mentioned that the bells of the famous church are rung on Sundays, Holy days, and special occasions by twelve members of the Society of College Youths. The duty of chiming the bells for the week-day service falls upon George Harrison who, by passing the ropes through a series of pulleys, thus bringing them together, is able to chime six bells by himself. It might be mentioned that the Society of College Youths has been in existence since 1637.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Particles In the Eye.

Small substances like cinders, dust or small chips of stone or metal can often be removed from the eye by very simple means. Sometimes the flow of tears washes them out. At other times catching the upper lid by the lashes and pulling it away from eyeball and down over the lower lid, then letting it go so that as it recedes its under surface is swept by the edge of the lower lid, will clear it out. If this does not prove successful a loop made of horsehair or of a long human hair can be passed under the lid and swept from the outer side toward the nose and drawn down.

Better than this, however, is the washing of the eye or flushing with the eye dropper. Have the patient catch hold of the lower and upper lids, drawing them away from the eye, and then fill the dropper [illegible] a small syringe, [illegible] three times. This will always remove the cinder at once. Should lime get into the eye it should be treated in the same manner, first with water and then with vinegar or lemon juice and water—a teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice to a teacupful of water—poured over the eyeball.

Renovating Bishop's Club.

The renovation of the outside of the Athenaeum Club, "the rendezvous of old fogeys," as Whistler once audaciously termed it, reminds one of the fact that among the great clubs in London the Athenaeum has probably given rise to more stories than any other. It has been facetiously alluded to as "Bishopsgate" on account of the many clergymen among its members, in contradistinction to its near neighbor, the United Service Club, known by reason of the ancient warriors who frequent it as "Cripplegate." At one time the Athenaeum was famous for its Irish stew and pancakes.

What A1 at Lloyd's Means.

A1 at Lloyd's is a colloquialism frequently heard, but its true meaning is a mystery to many people.

In the early days underwriters at Lloyd's wanted to know the condition of ships before effecting an insurance of the vessels or their cargoes, and they engaged captains to inspect the ships.

If a vessel were sound in hull it was placed in Class A, if satisfactory in equipment, which in the bygone days of wooden sailing vessels included sails and ropes, it was classed A1.—Daily Telegraph.

Other Objections.

While James McNeill Whistler, the eccentric painter, was trying on a hat in a London shop one day, a customer rushed in, and mistaking Mr. Whistler for a clerk, exclaimed: "I say, this 'at doesn't fit." The artist eyed him for a minute, and then replied, scornfully: "Neither does your coat, and I'll be hanged if I like the color of your trousers."

Hyde Park.

Originally Hyde Park, London's great playground, was inclosed for a hunting ground for royalty.

A PLAN FOILED

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Martin Borland, a man of wealth, having lost his wife, married again. The new connection was especially unfortunate for him and his only child, Mildred, who was sixteen years old at the time of her father's second marriage. Mrs. Borland was no sooner married than she laid a plan to secure her husband's fortune. He was suffering from an incurable disease when she married him, and this enabled her to work her plan more easily.

Her first move was to make the house so unpleasant for her stepdaughter that she was forced to leave it and go to live with an aunt. This enabled her to have her husband to herself, and as soon as his daughter had gone the stepmother began a systematic nagging upon her husband to compel him to make a will leaving his property to her.

Had Mr. Borland been in good health he might have withstood her prodding; but, affected as he was with a nervous disease and made a virtual prisoner by his wife, it was not long before he broke down under the strain and signed a will leaving all his possessions to her, except some swamp lands that were nearly worthless.

Previous to his marriage Borland had willed everything he owned to Mildred. Mrs. Borland knew of this will and would have forced it from her husband that she might destroy it, but it was in Mildred's keeping. The only thing that Jezebel could do was to torture her husband into making another in her own favor. As Mr. Borland grew worse his wife kept every one from him except his physician and an occasional friend, her brother giving as a reason that the invalid was not in a condition to see any one. She realized that Mildred's friends after her father's death might advise her to try to break the will, but the schemer relied upon her being able to cut off any proof that any undue influence had been brought to bear on the testator. She changed the servants frequently in order that they might not get an inkling of what she was doing. She once a week introduced into the sickroom friends of her husband, but never permitted any of them to remain alone with him a moment.

At last Borland died. His wife produced the will he had made in her favor, and a lawyer to whom she had paid a large retaining fee stood ready to enforce it against any demands that might be set up by poor Mildred, who had not a cent in the world to prosecute with and no one to take an interest in her case.

Soon after her father's death Mildred asked permission of her stepmother to take away a few belongings she had left there. She was permitted to do so, was denied nothing she claimed and went away with a boxful of odds and ends, among them a few books. On getting them to her home she looked them over tearfully before putting them away. Some of the books she had loved when a child. One of these she took up and was reading a familiar passage when she noticed a daub on a word. Turning the page, she noticed [illegible] word. A few pages [illegible] another. Turning over the leaves she found the book full of these daubs that had evidently been made with different substances. Scrutinizing them closely, she found that some of them might have been made with a drop of coffee, some with the juice of a berry, and on one so much of the substance had been left that she was able to examine it closely and surmised it to be potato.

Mildred was puzzled. She tried to remember from what room she had taken it, but could not do so. A suspicion came to her that these daubs might mean something. Two words that were daubed "wife" and "Will" directed the suspicion. She wrote the words down in the order in which they came, but they were a jumble. If they had been daubed to tell something the person who had done the work had not been able to find consecutive words for the purpose.

Then Mildred cut out the words she had written and began trying to arrange them so that they would mean something. Several times she gave up the puzzle, but always returned to it. She made certain sentences, but found nothing intelligible for the whole. Finally she hit upon two words "my" and "wife" for a beginning, which after many transpositions solved the puzzle. The final reading was this:

> My wife is holding me a prisoner. I cannot communicate with any one except her and her brother. She has forced me to make a will in her favor. It is not my last will and testament. That instrument is possess (ed) by my daughter, to whom I give all my property.

There was no date or signature. Mildred's theory was that her father had managed to keep the book near him and when his meals were brought to him had used bits of food in lieu of a pencil. She carried the book to a lawyer, who took up her case in the courts and by skillful management succeeded in getting the cipher message accepted as evidence. The case dragged a long while, and in time Mrs. Borland's lawyer offered to compromise. But Mildred's counsel advised her to hang on for all or nothing. Finally a judgment was obtained setting aside the will made under duress and validating the one held by Mildred.

Sugar Is Dear In France.

People in France when they dine at restaurants frequently appropriate the sugar they don't happen to use. Sugar in France is dear, and what is served with the coffee belongs by right to the purchaser as much as the coffee itself. So why not take a lump or two home to little Jeanne or Pierre?

Placing Him.

She turned upon him imperiously and swept him from head to foot with one disdainful glance. "What have you to say for yourself?"

The dude cowered before her, abashed, and then passed through the door without a word.

She shook her head sadly.

"Once more is the old saying verified 'it goes without saying.'"

She gently closed the door behind him.—New York Evening Journal.

THE DOUBLE RED CROSS.

Emblem of Anti-tuberculosis Workers All Over the World.

The double red cross, the symbol of the war against tuberculosis, was first adopted as the symbol of the International Anti-tuberculosis association in Berlin in October, 1902. The proposer of the symbol was Dr. G. Sersiron of Paris, who is now associated secretary of L'Association Centrale Française Contre la Tuberculose.

Today the emblem is being used by anti-tuberculosis workers in every part of the world, even in Iceland, India, South Africa, Labrador, Japan, China and the Philippines. The double red cross is similar in shape to a cross used frequently in the Greek Catholic churches and also to the Lorraine cross of France. All of the arms of the cross are pointed, the two cross arms being of the same length. The width of the cross is taken as the unit in determining the proportions. The length of the lower arm is seven units, the arms are three units on either side, the point above the arms two and a half units and the distance between the arms one and a half units. These measurements hold good for any size.

In the United States over 1,200 anti-tuberculosis associations and committees, nearly 550 sanitariums and hospitals, 400 dispensaries and about 200 open air schools, besides a number of other organizations, are using the double red cross as their emblem. Wherever it is seen, it means war against tuberculosis.

Na-Dru-Co Laxatives accomplish their purpose with maximum efficiency and minimum discomfort. Increasing doses are not needed.

SAYS PETES HAD THE BEST BALANCED CLUB IN LEAGUE

Ottawa Club in Favor of Six Clubs—Drop Guelph and Berlin

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—If the Ottawa Baseball club has its way, there will be a six-club circuit in the Canadian league for next season. Manager Frank Shaughnessy stated yesterday that such a series embracing Ottawa, Hamilton, London, St. Thomas, Brantford and Peterboro would just be his ideal. He likes the idea of Erie and other towns in New York state, but doubts if they will be ready in time. Erie has been given until January 1 in which to organize, and the Canadian league's composition will not be known until after that date. "Shag" thinks that St. Thomas, Brantford and Peterborough can be developed into first-class ball towns, and is also of the opinion that it would be a good move to drop both Guelph and Berlin. The question will be threshed out at the annual meeting, which is to be held next month at Toronto. With a six-club circuit, as suggested by the Ottawas, the clubs would probably be far better off. It would mean additional visits to the capital of the strong teams like London and Hamilton, and the others could also strengthen. It would be a better financial proposition as well, as Guelph and Berlin have not only been poor drawing cards on the road, but they seldom draw crowds of any proportions when at home. St. Thomas and Brantford, with good teams, would do exceptionally well, and Peterborough has already shown its qualifications for a permanent berth in the league. Peterborough really had the best-balanced club in the league last year, and with proper management they would have won the pennant. They had a first-class pitching staff and some of the hardest hitters in the Canadian league. Next year Peterborough will certainly be heard from.

AGREEMENT WITH THE RINK MANAGEMENT IS EXPECTED

"Kel" and Other Players Are Working Out on the Road—

The officers of the Hockey Club will meet to-night and it is expected an agreement with the rink management will be brought about. It is more than likely that all of last season's players who are still in the city will be found fighting again for the blue and white. There are several new players in town, who, with Fred Kelly are doing some training on the road, and altogether there are good grounds for the belief that a winning intermediate team and a junior team will appear on the ice when the gong sounds.

AWAY FROM HOME

Peterboro hockey fans will have quite a time following the performances of local boys with other clubs. Harold Clancy and Frank Heffernan are with Toronto teams; Leo Derocher will be with Ottawa College, Jerry Coughlin will perform for Ingersoll and Art Hall, who is now in Detroit may continue to play the game there. George Ross is at Orillia and Rollie Weir at Syracuse. Harold Morrow of the Juniors is in Kingston and Orme Cavanah is a student at Woodstock College.

Their Strange Guide

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Everybody in Paris dines in a cafe. That's what gives that city its especial flavor. After dinner this same "everybody" devotes himself to pleasure. Edward Fawning, an American, and his bride were in this city of joyful adventures and were dining at a cafe on Rue Rivoli. They had both heard of the view of life to be had in Paris and had come there to witness it, having agreed that they would do so together, the husband not going anywhere that he could not take his wife.

But they did not know where to go. What is the use of being in a city where strange sights are to be seen without knowing where they are, what they are or how to get to them? Then, dinner finished, they were ready to go forth to take a peep at this gay city, but they still sat over their wine, for they had no guide. A man sat at a table near by, and Fawning, who spoke French fairly, said to him:

"Monsieur, my wife and I are Americans who have come to Paris to see what is to be seen, keeping within the bounds of what a lady may witness. Can you tell us of some of the places of interest and how to get to them."

"Would monsieur like a guide?"

"Most assuredly."

"Then I am at your service."

A bargain was struck wherein Fawning should pay 50 francs, or $10, and the stranger should show them where to go. A taxicab was ordered, and the three entered, the stranger directing the coachman where to drive.

"Are you a professional guide?" asked Fawning as they rolled along.

"No, monsieur."

"I suppose you took pity on us," rejoined Fawning.

"I go with you for company. I am very alone in the world. I do not make friends easily."

"What is your regular business?"

"I am a surgeon."

Both bride and groom looked surprised. A surgeon was not a man to act as guide for a couple of Americans. Besides, the man did not have a professional cut. On the contrary, he was a very ordinary looking person.

"What is your name?" asked Fawning.

"Call me monsieur. It would not do for me to give you my name."

"I see. You, a surgeon, would not like to have it known that you have been a guide. You need not fear for us; we do not know a single person in Paris. But I can understand your fancy for taking up with a couple of strangers for a few hours, especially since you say you are in need of companionship. There is nothing so depressing as loneliness."

"Besides, my professional work is not inspiring."

"By no means. The severing of human limbs, to me, would be horrible."

They drew up to a building where the tango was being danced. Monsieur told them to go up to a gallery and he would wait for them in the carriage. Fawning asked him to go with them, but he said that it would not do for [illegible]. Fawning could not understand [illegible] the companionship [illegible] but acquiesced. Indeed, there [illegible] something about the man that gave Mrs. Fawning a dread of him, and she was pleased that he had remained behind.

Those foreign curiosities that one hears so much about seldom come up to the expectation. Mrs. Fawning was not especially interested in the dances, and they did not remain long. Monsieur drove them to several other sights, but they were not especially charmed. About 11 o'clock they stopped at a restaurant and invited their guide to go in with them and drink a bottle of champagne.

"There will be no need for you to pay for the wine," said monsieur. "I esteem myself honored by having been admitted to your company. The fact is that I must perform an operation in the morning, and I dislike to be alone in the meantime. I feel under great obligations to you for keeping my mind off my work."

They entered the cafe, and the guide refused to take the fee offered him, saying that he only agreed to it thinking that Fawning would not accept his services gratis. When the party were seated at a table he ordered a supper and champagne. Fawning insisted on paying the bill when it came, but it did not come. Finally Fawning said:

"Monsieur, I think we had better pay for our supper and go; madame is getting tired."

"In five minutes," returned the other, looking at a clock. "I must go at 12 to prepare for my operation."

"What—an operation so early in the morning!"

"The law prescribes the hour."

Mrs. Fawning looked at her husband uneasily. There was something about this strange man that repelled her. But she held her ground till midnight, when monsieur, bidding them good night, departed.

"Waiter, the bill!" said Fawning as soon as their guide had gone.

"There is no bill."

"Why so?"

"Monsieur de Paris never pays. All is free to him."

"Who is Monsieur de Paris? He said he was a surgeon."

"A surgeon! Yes, he is a surgeon in a specialty. He cuts off the heads of criminals."

Mrs. Fawning shuddered. "Come," she said; "let us get away at once."

CHRISTENING OF CANADA.

Some Absurd Folk Etymologies and Speculative Origins.

A recent article on the origin of the word "Canada" is as follows:

An article in a London publication says that the name "Canada" came from the exclamation of some disappointed Spanish gold hunters who looked up a gulch, saw no gold and exclaimed, "Aca nada!" Hence the name "Canada," meaning "nothing here."

In Gannett's "Origin of Certain Place Names," published by the United States Geological Survey as Bulletin 258, it is recorded that "Sir John Barlow says the Portuguese, who first ascended the St. Lawrence, believing it to be a passage to the Indian Sea, expressed their disappointment by saying 'Canada' [illegible] fact "aca" means in both Portuguese and Spanish "hither," motion toward. Rest in a place is expressed by "aqui" in both languages and it is impossible for any one conversant with either language to say "hither nothing" when they mean "here nothing." He would say "Aqui nada."

In the same Gannett book "Canada" is further defined:

Father Hennepin says the Spaniards were the original discoverers of the country, but upon landing they were disappointed in the general appearance of the country and expressed their feelings by saying "Il Capa di Nada," "Capo Nothing."

It does seem amazing that such puerile explanations should be made and accepted unchallenged. "Il" and "di" are neither Spanish nor Porrtuguese. Both are Italian, and the first is the masculine definite article "the," in this case improperly used with a feminine noun. "Di" is Italian for "of." "Capa" is not Italian, but Spanish and Portuguese, and means "cape"; but it is the kind of a cape that a woman or a bull fighter puts around his shoulders and not the kind of a cape that juts out into the water. "Nada" is both Portuguese and Spanish and means "nothing."

If "Canada" were spelled phonetically it would be "Canyada," with the accent on the second syllable. It is a common Spanish word and means a ravine or gulch. If it is very deep or long or has very abrupt sides it is called a "canyon," with the accent on the last syllable. The name was probably given by Spanish explorers who called the country "Las Canyadas," or the valleys, on account of its broken or undulating surface; and the name has survived in the singular number "Canada."

A Curious Legacy.

The editor of a Swiss newspaper, the Schweitzerische Volkswacht, has just had a legacy of $20 per annum left him by a man whom he had never even heard of. The clause of the will containing the bequest is rather a curious one, running as follows: "On Jan. 1 and Aug. 1 of each year a sum of $10 shall be paid to the editor of the Schweitzerische Volkswacht on condition that he shall drink on the two days above mentioned a glass of beer in honor of the deceased. This legacy shall hold good until the death of the legatee."

Good cooks may be born but education will do a lot for a poor one.

NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. From places where the first class fare is less than $2.50, a return ticket will be issued for single fare plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the province, except the territory west of Azilda on the C.P.R. round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held over 3,500, with pigeons canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production 23

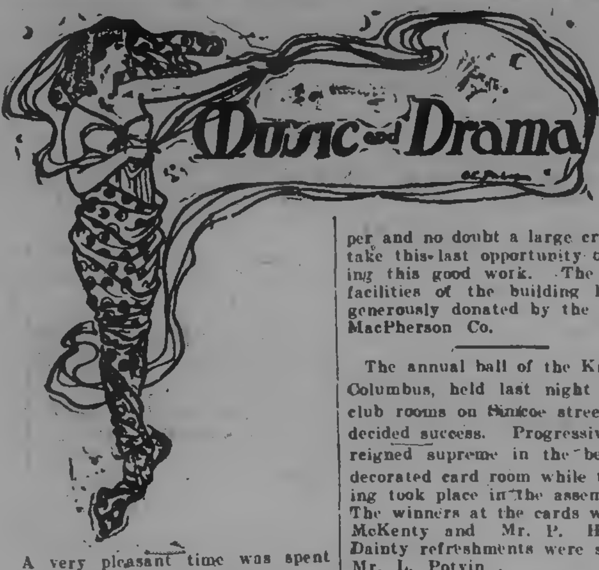
UP STAIRS IN OLD T.A.S. ROOMS
PETERBORO' MILLINERY PARLORS, 435 George St.
Mrs. W. B. Armstrong



A very pleasant time was spent last evening by the Woodmen of the World in their spacious hall on George street. During the evening Tuckers Orchestra rendered beautiful music while the happy crowd played progressive euchre. Refreshments were served by Coleman Bros. The committee in charge were Messrs. W. Gibbs, E. Waterman, E. Lebar and A. Graham.

Over three hundred people dined last evening at the bazaar being held in the market hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of St. James' Church. The ladies in charge deserve great credit for the excellent manner in which they handled the large crowd and for the accommodation they provided.

Several members remarked to the Review that everything pointed to the bazaar being a bigger success than ever. The booths especially show a decided increase over last year.

A big asset to last evening's entertainment was a very fine concert, every number of which was heartily received by the appreciative audience. Rev. J. N. Clarry acted as chairman. The program was:

Overture—Turner's Orchestra.
Solo—Mr. Hodson.
Duet—Mrs. Clarry and Miss Palmer.
Solo, "Scotch"—Mr. Hendrie.
Recitation—Miss Christie.
Laughing Trio—Boys' Class.
Recitation—Miss Clarke.
Solo—Miss F. Emmerson.
Recitation—Miss [illegible]
Selection by Orchestra.
[illegible] duet — Miss Gum[illegible] Miss Graves.
Solo—Mrs. Davidson.
Reading—Mr. Soden.
Solo—Miss Greenhalgh.
Violin solo—Miss Logan.
Reading—Miss Thomas.
Chorus "Rule Britannia" led by Mr. Greene.
God Save the King.

The bazaar will be brought to a close to-night immediately after supper and no doubt a large crowd will take this last opportunity of assisting this good work. The lighting facilities of the building has been generously donated by the F. R. J. MacPherson Co.

The annual ball of the Knights of Columbus, held last night in their club rooms on Simcoe street, was a decided success. Progressive euchre reigned supreme in the beautifully decorated card room while the dancing took place in the assembly hall. The winners at the cards were Miss McKenty and Mr. P. Heffernan. Dainty refreshments were served by Mr. L. Potvin.

Grand Knight V. J. McElderry attended his duties as host in a very efficient manner and entertained many out-of-town guests by showing them through the magnificent club rooms.

The committee who were indefatigable in the discharge of their duties were, Messrs. Dr. McNulty, C. H. Pennefather, J. Corkery, Sr., H. Phelan, C. Brady, F. McGrath, J. Sullivan and L. Potvin.

Music was provided by the Grand Opera House Orchestra.

PROFITS FROM HYDRO ELECTRIC FOR THE PEOPLE

How Public Ownership Pays in Other Cities—Reduced Rates

In view of the approaching service of Hydro-Electric power announcement of the general reduction in hydro rates is of much interest.

In London, for instance, the lighting bills will go down 15 per cent. The surplus this year from the hydro department will be over $45,000.

This reduction gives consumers at London the same rate as in Toronto despite the fact that London has to pay transmission charges on 100 miles further than Toronto.

INCREASED DISCOUNT

The recommended reduction of Hydro-electric rates to consumers will be proceeded with at the earliest opportunity as soon as the municipalities have been consulted. In the cases of Toronto, Ottawa and London the Commission has already prepared figures and will recommend that the lower prices come into force on January 1 next. In Ottawa and London the existing discount of 10 per cent, both on domestic and commercial lighting will be increased to 25 per cent, while a reduction of 18 per cent. will take place in power, and $1 per light in street lighting.

MUNICIPAL CO-OPERATION

The result is due solely to the hearty and sympathetic co-operation of the municipalities with the Commission, said Hon. Adam Beck, when interviewed on the report, "and their efficient administration. To the municipalities is due the credit. That the information is authoritative and ready so promptly is also due to the adoption by the municipalities of a standard system of accounting, by which they were constantly able to keep in touch with the business."

When Mayor Carter of Guelph spoke at the meeting of the Co-operative Society on Wednesday night, his remarks regarding the hydro-electric and gas departments at Guelph were most enthusiastic.

In speaking on the proposed cut in the rates, on his return to Guelph, Mayor Carter was very optimistic, and although he could not definitely state what the reduction would mean to local consumers, stated that he thought it would be in the neighborhood of 15 per cent.

Mayor Carter further stated that all the departments in the city had paid. During the year over three hundred electric services had been installed, and over three hundred and twenty gas services.

The mayor also stated that he could see no reason why there should not be a further reduction in rates next year, if the prospective increased business was realized.

LAD GOES BACK TO BANCROFT

He is Wanted on Charge of Stealing Rifle

Ernest Bartrell, the youth that appeared in court last week on the charge of vagrancy, will be sent back to Bancroft where he is wanted on the charge of stealing a rifle from his employer. Bartrell came here and going to Adjutant McElheney, gave out a rather beautiful "hard luck" story which resulted in the Adjutant giving him money. The youth shortly afterwards was arrested and told so many different stories to the police that they were at a loss to account for his strange behavior. Information was received by the Chief, however, that the boy was wanted in Bancroft on the escaped from the State Industrial School in Vermont in company with charge of theft. He admitted having the other boy who is in jail at Bancroft.

He will leave to-night in custody of an officer.

SHIPPING MAN DENIES THAT WEXFORD WAS UNSEAWORTHY

First Session of Inquest at Goderich Into Lake Disaster Elicits Little of Importance Regarding Cause of Loss of Life.

GODERICH, Nov. 22—A four-hour session of the coroner's inquest on the victims of the lake disaster, held yesterday afternoon at the town hall, failed to bring out any important information as to the cause of the loss of so many vessels on Sunday night, Nov. 9. The enquiry turned largely on the seaworthiness of the steamer Wexford, and Capt. Wm. J. Basset of Collingwood, managing director of the Western Steamship Co., owners of the Wexford, indignantly denied as slander the reports that the vessel was leaky or otherwise in poor shape, or that masters and owners of vessels were careless about the condition of lifeboats, lifebelts and other safety apparatus or craft. As to the vexed question of the foghorn, it was clearly shown that it was not blowing until 11 p.m., or later, but Lighthouse Keeper Robinson declared that all the foghorns on the lakes could not have saved the vessels out on the lake that night. A point established was that it was not considered the duty of any one in particular to see that the fog whistle was blown. If the man at the town power station, where the whistle is located, happened to think about it on a foggy day they would blow it; but nobody felt any particular responsibility in the matter.

J. B. Kelly, chief engineer at the municipal power house, said the fog whistle started to blow about 11 o'clock. He had no instructions from the Government for the blowing of the whistle. Under the former lighthousekeeper the whistle was blown under his instructions; or sometimes, if the men at the power house noticed it was foggy or had their attention called to it by anyone else, they would start it.

Henry Stowe, one of the staff of the power house, said it was nobody's duty in particular to look after the fog-horns.

Captain Wm. Robinson, a former lake captain, and now for over two years lighthousekeeper, said he had a busy time that night keeping his light clear. The snow was piling up so high outside the lantern that he had to go out about every fifteen minutes to scrape it off. There was no telephone at the lighthouse and he could not leave the place to give instructions about fog-horns.

The captain's record showed that the storm signals had been up from Friday, the 7th.

Wm. Marlton, one of the owners of the dredges here, said that his dredge had whistled when the storm displaced her goods up to 3.30. That afternoon a vessel could have entered the harbor. From what Captain Stephen of the Kaministiquia, had said of the location of the Wexford when sighted from his vessel that day, it should have reached Goderich about three o'clock.

The evidence of Mr. Marlton and other witnesses went to show that there was no boat outside the harbor that afternoon calling for assistance. People hearing the dredge whistle took it for a vessel in distress.

Several witnesses then testified to the seaworthiness of the Wexford.

Captain Wm. J. Bassett, manager of the Western Steamship Co., said the Wexford was built at Sunderland, Eng., in 1883. Asked as to the condition of Goderich harbor, the witness said: "It is one of those political harbors; they do just about enough work on it each year to hold the vote." When finished it would be an easier harbor to enter.

The inquest was adjourned to Monday afternoon next, when further witnesses will be examined.

Inquiry at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Nov. 22.—The first of a series of investigations into the recent disasters on the Great Lakes was opened by Captain H. St. G. Lindsay, wreck commissioner, Ottawa, with Captain Francis Nash, Montreal, and Captain W. G. Batten, Kingston, sitting as nautical assessors.

The investigation conducted here had to do with the stranding of the steamer Turret Chief, five miles east of Copper Harbor on the morning of Nov. 8.

No evidence was given to show that the company owning the vessel had been negligent in the way of equipment, and no evidence of storm signals being ignored. The vessel was shown to be a seaworthy craft, well equipped.

PHONES OVER WIRELESS

German Operator's Message is heard in New Jersey U.S.A.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—The transmission of a wireless telephone communication over a distance of nearly 4,000 miles, from Neustadt-am-Ruebenbergo, in Hanover, to New Jersey, was accomplished on Oct. 27 by a German wireless company, according to Rear-Admiral George August Emsmann in a report yesterday to the German Shipbuilding Society.

The message was sent and received in the middle of the afternoon in spite of the day-time being most unfavorable for wireless communications.

The two stations are over 300 feet high. Earlier attempts had proved that clearly emitted tones were audible, and finally a spoken message was transmitted and distinctly received:.

Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia have taken a great personal interest in the experiments.

Herr Bredow, director of a rival wireless company, at the same meeting described the German wireless telegraphic net. Hundreds of wireless despatches were passing daily, he said, from Nauen to Sayville, Long Island, and to Togoland, West Africa. Connections between Togoland and German Southwest Africa are to be opened next year, and with East Africa in 1915, while communication between Samoa and New Guinea would be established in April next.

In the course of the discussion Herr Bredow said the prophecy made by Admiral Emsmann that wireless telephony would supplant wireless telegraphy would not be borne out, as telegraphy would always possess practical advantages.

Dr. McGillivray, who presided, intimated that the congregation of Knox Church had decided to hand over the property unconditionally and free of debt to the new organization. The new church will be known as St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

Absorbed In Home Affairs.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Interviewed regarding the recent dominions tour, Lord Emmott said: "In Canada we had the impression that Canadians at present are intensely absorbed in a solution of their own internal problems. Canadian interviewers always were wanting me to express opinions on the navy question, but I said it was a matter for Canada alone; we were waiting her decision with perfect confidence in her loyalty. Expressions of loyalty throughout Canada were extremely marked."

Bramwell's Next Move.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—If Bramwell Booth and Ballington Booth, brothers estranged for seventeen years, are to meet in this city, the next move must come from Bramwell leader of the Salvation Army. This was the gist of a statement issued yesterday by Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America. He had not received the letter his brother said he had written him, Ballington explained.

Coal Cars Jumped Switch.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 22.—Two coal cars in the fore part of a heavy freight train jumped a switch in the Merriton yards of the Grand Trunk yesterday and ripped up the track and platform between the rails, but no person was injured. Traffic was interrupted but for a short time.

CHILDS' BUREAU

Women's Institutes to Ask Government to Start One.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—At the close of an address at the meeting of the Women's Institutes of Ontario, yesterday afternoon by Miss E. J. Guest of Ontario, on "The Greatest Movement of the time," it was resolved to petition the Government for the establishment of a child welfare bureau, which would be under the direction of a body of experts, who would be ready to direct and to give information upon all that concerns the interest of the child, Canada's greatest asset. The resolution was carried by the unanimous standing vote of the 700 delegates present, representing the 25,000 members of the Women's Institutes of the province.

In her address Miss Guest stated that the teachers and mothers of Belleville, the city she represented, had got together to study the child. At the end of their deliberations they had found themselves dissatisfied with condition. Toronto was not, in the opinion of the speaker, the child's Eldorado. "Toronto was not planned for the children," was one of her statements, and even its playgrounds would, she thought, scarcely satisfy its needs. The decay of a country does not come from lack of naval armaments.

An address on the duties of the public health officer and on tuberculosis was given by Dr. Amyot. It is the medical officer of health, and not the physician in charge of the patient, whose duty it is to define the length of time a house shall be in quarantine for a contagious diseε

TWO DROWNED

Eleven and Nine-Year-Old Girls Go Through the Ice.

WOLSELEY, Sask., Nov. 22—Myrtle Mackenzie, aged 11, and Dorothy Quinn, aged nine, were drowned when with a group of other children they were skating on the C.P.R. reservoir after school. The ice broke as they skated toward the bridge, and as they sank the screams of the other children brought Mrs. Mackenzie and her eldest daughter, Fannie, both of whom rushed out to where the little girls had gone down. The ice, too weak for the children, broke before the women reached them, and the mother was only rescued when sinking for the third time by Allan Thompson, who jumped in with a rope. Fannie Mackenzie was dragged out by a rope flung to her by men on the bank. The bodies of the children were recovered later.

CANNOT GO ON

Inquiry Into West Shore Railway Comes to Abrupt End

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—To the disappointment of municipal representatives from the shore counties of Lake Huron, where the ill-fated West Shore Railway was launched on its brief disastrous career, the investigation before the Ontario Railway Board yesterday came to an abrupt and inconsequential conclusion. It was impossible to proceed, and the hands of the prosecuting counsel were tied by the lapses of memory of the chief witnesses and the mysterious disappearance of the minute and account books of the company.

Mr. Moyes, the controlling spirit of the railway directorate and the office of the late S. C. Smoke alike deny any knowledge of the whereabouts of these documents and on them practically the whole hope of tracing the big expenditures was based.

Engineer Middlemist of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board swore to the valuation he made of the road at the instance of the municipalities. Allowing for contractors' profit, right-of-way and purchase of material, the present line could be duplicated for $305,000, and it would cost $797,736 to complete the line as it stood at present.

Mr. MacEwan said he had no official position with the Huron Construction Co., although he held a power of attorney from Mr. Moyes to sign railway checks for the payment of wages and materials.

Mr. MacEwan's knowledge of the organization of the Huron Construction Co. was quite vague. Mr. Moyes had altogether the direction of the work, and he never met any of the directors of the concern.

Warm Weather Delays Inquiry.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 22.—Unless the thermometer drops 30 or 40 degrees within the next week the Legislative committee on privileges and elections may be forced to delay for some time its projected inquiry into the Cumberland election before progress can be made. Subpoenas must be served on J. R. Settee, returning officer, and four deputies. These men are buried in distant recesses of the Northland and cannot be reached till river and lake and muskeg are frozen hard and rendered passable for man and dog team.

To Search For Bodies.

SARNIA, Nov. 22.—Capt. Gabb, one of the oldest captains on the lakes and a resident of Goderich, started from Sarnia yesterday to march along the shore of Lake Huron to Goderich in search of bodies from the wrecks. The distance from here to Goderich as the crow flies is sixty miles, and though 75 years old, Captain Gabb will be forced to cover 80 miles before he arrives. He has a contract with the Lake Carriers' Association, by which he will be paid $10 for each body that be locates along the shore.

Brymner was re-elected president of the Royal Canadian Academy and the other officers of the academy were returned. Horatio Walker, N.A., and I. W. Morrice, were elected honorary non-resident R.C.A.'s.

CATHARINES, Nov. 22. — A verdict of accidental death was returned by the jury in the inquest into the death of John Yeagley, who was killed on a Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway trestle at Thorold a week ago. The jury recommended that the company take precautions against the use of the trestle as a footpath by the public.

ARRESTED IN TORONTO

Man Wanted For Murder in Detroit is Found in Moving Picture Show.

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Joseph La Rue, a French-Canadian, sat for a few moments last evening in the office while arrangements were under completion for his removal to the Soo. He is charged with murder and will face in addition the charge of jail-breaking, having decamped suddenly in that manner early in the spring.

La Rue was the subject of a special reward proclamation issued by the Ontario Government months ago. Following his escape the provincial officers were cleverly evaded and the fugitive made his way across the line.

Two Detroit detectives on the lookout for suspicious characters recognized La Rue in a moving picture theatre, where he was posing as a snake-charmer and he was arrested at the close of the performance. Special extradition arrangements were made and Provincial Officer Foster took him in charge.

The charge on which he is held concerns the murder of his wife while living in the Soo region.

Big Seizure of Furs.

LUCKNOW, Ont., Nov. 22.—What proved to be a large haul of furs was executed yesterday by Provincial Deputy Game Warden W. B. Elliott, accompanied by Provincial Constable Phippen, who visited the fur dealers here and secured one hundred and sixty-four pelts on the premises of Harry Goodman, a Hebrew. The goods were at once seized and removed. The hearing will be before R. Graham, J.P., on Thursday next at Lucknow. The furs were out of season.

Negotiations Are Closed and Mr. G. N. Graham Will be the New Proprietor

Negotiations regarding the sale of the National Hotel, which have been pending for some time between the Toronto Trusts and Guarantee Company, and Mr. G. N. Graham of the White House, formerly of the Oriental, were closed last evening.

Twenty of these rooms will be fitted with water and bath. The sample rooms will also be enlarged, and the rotunda altered. The renovations provide for a large grill room and a new kitchen. One of the special features will be an electric elevator, making the National the first hotel in the city to be thus equipped.

A Toronto architect will arrive in the city on Monday in connection with the preparing of the plans for the alterations which will be commenced as soon as possible.

A new arrangement will also be made in regard to the bar.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—The rumor that all was not well with the Stefansson expedition was given its quietus yesterday, when the Naval Department learned that the Belvedere, one of the supply ships, had safely reached winter quarters. RELATIVES OF LATE PRESIDENT ARE DEFENDED BY THE U.S.

Demand For Their Surrender Comes From the Mexican Authorities—Lord Cowdray Replies to His Assailants and Declares That His Only Crime is That He Has Entered Preserves of Oil Trust.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Interest in the Mexican situation was divided here yesterday between the demands of the Mexican authorities for the surrender of Evaristo and Daniel Madero, by the American Consulate at Vera Cruz, and the increasing danger that the vast stores of oil at Tampico and Tuxpam might be destroyed.

News that John Lind had sent the two Maderos and their companions on board the United States battleship Rhode Island, while not officially confirmed, was received here as relieving a tension that might have precipitated further difficulties.

While Mr. Lind was acting on direct instructions from the State Department in co-operation with Consul-General Canada for the protection of the two Maderos in the Consulate and in subsequently sending them aboard the Rhode Island, the Navy Department had left Admiral Fletcher to use his own discretion. The authoritative position occupied by Mr. Lind as the President's representative in Mexico is indicated by the fact that he was able through his personal representation to secure the complete co-operation of the American naval forces without the interposition of the Navy Department.

Late Thursday night the State Department sent instructions to Mr. Lind telling him in substance to follow the same course with the Maderos that resulted some weeks ago in the escape of Gen. Felix Diaz.

The State Department was highly gratified at the successful outcome of its efforts to protect American and other foreign holdings in the neighborhood of Tuxpam and Tampico, on the east coast of Mexico.

When the first trouble threatened, urgent instructions were sent to the American Consular representatives to make plain to the leaders of both the Federal and rebel authorities that the United States would expect foreign lives and property to be protected. Last night this answer was received through Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz from Gen. Aguilar, commanding all the rebel bands operating in the oil section:

"I am governing on a constitutional basis, my attitude being to guarantee the interests of all foreign and domestic oil corporations existing in the territory I occupy, fulfilling in this manner the demands of civilization, and not being governed by caprice or vengeance."

Offended Oil Barons.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Lord Cowdray, who has large oil, railway and other concessions in Mexico, in an interview yesterday said he had learned with great interest from the newspapers that a British warship had been despatched to the Puerto Mexico terminus of the Tehuantepec Railway, which he owns, because while that line is still running the Mexican Government lines which join it have been cut and therefore several hundred thousand employes for whom he is responsible, could only be aided by a warship.

Lord Cowdray expressed the opinion that he had made a great mistake in keeping so long under the charge that he was "a concession monger." He said the last oil concession he had obtained from the Mexican Government was at a time slightly under eight years ago.

The real offence he had committed in Mexico, Lord Cowdray continued, was in daring to invade the territory of the Waters-Pierce Oil Co. Since then, he said, he had been bitterly pursued and had been the victim of a press bureau which misconstrued his operations.

Steamer Passengers Scared.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Passengers on the steamship Ancona, which reached New York yesterday from Naples, had a bad scare on Monday last, when an alcohol heater exploded in a pantry and started a fire which spread rapidly to the saloon passageway and the foyer companionway. Officers and crew seized fire extinguishers and put out the flames after half-an-hour's work. A steward was severely burned.

Fire In Brighton.

BRIGHTON, Ont., Nov. 22.—A disastrous fire occurred here yesterday morning, completely consuming the livery barn, with contents, of A. A. Wade, proprietor of the Hotel Central. PLUNGES INTO LAKE.

C.P.R. Imperial Limited Crashes Into a Boulder on the Track.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 22.—While tearing along the brow of a cliff that overhangs Lake Superior 178 miles east of Fort William at two o'clock yesterday morning the first section of the C.P.R. westbound Imperial Limited, traveling forty-five miles an hour, crashed into a gigantic boulder which had hurtled down onto the track from far up the precipice. The engine was hurled from the steel into the chasm of waters beneath, carrying in its mangled mass to a watery grave Fireman Ernest O'Connor of Schreiber, who leaves a wife and family. The engineer, O'Brien of Schreiber, escaped miraculously, as the train struck, but his warning cry to his [illegible] was too [illegible].

Makers of Bombs Caught.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 22.—A police raid on a suspected house in Calcutta yesterday, led to the arrest of four men and the discovery of a bomb factory. A quantity of correspondence found in the building is believed to give a clue to the inner circle of the anarchistic conspiracy which has resulted in many recent outrages, including the attempt to kill the viceroy with a bomb at Delhi last December.

He's a Good Linguist Anyway.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. — Fluency in seventeen languages would not in the opinion of the immigration authorities, necessarily fit a man to support himself in the United States. Although Lucian Canala, a Roumanian immigrant, proved that he could speak all these, and seven Slavish dialects besides, he was detained at Ellis Island yesterday pending further inquiry.

To Honor Adam Beck.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—All tickets to the city's banquet to Hon. Adam Beck on Tuesday, Nov. 25, have been disposed of, and the event promises to be the largest of its kind ever held in the city, the Liberals uniting with the Conservatives to honor the Hydro Commission chairman.

Report of Special Board Suggests Substitution of Cafes For Bars.

QUEBEC, Nov. 22. In a sixty page report by the license commissioners, Hon. Judges H. G. Carroll, A. G. Cross and Auguste Tessier, who have been investigating hotel conditions and problems throughout the province for several months, the following recommendations are made:

1. The gradual elimination of refreshment rooms, counters and bars and the substitution of cafes, European style where there are tables and chairs.
2. The reduction of the number of hotel licenses at Montreal to 350 and those in Quebec to 50.
3. The reduction of the same number of retail licenses.
4. The separation of the grocery business from that of the retail liquor trade.
5. The opening of all places where liquor is sold in Montreal and Quebec at 7.30 a.m.
6. The trial of the Gothenburg and Bergen systems in all cities of more than 4,000 population. By these systems the attraction of profit is taken away from the individual by contributing all profit on the business to the state and municipalities.
7. The execution of the new law by two license commissioners, one at Montreal and the other at Quebec.
8. The strict maintenance of the new law for a period of at least five years so as to allow of a complete trial.

The report is now before the House for consideration.

Speaking of prohibition, the commissioners declare that the evidence shows that in immense majority of the population of the province are opposed thereto. Experience has convinced them that prohibition would be no more successful in the larger towns here than elsewhere. The commissioners are in favor of the Gothenburg and Bergen systems, which are practiced in several localities in Norway and Sweden.

LAKES DISASTER FUND

Mayor Bradburn is waiting patiently and confidently for contribution to the above fund, of which he is the treasurer for the district. We would direct our readers' attention to the advertisement which has appeared in the Review the last few days appealing for subscriptions. We would also remind them of the Benefit Concert to be held in St. Paul's church on Monday evening. Every citizen should endeavor to be present or send on a contribution to swell the collection. Remember it is for those who are to-day suffering through no fault of their own.

PLEASURES OF READING

All lovers of literature, or those who aspire to that distinction, should study the series of articles on "The Pleasures of Reading," which Mr. Dela Fosse, our city Librarian, is contributing every fortnight to the Review. He has been dealing with the great Biographies, and the article in another column is of especial interest as it draws attention to two of the greatest biographies in the English language, Boswell's Johnson and Lockhart's Scott. No one can say that they know anything of English literature until they have read Boswell or the great Dr. Samuel Johnson. It is in itself a liberal education, as well as a never forgotten pleasure.

SLANDERING CANADA

There seems to be a campaign in Germany and Belgium against emigration to Canada. All kinds of dismal pictures are being painted of the terrible condition endured by immigrants. It is declared that the Canadian Government literature is misleading. It is alleged by a Copenhagen paper that 75 per cent. of the girls who are sent from Europe to Canada are compelled to lead a life of white slavery, and that agents are allied to such a traffic. It is expected that this campaign of slander will greatly reduce the number of settlers next year.

Dr. Heindl describes "the flight from the land" in Canada. He declares that unsuccessful farmers flee to the cities, and gives figures showing a decrease in the rural population of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, and the Yukon.

"Those who expected to find a land of milk and honey," he continues, "find that beef, mutton, poultry, butter and eggs have to be imported from Australia."

All this sounds as if we were in a bad way. We are grateful to Dr. Heindl for his information, we were not aware of our miserable condition. Where to be a Canadian is bliss, 'tis folly to be a Dr. Heindel. There may be a little truth in his words but it is very much enlarged.

AUTHOR OF MOTHER HUBBARD

A secret which will delight every child in the world, and a great many grown-ups as well, is at last revealed.

The author of the famous nursery rhyme "Old Mother Hubbard," is made known. Her name was Sarah Catherine Martin. She was the housekeeper of the vicar of Yealmpton in South Devon, and she wrote her "poem" in the year 1805.

Now it happens that the church at Yealmpton requires repairs both to its body and its tower, and the rector of the parish makes an appeal to the children of the world to send their pennies to him to assist in the re-building of the church, in which lie the remains of the author of the immortal story of how the old woman went to the cupboard to get a bone for her dog and found it bare.

The original of the "ditty" is now in the library of the squire of Yealmpton, and every person who sends a contribution to the fund will get an authorized copy of it.

When one comes to think of it, there is something very wonderful in the fact that a little incident in the domestic life of a very commonplace old woman like Mrs. Hubbard should stand out in the annals of human experience as this one has done. Many an old woman went to a bare cupboard before Mrs. Hubbard did upon this famous occasion, and many have had the same dreary experience since then, and no one has thought it worth while to record the fact.

But of course the peculiarity in the case of Mrs. Hubbard was her extraordinary dog, which could die, laugh, read the newspaper and possibly do many other wonderful things unrecorded in the great epic of the nursery. Many poets have striven for immortality in vain; here is a case of a very ordinary housekeeper who had no thought of posterity, yet has had fame thrust upon her. Like Shakespeare and Homer, her work is "not for an age, but for all time." While babies are born and fathers and fathers and mothers tell their children stories, this tradition of the thrilling adventures of an old lady and her dog will be handed down from generation to generation!

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Arthur Hawkes, in his journal, The Canadian, draws attention to the fact that a Mr. John Hawkes, (presumably a relative) of Saskatchewan has discovered an "ocean of natural gas" under the south half of that Province. The Hawkes family seems to be especially fortunate in this gas business. Arthur must have tapped an exclusive ocean of natural gas somewhere near Toronto, judging from this week's issue of his paper.

Dr. Montizambert is said to have discovered a sure cure for leprosy. If this is true it will dispose of yet another "miracle."

One report states that Huerta is making Napoleonic efforts to establish himself in Mexico, another states that "Huerta's power is slowly waning."

We are glad to hear this. One of our subscribers was away in the country and was much impressed by the sermons of the old clergyman in the quiet little place. They were excellent in style, eloquent, broadminded, and set forth in good English. After a time he discovered that the clergyman had once been a newspaper man. We need say no more.—Kingston Standard.

Thomas Thompson stepped into his home at 422 North John street, Hamilton and spoilt his own funeral. Tennyson's speaks of coming "like a ghost to trouble joy," this was the obverse of this. Never was a ghost more welcome than Thomas Thompson. But the poor, despised, misrepresented corpse; what of that?

How She Got It.

"What's the matter with you this morning, Mary?"

"Oh, ma'am," replied the servant girl, "'tis the terrible earache I have got this morning."

"Oh, you should be careful, Mary. All the keyholes in this house are very drafty."—Weekly Telegraph.

The Easiest Way.

They met on the street and greeted each other with a hearty handshake.

"Hello, Nichols! Been travelling in Europe, I understand. How did you find the hotels?"

"Hired a cab," replied the practical one.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NATIONAL STOCK AND DAIRY SHOW

Recognizing the importance of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, which opens at Toronto on November 17, the railways have granted special excursion rates at low fares for next week. From places where the first class fare is less than $2.50, a return ticket will be issued for single fare plus 25 cents, which will include admission to the show in Toronto. From other places in the province, except the territory west of Azilda on the C.P.R. round trip tickets will be sold for the lowest one way fare plus 50 cents, which also includes admission to the grounds.

Mr. A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the National Live Stock, Horticultural and Dairy Show, reports the largest number of entries received for any similar exhibition ever held over 3.500, with pigeons canaries, bantams, pheasants, guinea fowl, etc., making the feathered flock total 5,300. Horses will be 350; beef cattle and dairy cattle 300, each; sheep and swine 650, while flowers fruit and vegetables will show a development in great advance of former exhibitions.

An important feature is the number of entries that have been received from United States breeders and exhibitors. Car loads of horses live stock and poultry are being sent forward for the opening date. The judges in all classes are men of acknowledged standing and experience. The show is bound to be a great stimulus to breeding and increased production 23

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

"It's a frameup!" Burke roared. He glared at the young man. "Tell your father it ain't true. Why, do you know what she is? She's done time." He paused for an instant, then spoke in a voice that was brutally menacing. "And she'll do it again!"

The young man turned toward his bride. There was disbelief, hope, despair, in his face.

"It's a lie, Mary," he said. "Say it's a lie!" He seized her hand passionately.

"It is the truth," Mary said firmly. "I have served three years in prison."

There was a silence of a minute that was like years.

Dick turned his tortured face to his bride of a day. Then he spoke again more beseechingly.

"Say there's a mistake."

Mary spoke with a simplicity that admitted no denial.

"It's all quite true."

The man who had so loved her, trusted her, stood trembling for a moment, tottered and sank into a chair.

The father looked at Mary with a reproach that was pathetic.

"See," he said, and his heavy voice was for once thin with passion—"see what you've done to my boy!"

"What is that compared to what you have done to me?"

"What have I done to you?" he questioned, uncomprehending.

"Do you remember what I said to you the day you had me sent away?"

"I don't remember you at all."

"Perhaps you remember Mary Turner, who was arrested four years ago for robbing your store, and perhaps you remember that she asked to speak to you before they took her to prison."

The heavy jowled man gave a start.

"Oh, you begin to remember! Yes! There was a girl who swore she was innocent—yes, she swore that she was innocent. And she would have got off only you asked the judge to make an example of her."

"You are that girl?"

"I am that girl."

There was a little interval of silence. Then Mary spoke again remorselessly.

"You took away my good name: you smashed my life; you put me behind the bars. You owe for all that. Well, I've begun to collect."

"Say, there's a mistake."

"And that is why you married my boy?"

"It is." Mary gave the answer coldly, convincingly.

Convincingly, save to one—her husband. Dick suddenly aroused and spoke with the violence of one sure.

"It is not!"

He stood up and went to Mary, and took her two hands in his, very gently, yet very firmly.

"Mary," he said softly, yet with a strength of conviction, "you married me because you love me."

"No," she said gravely, "no, I did not!"

"And you love me now!" he went on insistingly.

"No, no!" Mary's denial came like a cry for escape.

"You love me now!" There was a masterful quality in his declaration, which seemed to ignore her negation.

"I don't," she repeated bitterly.

"Look me in the face and say that."

There was a silence that seemed long, though it was measured in the passing of seconds. At last Mary, who had planned so long for this hour, gathered her forces and spoke valiantly. Her voice was low, but without any weakness of doubt.

"I do not love you."

"Just the same you are my wife, and I'm going to keep you and make you love me.

"She's a crook!" Burke said.

"I don't care what you've been!" Dick exclaimed. "From now on you'll go straight. You'll walk the straightest line a woman ever walked. You'll put all thoughts of vengeance out of your heart because I'll fill it with something bigger—I'm going to make you love me."

Burke spoke again:

"I tell you she's a crook."

Mary moved a little, and then turned her face toward Gilder.

"And, if I am, who made me one? You can't send a girl to prison and have her come out anything else."

Burke swung himself around in a movement of complete disgust.

"She didn't get her time for good behavior."

"And I'm proud of it!" came her instant retort. "Do you know what goes on there behind those stone walls? Do you, Mr. District Attorney, whose business it is to send girls there? Do you know what a girl is expected to do to get time off for good behavior? If you don't, ask the keepers.

"I served every minute of my time—every minute of it, three full, whole years. Do you wonder that I want to get even, that some one has got to pay? Four years ago, you took away my name—and gave me a number. Now, I've given up the number—and I've got your name."

CHAPTER XII.

Aftermath of Tragedy.

The Gilders, both father and son, endured much suffering throughout the night and day that followed the scene in Mary Turner's apartment, when she had made known the accomplishment of her revenge on the older man by her ensnaring of the younger.

Dick had followed the others out of her presence at her command, emphasized by her leaving him alone when he would have pleaded further with her. Since then he had striven to obtain another interview with his bride, but she had refused him. He was denied admission to the apartment. Only the maid answered the ringing of the telephone, and his notes were seemingly unheeded.

Distraught by this violent interjection of torment into a life that hitherto had known no important suffering, Dick Gilder showed what mettle of man lay beneath his debonair appearance. And that mettle was of a kind worth while. He did not for an instant believe that she was guilty of the crime with which she had been originally charged and for which she had served a sentence in prison. For the rest, he could understand in some degree how the venom of the wrong inflicted on her had poisoned her nature through the years, till she had worked out its evil through the scheme of which he was the innocent victim. He cared little for the fact that recently she had devoted herself to devious devices for making money, to ingenious schemes for legal plunder.

So, in the face of this catastrophe, where a less love must have been destroyed utterly, Dick remained loyal. His passionate regard did not falter for a moment. It never even occurred to him that he might cast her off, might yield to his father's prayers, and abandon her.

The father suffered with the son. He was a proud man, intensely gratified over the commanding position to which he had achieved in the commercial world, proud of his business integrity, of his standing in the community as a leader, proud of his social position, proud most of all of the son whom he so loved. Now, this hideous disaster threatened his pride at every turn—worse, it threatened the one person in the world whom he really loved.

He realized that his son loved the woman—nor could he wonder much at that. His keen eyes had perceived Mary Turner's graces of form, her loveliness of face. He had apprehended, too, in some measure at least, the fineness of her mental fiber and the capacities of her heart. Deep within him, denied any outlet, he knew there lurked a curious, subtle sympathy for the girl in her scheme of revenge against himself.

Gilder, in his library this night, was pacing impatiently to and fro, eagerly listening for the sound of his son's return to the house. He was anxious for the coming of Dick, to whom he would make one more appeal. If that should fail—well, he must use the influences at his command to secure the forcible parting of the adventuress from his son.

Finally the son entered the room and went at once to his father, who was standing waiting, facing the door.

"I'm awfully sorry I'm so late, dad," he said simply.

"Where have you been?" the father demanded gravely. But there was great affection in the flash of his gray eyes as he scanned the young man's face, and the touch of the hand that he put on Dick's shoulder was very tender. "With that woman again?"

"No, father, not with her. She won't see me."

"Naturally! She's got all she wanted from you—my name!"

"It's mine, too, you know, sir."

Gilder looked at his son with a strange, new respect.

"Dick," he cried—"boy, you are all I have in the world. You will have to free yourself from this woman somehow. You owe me that much."

"I owe something to her, too, dad."

"What can you owe her? She tricked you into the marriage. Why, legally it's not even that. There's been nothing more than a wedding ceremony. We must get you out of the scrape."

"I'm not sure that I want to get out of it, father."

"You want to stay married to this jail bird!"

"I'm very fond of her."

"Now that you know?"

"Now that I know," Dick said distinctly. "Don't you see, father? Why, she is justified in a way—in her own mind anyhow, I mean. She was innocent when she was sent to prison."

"Don't talk to me about her innocence. There's only one course open to you, my boy. You must give this girl up. If you don't what are you going to do the day your wife is thrown into a patrol wagon and carried to police headquarters, for it's sure to happen? The cleverest of people make mistakes, and some day she'll make one."

Dick threw out his hands in a gesture of supreme denial. But the father went on remorselessly.

"They will stand her up where the detectives will walk past her with masks on their faces. Her picture, of course, is already in the rogues' gallery, but they will take another—yes and the imprints of her fingers and the measurements of her body."

"I owe something to her, too, dad."

The son was writhing under the words. The woman of whom these things were said was the woman whom he loved. Yet every word had in it the piercing, horrible sting of truth.

"That's what they will do to your wife," Gilder went on harshly, "to the woman who bears your name and mine. What are you going to do about it?"

"It will never happen. She will go straight, dad. That I know. You would know it if you only knew her as I do."

Gilder was in despair. What argument could avail him? He cried out sharply in desperation.

"Do you realize what you're doing? Don't go to smash, Dick, just at the beginning of your life. Oh, I beg you boy, stop! Put this girl out of your thoughts and start fresh. You're all I have, my boy."

"Yes, dad," came the answer. "If I could avoid it I wouldn't hurt you for anything in the world. I'm sorry, dad, awfully sorry"— He hesitated, then his voice rang out clearly: "But I must fight this out by myself—fight it out in my own way. And I'm going to do it!"

The butler entered.

"A man to see you, sir," he said.

The master took the card. "Very well," he said, "show him up." His glance met the wondering gaze of his son.

"It's Burke," he explained.

"What on earth can he want—at this time of night?" Dick exclaimed.

"You may as well get used to visits from the police."

A moment later Inspector Burke entered the room.

"She's skipped!" he said triumphantly.

Dick made a step forward. His eyes flashed, and there was anger in his voice as he replied:

"I don't believe it."

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

A BEAUTIFUL BABY

Gained Wonderfully After Being Put On A Well Known Food.

Mrs. B. Warner of 32 Winnifred Ave., Toronto, in writing about Neave's Food, says, "I have used Neave's Food for my baby and it has agreed when everything else failed. He has gained wonderfully since I started giving it to him."

Mr. A. J. Forgue, Lasalle Street, Montreal, writes under date 15 Oct: "My little daughter, born Aug. 15th., likes Neave's Food very much. She is a bunch of fat."

Mrs. J. Fallon of Whitby, Ont., says "Neave's Food is the only food that has agreed with our little boy. He is brighter, and his flesh is firmer, since taking it."

Neave's Food has been the standard Infant's Food in Great Britain for more than 85 years.

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book, "Hints About Baby", by writing Edwin Utley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Agent for Canada. (Mention this paper.)

Neave's Food is sold in 1 lb. air tight tins by all Druggists in Canada. 43

Take Off the Fat Where It Shows

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery, and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of about 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write The Marmola Company, Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

FRUITS OF EXPERIENCE.

When you're absolutely certain
Of a word or a quotation,
Of the spelling, meaning, author,
To avoid shame's bitter cup
(But I'd better draw a curtain
Over that humiliation),
Oh, beware of all cocksureness—
Look it up!

When you're shown a chance of winning
In a speculative flier
At a trifling risk some thousands—
Just a cinch, beyond all doubt—
Oh, reflect that gambling's sinning
And that mortal man's a liar.
Get a grip on your simoleons—
And keep out!

"Friend, be sure you're right," said Crockett,
"And then go ahead," he added.
But here is a wise amendment
That has gladdened many a life:
'Twill be money in your pocket,
That cannot be too well padded,
Be sure you are right and then go
Ask your wife!

Reindeer Recaptured.

The Department of the Interior has received word that nearly all of the reindeer which recently escaped from the Government corral on the Great Slave River in Northern Alberta have been recaptured. No trace has been found as yet, however, of the herd which escaped earlier in the summer. Three captured reindeer will enable the Government to continue the experiment begun last year as to the feasibility of breeding reindeer in the west for domestic purposes, but a longer time will now be required to increase the herd to the desired proportions for determining whether or not the scheme will prove of practical economy and benefit.

British Arrivals Predominate.

Figures issued by the superintendent of immigration to Canada during the first six months, April to September, of the current fiscal year, was 307,267. Of the new arrivals 121,204 were British, 72,880 American, and 113,183 from all other countries. During the same period last year the total number was 273,649, composed of 108,331 British, 89,659 American, and 75,659 from all other countries. The increase is 12 per cent.

And its better soap.

Do you still buy soap by the cake? Have your grocer weigh the different kinds for you, and this is what you will see.

1 Bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ weighs more than 4 cakes of any 5 cent brand and more than 5 cakes of some kinds. That means you can save 5 cents by using N.P. SOAP or 25¢ on every dollar's worth. 3

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

By F. M. Dela Fosse

Opinions may differ as to the five or six greatest biographies in the language, but there can be no question as to the claim of Boswell's Life of Samuel Johnson to first place. As Macaulay said in his celebrated essay, "Eclipse is first and the rest nowhere." So much, however, has been written about Doctor Johnson not only by Boswell but by many of his contemporaries that it is unnecessary to dilate largely on the subject, for there can be very few indeed who are not more or less conversant with the character and career of the best known man in English literature. Johnson was a man of great worth, power and erudition, yet he is not indebted for his fame so much to his wonderful endowments as to the sycophancy and inquisitiveness of a man who was the butt of all his circle and of the world at large. Of Johnson's writings there is presumably very little beyond the Lives of the Poets which will endure, but he will always hold an honored place in literature as the compiler of the dictionary which bears his name and as the leader in that wonderful gathering of the talents that numbered among its choicest spirits Reynolds, Burke, Goldsmith and Garrick. There are not many books that one can read and re-read from cover to cover with the same intense satisfaction and pleasure as Boswell's Life of Johnson, for it not only deals with one of the most interesting periods of English literature and one of the most attractive personalities of that period but it throws us into quite intimate association with many of its brightest and best minds. It would be as well, however, for the reader who would wish to gain a fairly clear insight into the customs of the times to study Macaulay's essay on Croker's edition of the Life in conjunction with the Life itself. It is one of the most brilliant and effective pieces of word-painting in the annals of literature. Croker's edition is in the Library and can be obtained by anyone wishing to follow the trail of Macaulay's vitriolic onslaught on the mistakes of the editor.

LIFE OF SCOTT.

Lockhart's Life of Sir Walter Scott may be looked at from an altogether different standpoint to the former work. Lockhart was Scott's son-in-law and of course intimately acquainted with every phase of his character and career. Yet, with all the advantages thus presented towards the compiling of a complete biography the reader feels that some essential is lacking. Carlyle remarked of Lockhart's work: "Sagacity, decision, candour, diligence, good manners, good sense, these qualities are throughout observable— in a word this composition is the work of a manful, clear-seeing, conclusive man." What, then, is it that like a will-o-the-wisp flashes in and out of the pages of Boswell, eluding capture or classification, yet imparting to it a quality of brilliancy that no other work of this nature comes within miles of equalling. Without aspiring to the position of critic, I think it is to be found in the exhibition of that very candor with which Carlyle credits Lockhart, and which is apparent in so few biographies. For Boswell's candor shines forth on every page, he spares neither himself nor his hero, and fully acts up to his decision imparted long before to Miss Hannah More, when that worthy lady besought him in her pedantic way to "mitigate some of Dr. Johnson's asperities," that he "would not cut off Dr. Johnson's claws nor make a tiger cat to please anybody." And, when all is said and done, of what use is Biography, of what use is History unless we get plain, unvarnished facts for our money? Is not there enough mendacity carved on countless tombstones, hollow unreality, falsehood and chicanery encountered by us every day in the mart or on the street without having the sources from which the Empire from draw largely on its inspiration, clogged with all sorts of impediments in the shape of careless assertions, charitable constructions and misconstructions and downright perversions of the truth. If space allowed, many instances could be given to show in how great a degree History and Biography have suffered in this manner. Lockhart was blamed for having laid bare much that people said should have been suppressed. He was accused of making his hero unheroic, of giving pain in various persons, and also of invading the sanctities of private life. Carlyle did not have much patience with Lockhart's detractors. Listen to him: "How delicate, decent is English biography, bless its mealy mouth! A Damocles' sword of respectability hangs forever over over the poor English Life-writer (as it does over poor English Life in general) and reduces him to the verge of paralysis."

Lockhart's Life of Scott is in the Library, in two editions, and lovers of Scott's works can find much in that life to kindle afresh their admiration of the author as an artist and as a man.

Southey's Life of Nelson, admittedly a literary gem, is reckoned so, really on account of the beauty of its style, rather than for the amount of the information it gives concerning the great admiral. Much of Southey's matter was derived from other authors, notably Clarke and McArthur, from whose work he seems to have filched whole passages. Clark Russell's Life of Nelson, written for the "Heroes of the Nation" series would seem to meet more nearly the needs of the present day reader, although of course in style it is not to be compared with Southey's masterpiece.

Mrs. Gaskell's Life of Charlotte Bronte is a work that is universally admired but it is unrelieved by a single ray of sunshine. Deeply interesting as the account of a writer who can well be classed among the great novelists of the 19th century, it nevertheless is permeated by such an atmosphere of gloom as makes it the reverse of cheerful reading. The heart must be hard indeed that cannot be stirred with pity for a family that seemed beset by the very ban-dogs of adversity. The picture that is set before us of the upbringing of Charlotte and her four sisters and brother is a vivid one. Their father, a widower, was perpetual curate of a small village church situated on the Yorkshire moors.

A MAD CURATE.

He seems to have been a man of peculiar temperament, for we are told that he had Spartan ideas as to indulgence in fresh meats and frowned upon all attempts at wearing gay attire. He was a man also of such ungovernable passion that he would relieve his feelings by firing pistols through the back door, sawing the legs and backs off his chairs or throwing the heartrugs into the fire. Mrs. Gaskell suspects that the children had no books; it is very possible also that they had no playthings. If anything else was needed to add to the gloominess of their lives it was surely to be found in the house that sheltered them, which was a desolate-looking place, surrounded on three sides by tombstones and open on all four to the winds of heaven. One would think there was little enough in such a life to warm the imagination and enable the production of books showing so deep a knowledge of human nature as Charlotte Bronte's books evince. Yet, in the seclusion of Haworth this tender, delicate child thought out life's problems as best she could and depicted its trials and temptations with wonderful accuracy. It was but a proof of the truth of Lovelace's famous lines:

Stone walls do not a prison make,
  Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
  That for an hermitage.

Most of us know the sad story of the Bronte family; of the deaths one by one of the sisters till Charlotte was left; of her marriage and early decease, and of the miserable end of her brother, a victim to drink, who in the last effort to assert his manhood insisted on emulating the example of the Emperor Severus by dying on his feet, which he did, supported by his horror-stricken family. The last words he uttered might act as a text for many a preacher, many a pulpiteer:—"I have done nothing either great or good."

When the fire is running low and a uqick oven is wanted, open the oven door, filling it with cool fresh air. Then close the oven door. It will heat much more quickly.

COOK WITHOUT FIRE

New Zealand Maoris Prepare Their Food In Nature's Kitchens.

The Maoris of northern New Zealand enjoy cooked food to a far greater extent than other natives, but they never bother with fire. They build their huts on the edge of some "friendly" geyser, where they may cook in nature's kitchen. The methods of this primitive people living in so strange a neighborhood are described by Max Herz in "New Zealand."

On a spot which superstition would associate with death and the devil the huts of about 200 Maoris lie scattered—the remnant of the once warlike tribe of Tuhourangi. It is lucky that these simple folk need no kitchen, for nature has built for them the best of all cooking appliances and saved them endless trouble with the stove, gas company or coal merchant.

A pond of boiling water lies in the middle of the settlement. In this the Maori woman puts her water kettle to boil or hangs the wide meshed flax bag filled with potatoes and waits until they are cooked. True, the potatoes cooked in their skins taste a little of sulphur, but that is the right flavor for a Maori palate—the haut gout for the brown gourmet.

For the cooking of meats the fumaroles, or holes through which steam escapes from the ground, are used. A box with a wooden grating for a botton is placed on the ground over the hole. In this the Maori woman places the meat, well-covered with tin or iron pots. An old sugar bag is then spread over the box, and the crude apparatus is left until the imprisoned steam has completely cooked the joint.

A Famous Lampoon.

It is handed down in tradition that the caustic comment "he never says a foolish thing nor ever does a wise one" was written in Whitehall on the chamber door of King Charles II. The wit who created the lampoon seems never to have felt it quite prudent to establish his authorship, but there is excellent reason to accord it to John Wilmot, earl of Rochester. The text of the inscription is:

> Here lies our sovereign lord the king,
> Whose word no man relies on.
> He never says a foolish thing
> Nor ever does a wise one.

A WOMAN'S HELPLESSNESS

Cured Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

Thousands of women suffer from headaches, backaches, dizziness, langour and nervousness. Few realize that their misery all comes from the bad state of their blood. They take one thing for their head, another for their stomach and a third for their nerves. And yet all the while it is simply their blood that is the cause of all the trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure because they actually make new, rich red blood, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body, carrying with it new health and new strength. Mrs. Wm. Acorn, Charlottetown, P.E.I., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was one of the most miserable women living. For more than three years I lived a life of constant dread. I was taking weak spells so that I could not be left alone. If I walked from one room to another my heart would palpitate so violently that I feared I would die. I was continually sending for the doctor, who told me I had no blood and that my nerves were shattered. Notwithstanding his treatment I did not get any better. I could not keep anything on my stomach, and the least thing would make me sick. Then my trouble was complicated with rheumatism, which became so bad that I had to be lifted like a child, and the pain was almost unbearable. I was in this deplorable condition when my husband read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and got me a supply. When I had taken half a dozen boxes I felt better, and could go about the house. I kept on taking the Pills until I had used twelve boxes, and I can truly say they made me a well woman. Indeed, I do not think I would be living now but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I wish I could persuade every woman who is sick to follow my example, for I have proved they will cure the most desperate cases, and I consider myself a living witness of this fact."

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by the Official Scribe

Routine work claimed most of the time at the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council this week. There was a fair attendance of representatives, and they assembled in the smaller hall as being more cosy and confortable for the winter session.

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE TROUBLE

The question was raised anent a member of the I.B.E.W, working at the Opera House whilst the stage employes were being locked-out by Mr. Turner. The explanation from one of the representatives of the aforementioned organization was that the said electrical worker was a member who had allowed his card to lapse, consequently was out of the fold by reason of his nonpayment of dues. A committee had been appointed to look into the case and report. Also in response to queries from union men why the musicians still performed at the Opera House while fellow unionists were outside. The president replied that letters to headquarters had been sent regarding this by himself and the secretary, and answers were awaited. Representatives from the Theatrical Workers also made the meeting interesting in describing encounters with Mr. Turner, who apparently has the sympathy of the local police force.

THE GREAT LAKES DISASTER

Sympathy was freely expressed towards those bereaved by the recent violent gales on the Great Lakes. A committee was appointed by the president, whose duty will be to draft a letter of condolence, which will accompany a donation towards the relief of those from whom the breadwinners have been so ruthlessly taken.

FIRST AID TO THE INJURED

Representative Lyburn put in a vigorous appeal for the support of a local class of the St. John Ambulance Association. He pointed out the necessity of the knowledge of "First Aid" especially by men engaged in hazardous occupations. Great relief can be afforded at the time of an accident by anyone possessing the training, which is always given voluntarily by some kindly medical men, the only expense being a fee of 50 cents for the book and illustrated triangular bandage, also a share of the fee required for examining medical officer prior to the issuance of proficiency certificates. Union men of the city will no doubt respond.

Another Fish Story

There is an Indian horse in the Naas River Country that eats fish and has a preference for oolichans, says a correspondent in Smithers, B.C. Sergeant Pat Phillipson, who is known here as a man who always speaks the truth, vouches for the story.

The horse, it is said, will leave a pan of oats any time to eat oolichans. Moreover, he keeps fat and in fine fettle on the diet.

It is a great sight, says the truthful sergeant, to see this horse cantering along the beach in the oolichan season. He trots briskly, his head held high in the air, his neck proudly arched, his coat glistening and his eyes flashing as he glances about in search of the modest and succulent oolichan.

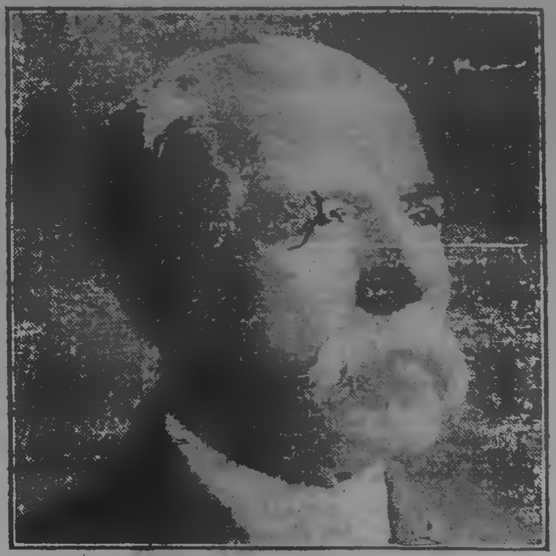
FOUGHT WITH LORD ROBERTS

Veteran of Crimean War and Indian Mutiny Suffered Horribly With Rheumatism, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Welcome Relief.



GEORGE WALKER, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd., 1913

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives." They cured me of both the Constipation and Rheumatism. To-day, my bowels move immediately after breakfast, and in my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation.

You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter and my photo if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives." GEO. WALKER

This letter of Mr. Walker tells how to cure Rheumatism, but does not tell WHY "Fruit-a-tives" cures this trouble. Rheumatism is the result of poisoned blood, due to weakness or faulty action of the bowels, kidneys or skin. In Mr Walker's case, Rheumatism was the result of excessive Constipation. Waste matter remained too long in the system, was absorbed by the blood and inflammed the nerves and membranes in his legs. When he started to take "Fruit-a-tives," these tablets immediately acted on the liver. More bile was given up to move the bowels. As the bowels were cleaned, the poisonous waste matter was removed, the blood became clear and the nerves were no longer irritated. To-day, Mr. Walker is enjoying vigorous health that was his when he fought with Lord Roberts and helped to plant the British Flag firmly in our Over-Seas Possessions. He is as active as a man of forty and cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" too highly. Try them yourself, 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c., at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE STUDY ON

ISRAEL UNDER A NEW LEADER

—November 23—Joshua 1:1-19.— "Be strong and of a good courage." —Verse 9.

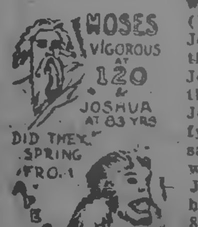
ISRAEL mourned thirty days for their great leader Moses, yet with one accord accepted Joshua as their new leader by Divine appointment through Moses. Like other Bible heroes, Joshua was renowned for his faith and his loyalty to God. At the time of taking Moses' place, he was in his eighty-third year, yet full of vigor and evidently the best qualified man for the place.

The fact that Moses was vigorous at one hundred and twenty years, and Joshua at eighty-three, speaks loudly in confirmation of the Bible teaching that Adam was created perfect; and that the entire race has since shared Adam's penalty, "Dying, thou shalt die." The intelligence of these men, as well as their vigor, quite contradicts the Evolution theory; for Joshua had been a slave in Egypt.

Not for a moment are we to lose sight of the fact that God had adopted the nation of Israel and had entered into a special Covenant with them; and that, therefore, He was their real Leader—Moses, Joshua and others being merely His representatives and mouthpieces. We have already referred to the reasons for God's adoption of Israel, and in a subsequent lesson will consider them more fully.

The New Leader's Name.

Joshua's name was originally Hoshea, signifying salvation. To this was prefixed (Numbers 13:16) Je, an abbreviation of the word Jehovah. Thus the name became Jehoshua, signifying Jehovah's salvation. This was shortened to Joshua and Jeshua (Nehemiah 8:17.) The Greek form of this word in the Septuagint is Jesous—Jesus. Moses and Joshua were men of totally different types. Anyone contrasted with Moses would be disadvantaged, so high did that great statesman tower above the average of humanity then or since. But while Joshua could not be Moses, he was faithful as a follower of Moses, as one who obeyed the Divine Law, and whose faith and influence were helpful to the people. He was just what God wished him to be; and whoever is worthy of such a testimony is truly great.



Evolution theory contradicted.

The Land of Promise.

That Joshua and Israel should take forcible possession of Canaan is called in question by some. They ask, By what right one branch of the human family destroy another and seize their land? Where is the justice of such a course?

There is but one answer to this query; and, rightly seen, it is satisfactory. The Lord declares that the earth is His; that He gave it to the children of men, as represented by Adam. (Psalm 115:16.) But the gift was conditioned upon obedience and loyalty, disobedience, disloyalty, being punishable by death. Adam incurred this penalty; and his children, under the laws of heredity, shared it with him, because "born in sin and shapen in iniquity." Thus all human right in the earth was abrogated by the death sentence upon the sinner.

God purposed in Himself the recovery of Adam and his children from the curse of death—through Messiah's death and by the power of His Messianic Kingdom, not yet established. In preparation for these future blessings God laid hold upon the nation of Israel and blessed them by making a Covenant with them. Although they could not fulfil the terms of the Covenant, nevertheless the Israelites were greatly blessed by their Law Covenant. By it many of them were prepared for co-operation with Messiah in His coming Kingdom. Meantime, Israel's experiences were overruled by the Almighty, to make of them types of the Divine Plan as it will be finally outworked on a higher plane.

False theories of the dark ages.

In carrying out this arrangement with Israel, God gave them Palestine. He explained, nevertheless, that this gift was because of His favor toward them in pursuance of His own great plans, previously outlined to Abraham. He further explained that the Canaanites were not making progress, and that their continuance would be neither for their good nor for the Lord's glory—as it was with the Sodomites, whom God took away as He saw good.—Ezekiel 16:49, 50.

To Sheol—Not to Torment.

The Bible hell, to which the slaughtered Canaanites went, is not the hell of torment pictured in the creeds. Their destruction sent them to Sheol, Hades, the tomb, where "there is neither wisdom nor knowledge nor device." (Ecclesiastes 9:10.) There they sleep with their fathers. There they wait for the glorious resurrection Morning, when Messiah's Kingdom will eventually restore every man in his own order—all that sleep in Hades, Sheol, the tomb. Throughout the Bible we read that the dead were gathered to their fathers.

AUNT BETTY'S PRISONER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by the Associated Literary Press.

When Stephen Ellis was elected sheriff of Ingham county the old jailer, not being of his party, had to go. To everybody's surprise the place was given to Uncle Jerry Stills.

Uncle Jerry was fifty years old, and his wife, who was always called Aunt Betty, was a couple of years younger. They were nice old people. They were liberal with what they had and knew about as much of the wickedness of the world as two children. The sheriff had lived with them for four or five years when he was a homeless orphan, and he owed a debt of gratitude which he wanted to pay. He knew their soft spots, and when they were ready to take possession of the stone jug he said:

"Now, listen to me! This is a jail and not an orphan asylum. No one will be sent here who is innocent or deserves pity. All prisoners are here because they deserve to be. Every last one will lie and play the hypocrite and must be carefully watched. There must be no foolishness with them. Uncle Jerry, you mustn't trust one of them as far as you can sling a bull by the tail.

"And, Aunt Betty, you must harden that kind heart of yours. I know you'd like to adopt every tramp in the state and let him swing in a hammock and have ham and eggs every meal, but it's a different thing here."

The jail was without a prisoner just then. At length a prisoner arrived to be cared for by Uncle Jerry and Aunt Betty. He had been tried for grand larceny and given a sentence of six months. He did not look more than eighteen years old and had a face as innocent as that of a child. He had tears in his eyes when he arrived at the jail.

"What a shame!" exclaimed Aunt Betty after a look at the prisoner.

"He is rather young," replied Uncle Jerry.

Aunt Betty sighed and said nothing more. She didn't know whether or not she'd tell the boy she pitied him. There was something she did do when she passed in the next meal, and she couldn't help herself. She looked sorrowful, and she asked the prisoner if he had a mother. He studied her face for a moment and then answered that he had.

At Aunt Betty's next visit to the cell she carried two extra dishes not provided for by the rates, and when the prisoner had thanked her he timidly asked:

"Good woman, dare I ask you to write to my mother for me?"

"If I write her she'll know you are in jail, and that will hurt her terribly."

"You must tell her, but you must tell her that the whole world has been against me. Nobody is willing to give me a show."

"You poor boy!" she pityingly said.

"They say I stole a watch from a farmhouse, but I never, never did. A tramp who came later took the watch."

"And didn't they get him?"

"No, and because they didn't they arrested me and sent me here. I was a poor boy, you see, and had no one to befriend me."

"What a shame! What a burning shame! Why, the judge and jury ought to be here in your place!"

"I want you to write to mother and tell her so. I don't want her to think I've become a wicked boy."

Uncle Jerry had to go out on business one afternoon and was not expected home until 9 o'clock in the evening. At 6 o'clock Aunt Betty prepared supper and invited the prisoner to sit at table with her. She reasoned that it would uplift and make a man of him. He ate a full meal, speaking words of gratitude between mouthfuls, and then rose up and took her by the throat and banged her head against the wall and took the prison key off its nail and opened the door to liberty. It was cold weather, but he went without hat or coat.

It took Aunt Betty about ten minutes to realize what had happened, and then she ran to the street bareheaded not to shout for help, however. At a venture she turned to the right and ran for her life down the street and out in the country. Half a mile from the jail she caught sight of her "poor innocent boy." So did he of her, and he legged it like a rabbit. Over fences and across fields he led her, but she was a hound on the trail and ran him down at last.

Then, as soon as she could get her breath, Aunt Betty cuffed and walloped and spanked and pulled hair until that young man cried for mercy. On the way back to jail he got a cuff about once in every twenty feet, and when he found himself once more in his cell he was a thankful boy, indeed.

"Is everything all right?" asked Uncle Jerry as he arrived home.

"Yes, all right," was the answer.

"I found out about that boy today. He's a tough one. He has no mother and has been in jail about ten times. He's a slick thief and the biggest liar in the United States. I hope you won't let him bamboozle you with his talk and his tears."

"Jerry Stills, my name is Betty, hain't it?" asked the woman as she drew herself up.

"I've allus s'posed so."

"Did you ever hear of a Betty letting anything that walks on two legs bamboozle her?"

"Can't say I ever did."

"And you never will!"

CANADA'S LATEST ART PURCHASE

Solon H. Borglum's bronze group, entitled, "Pushing-Ahead-Washington, 1753," has been purchased by the Canadian Government from the sculptor. The work is to be presented by the Dominion Government to the Ottawa fine arts museum.

"Pushing Ahead" commemorates the trip which George Washington took in 1753, on orders of Governor Dinwiddie, to forbid the French from occupying land south of the great lakes. It was this journey and route which determined the boundary between English and French possessions, and afterwards between the United States and Canada. Washington was twenty-one years old at the time.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Mushroom Poisoning.

Mushroom poisoning is not an infrequent occurrence where these fungi are partaken of, mistakes being readily made as a result of confusion between fungi which are harmless and good to eat and those which are poisonous. A violent attack of colic accompanied by vomiting and diarrhea, occurring soon after poisonous fungi have been swallowed constitutes marked symptoms of this emergency. Insensibility may supervene, with a slow pulse and stertorous breathing.

The stomach should at once be emptied by means of an emetic. The special antidote for mushroom poisoning consists of twenty drops of the tincture of belladonna given in water after the active symptoms have subsided. A large dose of castor oil should be given in order to clear the bowels. If symptoms of collapse appear and heart failure threatens stimulants may be freely given, while warmth to the extremities and poultices to the stomach should be applied.

Happy Calgary!

The Calgary golfer is blessed beyond the lot of the ordinary Canadian follower of the royal and ancient, inasmuch as he can play his favorite game eleven months in the year, and during the summer, owing to the long twilight, can get in his eighteen holes with comparative ease even after the dinner hour. And these are certainly great advantages, as it is only by "keeping at it" that proficiency with club and ball can be attained, and a long season is certainly a desideratum.

RINK MANAGEMENT WANT TO COLLECT SIXTY PER CENT OF RECEIPTS ON ALL GAMES

Hockey Club Officers Say They Will Not Enter Into Such An Agreement

The report of the committee on rink management was made to the Hockey Club, last night but it was not satisfactory and no progress was made.

As stated before, the rink people want 60 per cent. of the gate proceeds. In other seasons, the division has been 50 and 50.

The officers decided not to enter into any such agreement and matters are at a standstill. It was suggested that the teams might play their home games at Lindsay.
